It is expected that Mr. Bowman will be recovered in time to direct the fifteenth and final episode. These scenes are said to involve many spectacular events on a San Francisco-Los Angeles liner.

Pathe to Issue a Publication

"The Messenger" to Be Published for Exhibitor's Aid by Pathe Each Month

In furtherance of its policy of giving exhibitors assistance in the exploitation of their features, Pathe has just published the Pathe Messenger, which hereafter will appear monthly. In the words of the Messenger itself, "its purpose is to carry to you every month, Mr. Practical Exhibitor, business-building plans and dollar-making ideas in a sincere spirit of constructive service to give you concrete suggestions which have brought success to others; to pass your methods of business prosperity to your fellow-showman; to be a carrier of upbuilding thought; to be a clearinghouse of progressive action; to be a power of cooperation."

The Pathe Messenger is directed by Vic Shapiro, head of the exploitation department of Pathe Exchange, Inc., and is edited by J. Irving Green, whose long experience in the field of motion pictures has been devoted largely to the exploitation of features. The initial issue of the Messenger is published in twelve pages. Unlike most publications of the type, it contains, not the ideas of the publisher, but is composed entirely of business-getting "stunts" which some exhibitor or other found successful in bringing in extra dollars at the box office.

The staff of the Pathe Messenger is composed of every exhibitor who uses Pathe pictures. All are invited to contribute stories of "stunts," new or old, provided they make money for him, so that they might be passed along to help other showmen. The Messenger comes into existence with an assured circulation of 17,000, according to Pathe.

National Board of Review Renders Favorable Report on Dumas Picturization

In a statement from the office of the United Picture Theatres, the report of the National Board of Review on "The Corsican Brothers" is submitted as follows:

"Entertainment value: Excellent. Educational value: Good. Dramatic interest of story: Well sustained. Coherence of narrative: Clear and consistent. Acting: Very good. Photography: Exceptional. Technical handling: Well done. Costuming: Good. Scenic setting: Beautiful. Historical value: An exceptionally fine portrayal of the period. General comment: An unusually well produced drama, entertaining throughout and possessing high artistic merit."

In commenting on the verdict of the National Board of Review, the United Picture Theatres states:

"The report of the National Board of Review bears out the reviews of the trade paper critics who all gave 'The Corsican Brothers' their hearty approval. And in this respect, it is decidedly interesting to note that in addition to the National Board and the trade paper critics, every exhibitor, every layman, in fact every person who has seen 'The Corsican Brothers' unreeled has given it enthusiastic praise. There has not been a single individual who has criticised the feature in any way, shape or manner, but everyone has given it as their opinion that it is one of the finest motion pictures ever filmed. The first public presentation of 'The Corsican Brothers' will be on February 22, when the feature will be presented through the United Picture Exchanges."

Hayakawa a "Mental Actor"

Director Worthington Describes Psychology of Actor at Work in Studio

Grasping at once the high spots of this interview, Mr. Worthington said: "Sessue Hayakawa, whom I have directed for the past year or more at the Haworth Studios, making pictures for Robertson-Cole, is one of the most intense 'mental actors' I have ever seen. So strongly does he go over, that is, so powerfully does he impress the audiences, that he should by all means be a 'heavy' and not a hero.

"For, you see, heroes have everything cut and dried for them by the author. They don't have to fight. But the 'heavy' has to impersonate the adverse conditions which are constantly coming up, and in doing this he has to appear to fight hard. Now Sessue is a fighter. He fights so hard as a hero that the already easy path which the author has cut out for him makes the ease with which he can win almost farcial.

"For a long time nobody understood just what was wrong. He was young, good-looking, active and accomplished, and it seemed like we just had to have him for a hero. Yet it seemed that he was not working at his best. At last he was cast in 'Bonds of Honor,' which I had the good fortune to direct. Now in 'Bonds of Honor' Hayakawa played a double role. He was the good brother, and he was the bad brother as well. Still he was a lead, and we couldn't deny him or the public that. So ever since, very often we've picked out plays for him which allowed this virile, vigorous personality of his to push ahead and do things."

The statement further points out that since the "Bonds of Honor" Hayakawa has been cast in dual roles in each of his later releases, the "Tong Man" and "The Beggar Prince."

Star Discusses "Empty Arms" Production

"In my experience in stage and screen work, I have encountered many unusual types of women," says Gail Kane, who is starred in "Empty Arms," the initial Lester Park-Edward Whiteside production written by Willard King Bradley and directed by Frank Reicher.

"The theme of my latest vehicle recalls to my mind some of the remarkable fears which have been expressed by women. 'Empty Arms,' as you know, is a story of maternity, and depicts the fears of women of refinement for, what seems to them, the destructive monster of childbirth. Of course, the actress and the woman in any public walk of life has a certain excuse for fearing the ordeal of maternity, because it deprives her of her means of livelihood. I have known some dancers and other stage folk who have prayed each day that they might be spared. On the other hand, you know how such brilliant women of the stage as Sarah Bernhardt, Ethel Barrymore, Schumann-Heink and Alma Gluck have given up seasons of important engagements that they might be permitted to enjoy the privileges of maternity.

"From my own observations I believe the average girl's trouble is based upon ignorance, which, I think, is really the reason for so many women losing the desire for motherhood. Particularly is ignorance manifest in the average American family, which abhors the discussion of anything which would tend to enlighten a maturing girl, whose mind is in a veritable state of chaos. She learns nothing only from investigation and books, more often the wrong ones. She is tormented by her ignorance and her inability to understand, because of the secrecy and hypocrisy with which this all-important question is handled from her childhood. Mothers should teach in a beautiful way the true story of sex at the earliest time that it can be understood; then the ugly way, through which the immature mind of a girl is often brought to an understanding, would be banished forever."

Demand for Bartola Product Taxes Plant

Dan Barton of the Bartola Musical trument Company, was in Chicago week on company business and ex- essed the view that never before in history of the moving picture in- stry had exhibitors taken such in- est in giving their patrons high- music in connection with their tures. Mr. Barton stated that, not ly were the houses in course of ection putting in fine organs, but that any of the old huoses were purchas- g instruments superior to those which had been using.

According to Mr. Barton, the new rton Pipe Organ is in strong de- and and the orders for Bartolas con- ue to come in in such quantities as tax the capacity of the plant. Since first of the year installation of rtolas has been completed at the fol- wing theatres: Stuart Theatre, ausau, Wis., Cummings & Maxcy, wners, a new theatre costing $200,000; rontenac Theatre, Detroit, Mich., John Odell, owner; Martha Washington heatre, Ypsilanti, Mich., Mrs. S. Fox Makes Important Purchase

Acquires Rights to 67 Stories by Richard Harding Davis

WILLIAM FOX, president of Fox Film Corporation, has just announced that he has purchased the screen rights for sixty-seven stories by Richard Harding Davis, the greatest of modern American fiction writers. This is stated to be the biggest literary deal in the history of motion pictures. Never before has a motion picture company arranged to produce the works of one writer on so large a scale, says the Fox statement.

In announcing that he had secured the rights to everything worth while written by Richard Harding Davis, Mr. Fox pointed out that he believes these stories have a peculiar screen value. The characters so tremendously portrayed by Mr. Davis are especially adapted to motion pictures, he said, and will be of as much interest in foreign countries as in the United States. What pleased Mr. Fox most, however, was that in closing this unprecedented deal, he had a great American writer as the central figure of the productions. Thus in the years to come followers of motion pictures will look back on Richard Harding Davis, American novelist, as the first great writer whose works were taken in bulk for picturization.

"It is just what Davis would have ardently wished were he alive to-day," was the enthusiastic comment of one of his friends who figured in the deal. "The essence of his works was vivid pen picturization. Modern writers say they now go to the pictures in order to visualize their characters. But Davis was a writer who visualized his characters so that they stand out in his works almost as if they were being shown on the screen. To transfer his stories to motion pictures will be a wonderfully simple operation, because his writings were the essence of simplicity—just as good motion pictures are the essence of simplicity."

Since the first English novel was written by Fielding, no author has enjoyed greater popularity among people of his own time in every walk of life than Richard Harding Davis. Thackeray was a writer for the so-called "upper classes." Dickens dealt with the poor and the rich with equal truth, but his characters are those of a past generation. Dickens knew only England, Italy and the United States. Davis was a literary man of the world. He wrote of the people in South America, Africa or Zanzibar as truthfully and entertainingly as he did of those of the United States, because he had travelled all over the world. He wrote forcefully of war because he was always in the front line during the fighting; he wrote sympathetically of love because he was a man who studied and understood women. Bound from Volo to Athens in a hospital ship during the Turco-Grecian war, he wrote of the Red Cross nurses on board: "I made love to all of them, and asked three to marry me!"

But Davis wrote in his most entertaining style of New York City. Here he found love, passion, enchantment. His stories of New York have been translated into Spanish, French and other languages and are as popular in Paris and Madrid as they are in the American metropolis or in London.

"Davis was the best reporter ever seen," said Gouverneur Morris, "the most daring war correspondent, a playwright, yet with all this—perhaps because of all this—he was the great American novelist of our time. It was his great love of adventure, his courage, his daring, that took him to many strange lands and helped him to leave behind him thrilling romance."

In summing up the Richard Harding Davis deal, William Fox said: "The Richard Harding Davis pictures will make a new era in world literature—an era in which the motion picture public will see all of the mighty characters created by a mighty story-teller. It was with the idea of creating something new and tremendous to public thought and imagination as well as entertainment that the rights for the Davis pictures were obtained."

Foremost among the Davis classics which are to be produced by Fox Film Corporation are "Gallegher," a newspaper story; "Real Soldiers of Fortune," the Van Bibber stories, and "The Lion and the Unicorn."

Searchlight Display Will Usher in Premier of "The Forbidden Woman"

THE impetus given the new Equity Pictures Corporation by the advent of Clara Kimball Young in "Eyes of Youth" was further strengthened yesterday when Director General Edward J. Bowes, of the Capitol theatre, booked the second Clara Kimball Young film, "The Forbidden Woman," for first run at the Capitol.

"The Forbidden Woman" was screened from the original story of the same name by Lenore J. Coffee, and was produced under the personal supervision of Harry Garson, with Arthur Edeson and John W. Voshell at the camera and on the technical side.

In the cast are Conway Tearle, Milla Davenport and Kathryn Adams. The story, while of an entirely different type from "Eyes of Youth," is along more romantic lines and is of the style of picture in which Miss Young made her greatest hits.

For four weeks Equity has been carrying on a blind campaign in the New York daily papers, stating that the color of the sky on February 21 would denote at which house a certain film would be shown. This campaign will terminate on Saturday night next with blazes of green color thrown on the heavens by means of ten huge army searchlights which have been secured, and which will be placed at ten different spots throughout Greater New York.

A series of "talking ads" in the newspapers will be conducted before the opening, and a number of direct house-to-house ideas will be launched to aid the Capitol keep its five thousand seats filled each day. On the same date, throughout the country, forty-one prints will be working at forty-one first-run houses, and even the business done by "Eyes of Youth" is expected to be exceeded, says Equity.

NewDwan Production Ready

"The Luck of the Irish" Will Be Available for Exhibitors During February

"THE LUCK OF THE IRISH," an Allan Dwan production, will be available to exhibitors in February. Realart Pictures Corporation, which will distribute the picture, does not fix release dates; but the probability is, according to General Sales Manager J. C. Ragland, that prints will be obtainable in all the branch offices about February 23.

The title of this picture is stated in Realart publicity to be based on the fact that the hero is an Irishman who has the proverbial "luck of the Irish" in a love affair. Much of this "luck" is explained to be due to the hero's energetic use of his good right arm, the story being a battle of wits and fists for the love of a New York school teacher. The contenders accompany the girl on a trip around the world.

The author of the story is Harold MacGrath, and the theme is said to be typical of his novels. Mr. MacGrath has established a reputation with the public for writing stories abounding in adventure, excitement and thrills. In the case of "The Luck of the Irish" he has provided material for color and spectacular drama.

"The production is to be released as a proved box-office success," according to the Realart statement. "It had a pre-release showing of one week at Sid Grauman's theatre in Los Angeles. The exhibitor's verdist is given in a telegram to Realart, as follows: 'The exhibitor that books "Luck of the Irish" con congratulate himself as soon as the ink is dry on the contract, Sid Grauman.'"

Mary Pickford to Go Abroad

The Star in Response to Invitations Will Tour the World in Near Future

AFTER nearly ten years of continuous appearance before the camera, during which time she has appeared in nearly one hundred successes, Mary Pickford, foremost of all motion picture stars, will make a complete tour of the world, during which time she will produce two or three plays for the screen using th locale of the different countries she visits for the exterior settings. Despite no end of urgent requests from hundreds of sources abroad for Miss Pickford to be the guest of honor of royalty, societies, organizations and the like, she has consistently been compelled to extend her regrets because of her work. The trip will start on the completion of her second "Big Four" production, work upon which will be started shortly.

A new photograph of Mary Pickford by Campbell Studios, New York

Her popularity abroad is just as supreme as in this country, and only recently she had the written request from the school children of Australia to visit their country, the invitation having been personally signed by over thirty thousand Australian girls and boys, neatly bound in a single volume. Similar messages have come so often that some weeks ago Miss Pickford decided to tour the world.

"I'm going to have the time of my life," Miss Pickford said, when asked about the proposed trip, "for it will be the first opportunity I will have to realize this life-long ambition. I will take my mother and a number of important heads of my producing organization with me on the trip, and we will not let any opportunities pass to make pictures as we travel through the different countries."

Kane Corporation Endorsed

Tom Moore of Washington Says the New Company Possesses His Entire Confidence

TOM MOORE, owner of the Rialto, the Garden, and the Strand theatres in Washington, has written a letter to the recently-organized Arthur S. Kane Corporation, expressing his good will and confidence in the part which the young producing company will play in the industry, it is stated.

Not only does the Washington exhibitor declare his faith in the new company, but he makes clear his attitude toward the future production of the Kane organization by saying "There can be no chance of dispute between the Kane Corporation and me over anything you may have to offer, for you have my full confidence."

Mr. Kane and officials of the young company are gratified by the response which has met the appearance of Kane pictures in the industry. Expressions of good will and friendliness are said to be coming in from all sources.

1919 AND 1920

Comparisons, when based on stable ground, are interesting.

In 1919 Motion Picture News carried 657 1-2 pages of paid advertising more than its nearest competitor (exclusive of advertising in the Studio Directory).

This is a lead of a little more than 12 1-2 pages a week over any other trade journal in the field.

In the first seven issues of 1920, Motion Picture News carried 134 1-4 more pages of advertising than its nearest competitor.

This is an average of about 19 1-4 pages each week.

In other words, the News in the new year has so far increased its already big lead over other trade journals more than 50%.

THE NEWS COVERS THE FIELD

Barriscale Picture Scoring

Robertson-Cole Reports "The Luck of Geraldine Laird" to Be Going Strong

BACKED up by the best criticisms of the leading film critics and aided by the publicity received by the numerous newspapers running the story in serial form, "The Luck of Geraldine Laird," the latest Robertson-Cole release starring Bessie Barriscale, bids fair to be one of the best box-office attractions of the popular star, according to a report from the Robertson-Cole offices.

Both Miss Barriscale and the author agreed that it was without doubt one of the best pictures ever turned out by the B. B. Features Company for Robertson-Cole release. That their judgment was of the best is proved by the manner in which first-run houses took to the picture and the success with which it has met in the leading film houses in the United States.

Niles Welch, who was seen with Miss Barriscale in her recent picture, "Beckoning Roads," again is on the screen opposite her. There are other capable actors in the supporting cast, such as William Mong, Boyd Irwin, Dorcas Matthews, Nannine Wright, Mary Jane Irving and Theo-Alice Carpenter.

This is the third one of Miss Norris' stories in which Bessie Barriscale recently has been seen on the screen, the others previously being "The Heart of Rachael" and "Josselyn's Wife," Edward Sloman, director of ability, wielded the megaphone.

Robert Anderson to Direct

Universal Player Who Has Played Big Parts in Past Signs for Long Term

ROBERT ANDERSON, the Universal player who achieved unusual success with his character portrayals in "Hearts of the World," "The Heart of Humanity," and "Common Property," and who played the leading male role in "Ambition," Universal's forthcoming production in which Dorothy Phillips is starred under direction of Allen Holubar, has just signed a long-term contract to direct pictures for Universal.

Upon completion of the "Ambition" film Anderson sailed for Denmark to visit his parents and look over the foreign moving picture field. He brought back with him many new ideas which he will utilize when he begins making pictures, it is stated.

"Anderson entered the moving picture game," says Universal, "because he was unable to speak good English at the time, and being exceptionally able to express himself by actions he thought his work would be successful. That it has been is evidenced by the signing of the contract.

Anderson was born in Odenoe, Denmark. He came to America in 1910 and entered motion pictures in 1913. He appeared in many Griffith's productions, and also assisted Griffith with make-ups and in the technical direction of "Intolerance." He believes that films should have fewer titles, and intends to have his pictures depend more on the human interest in them to carry them over. Eventually he hopes to produce a picture with no sub-titles.

Herbert Kaufman Weekly Given First Showing

The first showing of the Herbert Kaufman Weekly, which Lewis J. Selznick is filming and distributing through Select Pictures, was held at the home office, 729 Seventh avenue, on Thursday of this week. The general verdict was that not only is the Kaufman Weekly a novelty, but it has an entertaining value, as well as teaching a strong moral lesson.

The weekly is made up of pictorial matter illustrating the editorials of Mr. Kaufman, which were formerly printed by a newspaper syndicate. The first of the editorials is a modern version of "Little Red Riding Hood," which is its title, and it tells the story of a young girl who was lost through her ignorance.

Pathe News Reel Shows Party Possibilities

Interest in the coming presidential race has been aroused everywhere with the recent showing of the timely subject "Presidential Possibilities," in Pathe News No. 7. The screen magazine presents the different candidates of both parties and has tried to be absolutely impartial by presenting an equal number of candidates on both sides.

Willat Perfecting Detail

The New Organization Under Irvin Willat Getting Under Way Quickly

OUT in Los Angeles Irvin Willat has begun assembling the technical organization with which he is to produce his own big pictures from big novels for distribution through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. All of the arrangements with W. W. Hodkinson for the inauguration of Mr. Willat as a producer under his own name were made in New York by Arthur Butler Graham, Mr. Willat's attorney, and this new production unit is but the first of several that will be launched under the Hodkinson auspices during the spring months.

Every resource required will be provided by the Hodkinson organization to supplement the fine personal qualifications of Mr. Willat and this new producer from the start will have all of the facilities that older established producers have taken years to attain.

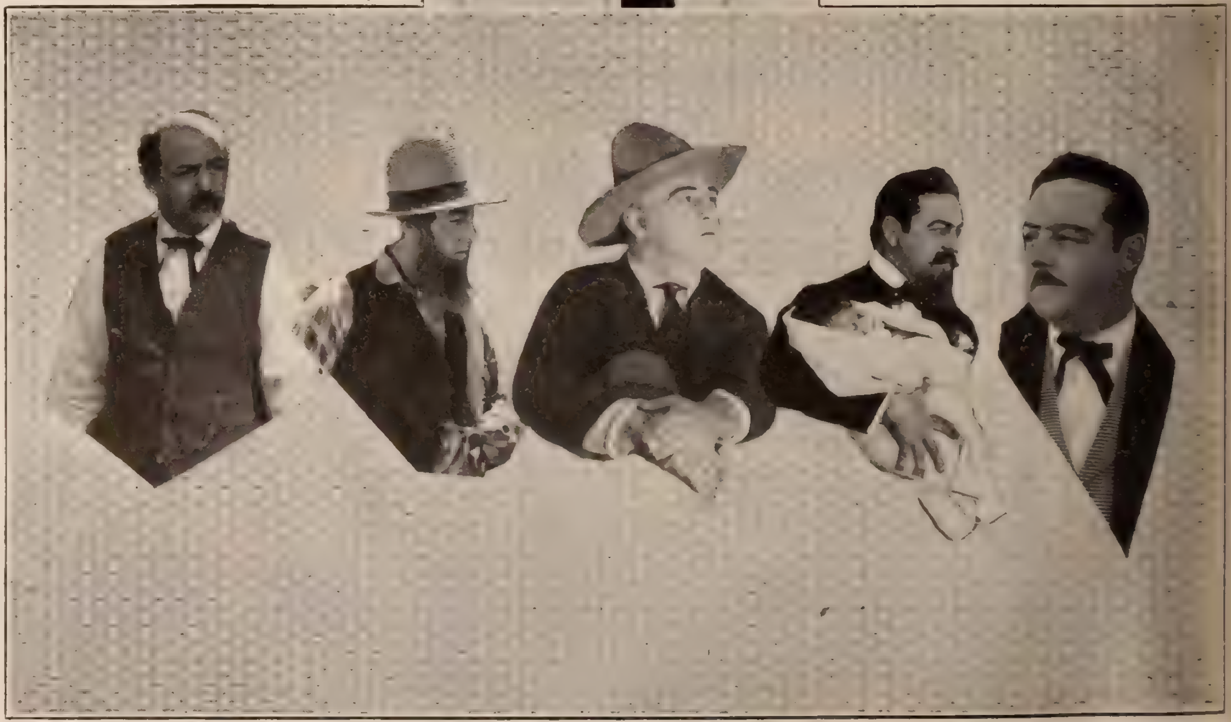
Mr. Willat will avoid laying any stress upon quantity production. In fact, his plan calls for the making of only four productions a year. This means that he will have all the time necessary for the production of pictures with great care. He will take more time prior to beginning camer work than most producers take in th making of a complete picture unde prevailing studio conditions, being abl to smooth out every phase of produc tion in advance. His way will be mad surer for him, it is said, through th selection of only big novels of worl repute and his casts will be either sta or all-star as the story requirement make necessary. The Hodkinson or ganization expects the first Willat pro duction to be ready for April or Ma release. Announcement of the story cast and technical staff is to be mad shortly.

New Salesmen Engage for United Forces

It has been necessary, says Unite Picture Theatres, to appoint new sales men in many of the territories in orde that new business could be properl cared for. Additional salesmen recently added to United's forces are Kin Perty, Detroit; J. J. O'Leary, Dallas M. M. Stern, San Francisco; and San Farber, New Haven; while Jo Vergeslifh, formerly assistant manager for Realart, is now with Jack Levy, manager of United's New Yor Exchange.

Industrial Picture in Big Celebration

The educational department of Universal announces that "The Gift o Heaven," an industrial picture, mad by Harry Levey of the Universal educational department and showing th various stages through which coffe passes from the plantation to the consumer, will be an important featur of the National Coffee Roaster's Association's celebration of "Coffe Week," beginning March 29th.



Would you ever suspect it was Harvey Clark (at the left) in the guise of "Easter Monday" in "Eve in Exile?" or, next to him, old "Long John," the patriarch in "The Valley of Tomorrow"? You might suspect the Deputy Sheriff in "Six Feet Four" was his first cousin. But the sleek French doctor in "The Honey Bee" bears no resemblance, and one would scarcely dare to say that "Horton," the tricky butler in "The Dangerous Talent," looks like the open, smiling countenance of Harvey Clark—the "Flying A" make-up wizard

Edmund Lowe Opposite Olive Tell

Edmund Lowe, popular leading man for many Broadway successes, has been selected by B. A. Rolfe to play opposite Olive Tell in her second production for the Jans Pictures, "Nothing a Year," which is an adaptation of the novel of the same name by Charles Belmont Davis.

Mr. Lowe has just recently finished playing the role opposite Norma Talmadge in one of her new productions as yet unnamed. Mr. Lowe is now dividing his time between regular nightly and matinee performances of the role opposite Lenore Ulric in "The Son Daughter" and also playing opposite Miss Tell in "Nothing a Year," which is in the process of making at the Fort Lee Peerless Studios.

It is felt by the producers that in selecting Mr. Lowe to fill this important part it would be difficult to find one so well suited, because of his adaptability to screening and the perfectness as a type.

William P. S. Earle on Selznick Staff

William P. S. Earle, whose production of "The Lone Wolf's Daughter" at the Capitol theatre last week caused much favorable comment, has just signed a long term contract with Myron Selznick, president of the Select Picture Corporation, whereby Mr. Earle will direct and personally supervise a number of big productions during the year.

For more than five years he was connected with Vitagraph, directing Alice Joyce, Harry Morey, Earle Williams and other stars in some of their most successful productions.

Prizma Release Depicts "The Coolie"

Realizing the great possibilities of China, Prizma has made its latest release under the title of "The Coolie," which Republic will distribute. "The Coolie" is said to be an intimate picture of the Chinese laborers engaged in their daily work along the water front or in the streets.

Love-Letter Contest a Success

"One of the Best Tie-Ups" for Picture, Is Statement

THE love-letter contest conducted by Robertson-Cole in connection with "The Beloved Cheater," starring Lew Cody, is made the subject of a statement issued by the Robertson-Cole Company. "The popularity with which fans and leading exhibitors in all parts of the country have taken to 'The beloved Cheater,'" announces the statement, "is best exemplified by the thousands of persons who have entered into the love-letter contests fostered by Robertson-Cole for Lew Cody's Gasnier production.

"During the past two months more than 15,000 missives from all sections of the country have been received by Mr. Cody, and it is predicted that before the contest closes on March 3, more than half a million letters will be offered for prize money.

"Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, one of the best known authors of the day, whose articles are read by more than three million readers of the leading daily papers; James R. Quirk, famous moving picture writer and Editor of Photoplay Magazine; and Mr. Cody will judge the merit of the contestant's offerings.

"First prize for the best love-letter written to Mr. Cody will net the winner $150.00; second prize is $100.00; third prize $75.00; fourth prize $50.00; and the next five answers will each receive $25.00 each.

"The love-letter contest has proven one of the best tie-ups in exploiting this great picture which has been successfully booked in the United States. Many of the first run houses played up this missive prize stunt in exploiting "The Beloved Cheater" and in several places, more than five hundred letters were received by the theatre and forwarded to the New York office.

James R. Quirk, editor of Photoplay Magazine

"In addition to the love-letter contests, 'The Beloved Cheater' was given a big boost by a concentrated national advertising and publicity campaign in addition to the twenty-four page campaign booklet in three colors.

"'The Beloved Cheater' earned one hundred per cent drawing power in every theatre in which it was booked and to prove its box office value, Robertson-Cole officials point to their books showing returns of the Cody special in almost every first run house in the United States.

"'Lexicon of Love' as seen by Mr. Cody and distributed in book form illustrated with Vanity Fair style of drawings has been a decided hit. Many managers purchased these booklets by the thousands and gave one to every lady who visited his theatre the week before the booking of "The Beloved Cheater." So popular was these booklets that a second edition was made possible.

"'That Beloved Cheater Of Mine,' the song hit of the day, written by Edna Williams and Wolf Gilbert from the theme of 'The Beloved Cheater,' has been another big aid to put this picture over in real dollars and cents style for big exhibitors. E. Z. Nutting, sales manager of the great chain of Woolworth Five and Ten Cent Stores, made good his promise to have every store operated under the Woolworth banner use window displays of the song and lobby displays from the picture that made new history for filmland."

Midgets Feature of New Comedy

Sunshine Special Just Completed Is Called Comedy Landmark

THE part that the Singer Midgets are to play in the forthcoming Sunshine special has induced the Fox Film Corporation to issue a lengthy statement on the troupe of diminutive actors. The statement follows:

"The advent of the Singer Midgets as a feature of the Sunshine special just completed at the west coast studios of Fox Film Corporation is a landmark in comedy production. The midgets are by far the most remarkable aggregation of small people that ever stepped before an audience. The rapid-fire comedy of the troupe of little folk runs through the whole production. What they lack in size they make up in side-splitting fun. They are loved as a refreshing entertainment novelty.

"They came to America to fill a season's engagement at the New York Hippodrome. Their tremendous popularity here led to an extended engagement at Hammerstein's Victoria theatre, where they again proved their phenomenal drawing power. The entire troupe was engaged for the Fox Sunshine Special, nineteen in all. With them Mr. Fox also engaged the group of animals that goes with the Midget show, and the equipment carried by the Singer company on its vaudeville circuits.

"It took Leo Singer nearly three years of persistent search in both hemispheres to perfect the organization of his troupe. Extreme discrimination had to be applied to making selections. Not only did he need exceptionally small men and women, but he needed midgets of a calibre that could be developed into polished comedians. In both directions he succeeded, as the work of his company all over the world has demonstrated.

"Of the nineteen Midgets, the tallest is 46 inches and weighs 65 pounds. This is Peter Bieneck. The others range downward to 35 inches, the height of Julius Daranyi. Only one of the company, Stephen Mikosh, has passed the age of thirty. Fritz Tarabula is the youngest, being 18. He is 37 inches in height and weighs 39 pounds. In weight the members range from 33 to 65 pounds.

"The train of diminutive animals used in the Singer Midget performances includes four elephants, sixteen ponies, a tiny monkey, a deer with fawn, eight hounds and six puppies, three English sheep dogs, three Dogenburg goats and kid, and a midget lion. The Midgets are remarkable because of their pronounced intelligence, their varied and highly developed accomplishments and their finesse as actors. The only freak characteristic about them is their pygmy size. In other ways they are polished actors.

Mr. Singer gave his close personal co-operation to the director of the mammoth Sunshine comedy, Hampton Del Ruth. A title is to be picked from the thousands of suggestions pouring in as a result of the $250 prize offered to exhibitors by Mr. Fox."

This cut is of Pearl White, now a Fox star, Harry Hillard, her director, and others of the Fox staff who were snapped in the new Fox studios

Vitagraph Releases Ready

Five Features, Each with Different Star, to Be Released in Few Weeks

VITAGRAPH now has five features ready for release, each with a different star. These are Earle Williams in "The Fortune Hunter"; Alice Joyce in "The Sporting Duchess"; Corinne Griffith in "Deadline at Eleven," and Harry Morey in "The Flaming Clue." They will be released in that order within the next few weeks.

"The Fortune Hunter" is a screen version of the famous comedy by Winchell Smith in which John Barrymore kept Broadway laughing for more than two years. Later it toured the country and was equally successful. Jean Paige was Mr. Williams' leading lady and Tom Terriss directed the picture.

"The Sporting Duchess," with Alice Joyce as the beautiful but unfortunate Duchess of Desborough, is one of Vitagraph's most ambitious efforts. It has a strong story, beautiful scenery, gorgeous interior sets and is full of thrills.

"Deadline at Eleven" is a newspaper play by Ruth Byers, a newspaper woman. It affords Corrine Griffith what is for her a new type of character—a newspaper reporter, a real reporter who goes into the slums and police courts. There is just enough of "society" in the play to allow Miss Griffith to wear some beautiful gowns and a stunning riding habit. George Fawcett directed the picture.

"The Flaming Clue" is a detective story with Harry Morey as the hero detective. It was written by Frederic Van Rensselaer Dey, who created another famous detective when he wrote the original Nick Carter story under the title of "Nick Carter, Detective." Edwin Hollywood directed the picture.

One of the most absorbing tales of the day according to Vitagraph is Harry Morey's new picture, "The Flaming Clue"

Release of New Keenan Film

February 29 Is Set as Date for Issue of "Smoldering Embers"; Has Good Cast

"SMOLDERING EMBERS," next in line of Frank Keenan's releases through Pathe, will be issued on February 29th. Coming after "Brothers Divided," acknowledged as one of the finest screen efforts of the celebrated character actor, "Smoldering Embers" will have to be an exceptionally strong drawing card to equal the record being made by its predecessor. Yet Pathe looks for the latest Keenan drama to surpass even "Brothers Divided" in point of popularity.

Mr. Keenan surrounded himself with a competent supporting cast, prominent in which is Jay Belasco. Others playing with him are Kate Van Buren, Hardie Kirkland, Lucille Ward, Frances Raymond, Thomas Guise, Burwick Hamrick, Russ Powell and Graham Pettie. All these players are well known, and their work is consistent with the commendable acting of Mr. Keenan himself in the role of John Conroy, "the man who comes out of the dim past" and then disappears.

Mr. Keenan's record since organizing his own production company has been one of success. Some of his pictures have been bigger box office attractions than others, but all have been big money getters for exhibitors. During the last year he has made such noteworthy features as "The World Aflame," "Brothers Divided," "The False Code," "Gates of Brass" and "The Master Man," and each has been received warmly by exhibitors and their patrons.

Air Picture Wins at Trials

Universal Reports That "The Great Air Robbery" Gives Satisfaction at Tests

"THE GREAT AIR ROBBERY," the Universal-Jewel production starring Lieut. Ormer Locklear, the aviator, will be released in New York very shortly. This feature picture has been booked for an indefinite run at the Broadway theatre, and will open there on February 23.

"The Great Air Robbery" has been released in several cities in various sections of the country to try it out. Wherever it has been shown the results have been very gratifying, says Universal. "The picture has proved that the public think as much of it as Universal officials do, and as a result the Universal exploitation department is now consummating the extensive publicity plans arranged in co-operation with the Curtiss Airplane and Motor Corporation and the various aero clubs about the country," continues the Universal statement.

"New York is to be treated to a new line of exploitation work, and the exhibitor given many original publicity stunts to work on when the picture opens there."

The records hung up by the first showings in various localities are reflected in the following telegrams received at the New York office: From Herman Stern, of the Columbia theatre, Pittsburgh, came: "'Great Air Robbery' standing room only from nine o'clock this morning."

From Minneapolis came the following wire, as quoted by Universal: "You nor I realize possibilities 'Great Air Robbery.' Initial opening in Northwest to-day at Unique theatre smashed all records."

"Craig Kennedy" on Screen

Arthur B. Reeve Has Signed Contract with Goldwyn to Produce for Screen

ARTHUR B. REEVE, creator of "Craig Kennedy," has signed a contract with Goldwyn Pictures Corporation to produce feature photoplays based upon, or adapted from the Craig Kennedy stories. According to the terms of the contract there will be four productions during the year beginning April 1, 1920, Goldwyn being the sole distributor. They will be known as Craig Kennedy Pictures.

"In securing the screen version of Mr. Reeve's renowned detective stories," says a report from the Goldwyn offices, "Goldwyn has acquired one of the strongest drawing cards in the entire field of fiction. No author, either in this country or abroad, has, in recent years, created a character of such world-renown as Craig Kennedy, who started his career in 1910 in the Cosmopolitan Magazine where his adventures were followed by millions of readers.

"In superintending the production of his stories, Mr. Reeve will profit by considerable practical experience in the making of photoplays in which he has been actively interested for the past six years. As far back as 1914-15 he collaborated with Charles W. Goddard on "The Exploits of Elaine," one of the early and highly successful motion picture serials.

"The arrangement with Goldwyn is such that Mr. Reeve will be afforded every facility for the production of notable features. The scientific element that did so much towards making the stories convincing in printed form, will be preserved in the films, to be acted by a company of superior players. Plans are now maturing for work on the first of the pictures."

Julian Eltinge on Screen Again

"The Adventuress" Will Show Star in Male and Female Role

JULIAN ELTINGE is to return to the motion picture screen. This news came in an announcement this week from the offices of Republic Distributing Corporation. "The production he appears in will be distributed by Republic, and record breaking bookings are expected because of the fact that exhibitors and public are anxious to again see the escapades of the well known female impersonator on the screen," says Republic.

"It is a well known fact," said Briton N. Busch, president of Republic, this week, "that exhibitors profited greatly through Mr. Eltinge's former productions, which were widely distributed and popular. The public liked Mr. Eltinge, and flocked to see him. He has been away just long enough now that motion-picture fans will more than welcome his return. We expect a great revival in interest in pictures of the type made so well known by Mr. Eltinge, with the return of the famed actor to the screen in a picture which Republic will distribute."

The deal whereby Julian Eltinge returns to screendom was made, the announcement says, by Republic Distributing with Fred J. Balshofer, of Hollywood, Cal., who came to New York to close the final arrangements. At the same time the title of the feature was announced as "An Adventuress." Mr. Eltinge in this subject will have the opportunity to be not only himself as a man but will also put his female impersonations to good use. "An Adventuress" is a Fred J. Balshofer production, which statement to exhibitors is expected to carry much weight.

The initial announcement of "An Adventuress" from the office of Republic carries the information that this Balshofer production is "a gowny-girly-figureful diversion from the pens of Charles Taylor and Tom J. Geraghty. It was directed by Fred J. Balshofer and was photographed by Tony Gaudio.

The cast of players, in addition to Julian Eltinge in the star role, includes Fred Kovert, William Clifford, Leo White, Virginia Rappe, R. di Valentina, Stanton Beck and Charles Millsfield. Although the synopsis of the story has not yet been announced, it is said to be interwoven with love, romance, adventure and intrigue.

Katterjohn Wrote Script of Stewart Vehicle

According to advices from the Louis B. Mayer studios, Monte M. Katterjohn has written the screen version of Harold MacGrath's "The Yellow Typhoon," which is now in course of production with Anita Stewart as the star. The picture, directed by Edward Jose for Anita Stewart Productions, Inc., will be released as a Louis B. Mayer-First National attraction. Two of Katterjohn's previous scripts were: "The Flame of the Yukon" with Dorothy Dalton and "The Clodhopper" with Charles Ray.

Power's Projector Mgr. on National Tour

S. S. Cassard, sales manager of the Nicholas Power Company, who left New York some weeks ago for the Coast in the interests of his firm, reports that the Power's projection machine is making good in the picture field throughout the country. The primary purpose of Mr. Cassard's trip was to visit the various dealers and distributors, handling the Power's projector.

Universal Plans Active Program

Three New Features Are Started Within the Past Few Days

WHEN President Carl Laemmle visited the Universal Studios a few weeks ago, he and General Manager Tarkington Baker mapped out a program of activity which will keep the studios humming for months to come.

Three new features have been started within the past few days. One is "Luck," directed by Lynn Reynolds, and starring Harry Carey; another is "The Girl in No. 29," directed by Jack Ford, and the third is "The Daring Duchess," starring Edith Roberts.

"Luck" is a story of the Canadian and American west, by John Frederick, opening on Harry Carey in an unfamiliar role. He appears as a young acolyte, who is about to assume an ecclesiastical career when he receives word that his father, a wealthy rancher, has been shot by an assassin. Rushing to the beside of his dying father, he reaches him just in time to receive his last blessing and to make a solemn promise that he will avenge his death. Thus begins a series of the most startling situations, leading him into the great open and plunging him into adventures which combine thrills and romance. In Mr. Carey's company are Kathleen O'Connor, Robert McKim, Charles Le Moyne, Beatrice Burnham, J. Farrell MacDonald, Will Ryne, Fred Gamble, Robert McKenzie, Joe Harris and Captain Anderson.

"The Girl in No. 29" is an adaptation by Philip Hurn of Elizabeth Jordon's popular novel bearing the same title. It may be described as a melodramatic comedy dealing with a wealthy playwright, who is content to quit work after writing one successful drama. In order to interest him in continuing his literary career his friends arrange a chain of melodramatic incidents of which the young man becomes the central figure. The torrent of developments finally gets beyond the control of its creators, and a tragedy almost results from their well-meant plans. In the end, naturally, everything turns out happily. A good cast has been engaged to support Mr. Mayo, including Claire Anderson, Elinor Fair, Harry Hilliard, Ray Ripley, Bull Montana and Robert Bolder.

"The Daring Duchess" is a comedy-drama which affords Edith Roberts opportunity to do, in a new way, those things she did so well in "Lasca" and "The Triflers," besides permitting her to show other phases of her fascinating personality. It tells the story of a girl born and raised on a Western ranch in America, who learns that by the death of a relative in England she has fallen heir to a fortune and a title. Packing her humble effects, principally a saddle which she had won as a prize in a riding exhibition, she journeys across the sea, only to find an array of clever people determined to cheat her out of her inheritance. The little American wins out in the end, after meeting with adventures both humorous and exciting. In Miss Roberts' support are Harold Miller, Rudolph Christians, Stanhope Wheatcroft, Katherine Kirkham, Ogden Crane, Hugh Saxton, Leota Lorraine and Leonard Clapham.

Four Goldwyn Pictures on B'way Programs

Four of Goldwyn's new productions are the featured attractions at leading Broadway theatres during the current week and that of February 15. At the Strand, Madge Kennedy is appearing in "The Blooming Angel," a sparkling comedy by Wallace Irwin. And at the Broadway theatre, Pauline Frederick was the stellar drawing card in "The Loves of Letty," taken from the play by Arthur Wing Pinero.

Admirers of Miss Frederick will have another opportunity to see her in a strongly emotional role during the week of February 15 when "The Paliser Case," by Edgar Saltus will head the bill at the Capitol theatre. During the same period, Jack Pickford, in his first picture as a Goldwyn star, "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," by John Fox, Jr., will be found at the Strand.

"Torchy" Stories Will Be Put On Screen

"Torchy," the popular hero of the stories written by Sewell Ford, is to appear on the screen. Mr. Ford's "Torchy" stories have been published in book form and have also run in the Sunday magazine sections of various newspapers throughout the United States and Canada during the last ten years. Johnny Hines, comedy star, formerly associated with the World Film Pictures, is to play the "red-headed" office-boy in the forthcoming "Torchy" series. The production of the comedy series will be handled by Master Films, Inc., under the supervision of Kenneth Spear. Distribution plans are to be announced shortly.

New Fischer Release Is "Another Chance"

A new release from the Fischer studios is Chas. A. Logue's six-reel feature, "Another Chance." This makes the seventy-fifth original scenario written by Mr. Logue, but it is the first that he both wrote and directed. In the cast of "Another Chance" are Gordon and Herbert Standing, Joe King, G. H. Carlyle, Eddie Sturgis, Diana Allen, Dorothea Fischer, Tatjana Irrah and others.

Contracts Plentiful on "Live Sparks"

The volume of contract business pouring in to the Hodkinson home office on "Live Sparks," J. Warren Kerrigan's newest release, is represented as further evidence that the star is riding a high wave of popularity and bears out the statement of Robert Brunton when the first print was shipped East from Los Angeles that "Live Sparks" is unquestionably the finest J. Warren Kerrigan production made under Brunton auspices. Though but three weeks have passed since the date of its release, many of the big first run theatres in the country have enjoyed highly profitable engagements on the star's latest vehicle, it is stated.

"Old Lady 31" Is Being Cut and Titled

Emma Dunn has completed her work before the camera in "Old Lady 31," the Screen Classics, Inc., picturization of Rachel Crothers's stage success, at the Metro Studios in Hollywood. The picture is now undergoing titling and cutting. "Old Lady 31" will be a late February or early March release.

Others in the cast are: Lawrence Underwood, Graham Pettie, Clara Knott, Carrie Clark Ward, Sadie Gordon, Martha Mattox, May Wells and Ruby Lafayette. John E. Ince directed the production.

Douglas Fairbanks Enjoys Short "Rest"

After the strenuous times he spent making the final scenes for "When the Clouds Roll By," "Doug" decided to take a vacation. A vacation to Doug would mean hard work to the average person, for it was fifteen hours on a ranch that he spent for a week, the only diversion was that of having his picture taken and talking with friends about his next United Artist release.

"A Sleepless Night" Is Changed in Title

Due to conflicting titles, the National Film Corporation of America announces that the name of the newest Neal Burns Capitol comedy is "A Fly in the Ointment."

Marguerita Fisher had a visit from the "bird men" during the filming of her latest "Flying A" picture, "The Dangerous Talent"

"Eve in Exile" Gets Wide Bookings

Among the recent bookings which have been received by the "Flying A" sales department at Chicago, for "Eve in Exile," are the Colonial theatre in Detroit, a seven-days' run; The American at Colorado Springs, three days' run; Marcy theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., two days; Knickerbocker theatre at Cleveland, Ohio, three days; Liberty theatre, New Orleans, six days; Hippodrome at Toledo, seven days; the Majestic at Appleton, Wisconsin; the Rex at Racine; and the Thalia, States, Vista, Avon and Parkway at Chicago; and Rivoli at Columbia, S. C.

Van Loan Sells Scenario to Maurice Tourneur

Announcement is made of the sale of a scenario by H. H. Van Loan to Maurice Tourneur. The name of the story is "The Great Redeemer." It is described as a Western tale, different from anything that Maurice Tourneur has done before. Production work will be commenced within a few weeks, while announcement of the cast may be made within a few days.

Truex Comedy Praised by Strand Manager

Amedee J. Van Beuren who presents Ernest Truex in two-reel comedies received the following statement from Jack Eaton, managing director of the Strand Theatre, New York City, which featured "The Night of the Dub," the week of January 25, 1920.

"In sharing honors with Constance Talmadge on our all comedy program this week, "The Night of the Dub" was very enthuiastically received yesterday afternoon and last evening at capacity houses. It is a relief to secure pictures that have a real idea back of them."

Timely Interest in Production

"Who's Your Servant?" Treats Theme of Current Appeal

IN "Who's Your Servant?" the production by Julian Johnson, founded on the play that startled New York when acted by Holbrook Blinn at the Princess Theatre, Robertson-Cole announce that they have a film which has been backed by some of the biggest men in police circles in the United States.

"In addition to the endorsement of high police officials, newspaper men, whose heads have turned gray solving murder tangles, have seen 'Who's Your Servant?' and declare it to be one of the most realistic, fascinating melodramatic photodramas of the times," claims the Robertson-Cole Co., which have recently issued the following statement on this production.

"Who's Your Servant?" will shortly be released as a Robertson-Cole special and is heralded as a picture that has the greatest exploitation possibilities of any released in a year. Questions which deal directly into the homes and that society must face and conquer as depicted in 'Who's Your Servant?' will undoubtedly flood every house that plays the sensational film production. Leading exhibitors who have seen the picture at once realized its unique advertising angles and openly declare that every police official in every section of the country will be glad to preview the release and give opinions which will be freely used to help the theatres.

Robertson-Cole have a new star in Ray Gallagher, who is to appear in Supreme comedies

"Police of New York and other large American cities are straining every nerve to solve the mystery of the great wave of servant crime which is sweeping the country. Says a high New York police official: "So far as we are able to make out, conditions in Russia, and their discussion in this country are more to blame than any unrest on the part of ex-soldiers. One of the most daring bank robberies in this city in recent years was blamed upon soldiers, until we arrested the culprit, who had never been to war.

"But we find everywhere a feeling of growing bitterness against the man of property, on the part of those who are beneath him. This can be nothing but a bit of the social sore which has made Russia a shambles of misery and blood.

"Something is in the heart of the servant which we hardly can fathom. But we know that he is bitterly bewailing his lot, and that he understands less than ever why his master should be rich, and he should be poor. Consider such a case as this: The butler who is dismissed after thirty years of faithful service sends his former mistress a bomb, hoping to kill her. This man is 53 years old. He came from Germany at the age of 23, working for one man for fifteen years, made such a fine record that the man left him $5,000, and created a trust fund of $5,000 for him.

"That man is now in prison, and we are puzzling over his case, and that of many others. What causes the apparently sane, normal, faithful, dependable servant to become a dishonest plotting, unreliable, treacherous one? We do not know. We are trying our best to solve the riddle and to protect the public."

The Cohns to Expand Production

Three Units Organized for Comedies and Short Subjects

JACK and HARRY COHN, producers of Hall Room Boys Comedies, have announced a material expansion in production activities With Harry in general supervision of all activities and on the ground in Los Angeles, the Cohns have organized three separate producing units, for the production of comedies and other types of short subjects. As in the past, the feature releases will be Hall Room Boys Comedies, in which Neely Edwards, "the boy with the winning smile," has made a name for himself.

In the future, however, this series will be produced in the Cohn's own studio, with Harry Cohn personally directing their production. With the expiration of their contract with the National Film Corporation of America, which has been producing the Hall Room Series since their creation by the Cohns, the brothers announce that they will produce as well as distribute them independently of any other production organization.

The reason for this move has been the great success of the series themselves. In speaking of this, Jack Cohn, in charge of the New York office, said:

"The Hall Room Series, although still young when compared with other brands in the film field, has proved such a great success that we have determined to release all other interests except our own from responsibility in their production. We do this at great expense and trouble, since it means that we must own and operate our own studio, and equip it so that the greatest possible efficiency will be maintained.

"Hall Room Comedies will be one of the best bets in the field for exhibitors when our plans are completed. We have taken over a large studio in Hollywood, and Harry Cohn will stay on the ground until things are so well under way that there is no longer need of his presence there. We will announce the personnel of the three producing units within a few days."

According to word from Harry Cohn, Henry Bergman, formerly of the well-known vaudeville team, Clark and Bergman, has been appointed director general of production. Al Nathan, formerly manager of the Broadway theatre, New York, has been made studio manager. The Cohns have said the Hall Room Series during the coming year will be built around the best stories it is possible to obtain, with comedy situations and episodes absolutely original in conception featuring.

Doubles Length of Runs on Lloyd Comedies

The drawing power of the new series of two reel $100,000 Harold Lloyd comedies, distributed by Pathe, has been more than proved in New York City, judging by the number of exhibitors who have doubled or tripled the number of days they originally booked on the multiple reelers, Pathe announces.

In the confined territory of the Union Square District alone, virtually every theatre is playing the Lloyds. In the same territory the Sunshine, Clinton, and New Law theatres, have doubled their time on the Lloyds, beginning with "Captain Kidd's Kids."

Selznick to Have News Reel

"Selznick News" Will Be Issued Semi-Weekly and Will Be Wide in Its Scope

ONE of the announcements of the week is contained in the statement that Selznick Enterprises is to enter the news-reel market with a semi-weekly release. This announcement comes from Lewis J. Selznick, president of Selznick Enterprises, who has been in personal touch with the arrangements being carried on to establish this news service. It will be known as the "Selznick News" and will be released through the Select exchanges.

According to the arrangements now completed, special photographers have been stationed in every important city in the world, and a plan is being worked out which will enable the producer to present pictures of important events in about one-half the time which now elapses between happenings in far-away points and their reproduction on the screen, says the Selznick statement.

It is planned, according to Mr. Selznick, to station photographers in a number of points not now covered by screen news photographers. This will enable "Selznick News" to have a greater variety of news subjects. In no case will "magazine" features be resorted to as is the case in many of the present issues of news reels, continues the report.

"We will divide the world into zones," Mr. Selznick said, "and events in the first zone, which will include events within a certain radius from New York, will be flashed upon the screens in New York and the territory of that zone on the same day. We are going to endeavor to beat every other news reel from twelve to twenty-four fours."

Neilan to Hold Conference

James Grainger, Eastern Representative, Goes West for a Consultation

JAMES R. GRAINGER, eastern representative for Marshall Neilan Productions, left New York on the Twentieth Century last week for the California headquarters of the company to consult with Mr. Neilan on new plans effecting future releases of this concern. Mr. Grainger would not disclose details but promised "big things" in connection with the forthcoming Neilan productions.

Before leaving, Mr. Grainger expressed great enthusiasm over the manner in which bookings are coming in on "the River's End," Mr. Neilan's initial independent production following the formation of his own producing organization. "The story by James Oliver Curwood," said Mr. Grainger, "is receiving one of the greatest advertising campaigns ever accorded a book. This publicity backed by the exceptional merits of the novel, which is the biggest seller by 50,000 copies, of all the Curwood works, has created a wide demand for the picture.

"A point that clearly indicates the confidence exhibitors throughout the country have in Mr. Neilan, is brought out by the fact that months before even the title of our initial production was announced, contracts for the first Neilan offering were signed by hundreds of exhibitors who were anxious to book this film regardless of its nature. Since the title has been made public, I have been receiving hundreds of inquiries a day regarding bookings and it is most gratifying to note this demand for our product.

"'The River's End' is now receiving its final treatment and the first run showings should be before the public the latter part of this month. Our second production is now nearing completion and when the title is announced we expect even a greater demand for this offering than on 'The River's End.'"

Metro Studios will be Enlarged

Hollywood Plant to Be Equipped with Big Enclosed Stage

FIRST steps toward the enlargement of the Metro Studios in Hollywood and the general expansion of Metro facilities, following the visit to the Pacific Coast plant by Marcus Loew and Richard A. Rowland were taken when work was commenced on the construction of an inclosed stage to cost $45,000.

Word of this undertaking that reached the Metro home offices in the Longacre Building brought with it the announcement that Mr. Rowland, Metro's president, has also authorized the early erection of additional executive offices costing many thousands more, to house increased forces in every department of the Western production plant.

The Metro chief executive sends word that the new stage will be 90 by 150 feet, with 20-foot wings on each side, and will duplicate in dimensions the largest of the present structures on the ten-acre lot. There are two of these. These stages, roofed over and skylighted, are used in the taking of interior scenes by artificial illumination.

In conversation with newspaper reporters in Los Angeles, Mr. Loew amplified the statements he made after his inspection of the Metro plant.

"I went into motion pictures for self-protection," said the head of Loew's, Inc. "Metro needed theatre affiliation and Loew's, Inc., needed Metro, so that the union of our interests is mutually beneficial.

Milton Sills has been selected by Viola Dana as her leading man in the Metro picturization of "Eliza Comes to Stay," the comedy by H. V. Esmond. Mr. Sills appears to be well satisfied.

"You understand Metro still retains its identity. Metro pictures will show in Loew houses. That is all that the affiliation means to the public.

"But it means to me that, through my friend Mr. Rowland, I will have a share in developing a powerful organization. I will leave the executive work to him."

Mr. Rowland amplified Mr. Loew's statement by announcing the large expansion work to be gotten under way at once at the Metro Studios. "The new inclosed stage will provide room for four or five more companies if needed," he said, "and we are going to put up additional buildings to accommodate the greatly increased executive, directorial and clerical forces required by an enlarged producing organization. Huge as the Metro plant now is, it will be made greater and greater."

Immediate steps for studios expansion to permit additional producing units had been detailed in daily conferences between Metro executive officers and Mr. Loew. Six companies, headed by Bert Lytell, May Allison, Viola Dana, Emma Dunn, Alice Lake, and a Screen Classics, Inc., all-star cast, are now working at the studio. The additional companies are not announced.

Production expansion will not be confined to the West, Mr. Rowland stated, M. P. Staulcup, studio supervisor of art interiors, has left the Coast for New York to prepare Metro's Sixty-first street studios for productions.

Marriage De Mille's Theme Again

Will Have Made Picture-Trilogy on Modern Married Life

"WHY CHANGE YOUR WIFE?" the forthcoming Cecil B. De Mille production to be released by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as a Paramount Artcraft special, is described by those who have seen it "as being a companion picture to Mr. De Mille's other successful domestic dramas, 'Don't Change Your Husband' and 'For Better, For Worse,' and embodies the spectacular effects and the wealth of detail which characterized those two productions."

In "Why Change Your Wife?" which is expected to be released in the near future, Mr. De Mille, it is said, takes up another angle of the domestic problems which he handled in "Don't Change Your Husband" and "For Better, For Worse." The three pictures, however, are declared to be in no way related to one another, except in the fact that they treat of modern married life.

This grouping of productions, it is stated by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation officials, is something new in motion pictures, although the group of works has long been known in literature. Just as Balzac in his "Comedie Humaine" and Ibsen in his social dramas wrote a series of works built around the same general theme, so Cecil B. De Mille has produced a group of motion pictures developing various phases of married life of today.

In "For Better, For Worse," which might be called the first of his trilogy, Mr. De Mille outlined the problem confronting a young girl in the choice of two lovers—two different kinds of men. In "Don't Change Your Husband" Mr. De Mille took up the question of wives tiring of their husbands and neglecting them "for handsomer men."

Just the opposite side of the divorce question is the director's theme in "Why Change Your Wife." In this picture the director shows how a husband, blinded to his wife's true worth by the monotony of existence, can neglect her and become enamoured of a beautiful divorcee, only to realize his mistake after he has come to an open break with his wife.

"Persons who have seen 'Why Change Your Wife?' declare it surpasses 'Don't Change Your Husband' and 'For Better, For Worse' in intensity of action and spectacular effects. Its appeal to women—in fact, to all married people—it is pointed out, makes this picture an unusually strong box-office attraction for the exhibitor," announces Famous Players.

The story, which was written by William De Mille, is enacted by a good cast, headed by Thomas Meighan, Gloria Swanson and Bebe Daniels, who form the triangle of husband, wife and "the other woman." Others in the cast are Theodore Kosloff, the dancer, who makes his debut on the screen in this picture, Clarence Geldart, Sylvia Ashton, Maym Kalso, Lucien Littlefield, Edna Mae Cooper and Jane Wolff.

Views and Stunts Mark "Silent Avenger"

Railroad scenes in the beautiful mountain country of California have been occupying the attention of William Duncan for his new $1,000,000 Vitagraph super serial, "The Silent Avenger," during the past week. He expects to multiply the thrills of his "Smashing Barriers" serial recently completed. A daring plunge off a cliff to the top of a fast moving automobile was one of the thrillers just made in the Santa Monica mountains near Los Angeles, it is stated.

Republic's Bookings Heavy

Three Features Are Reported as Getting Big Demand Throughout Country

IT is stated that bookings are climbing steadily on all pictures being distributed by Republic Distributing Corporation. Among the subjects which are announced as scoring throughout the country are "The Blue Pearl," "The Amazing Woman" and "12.10." The last named is declared to be doing more wonderful business than was expected of it—and it was put out by Republic with the expectation of doing an unusual amount of box-office drawing.

The Chicago branch of Republic reported this week that the Marie Doro-Herbert Brenon production is booking heavily in the Windy City territory. Among the Chicago theatres using it in January, in addition to the bookings already secured, are the Beach, DeLuxe, Elantee, Grayland, Jackson Park, Langley, New Irving, Virginia and Petes. Chicago houses which have already played "12.10" have reported gratifying business.

In Washington "12.10" is scheduled to be presented at the Knickerbocker, Apollo, Avenue Grand, Savoy and York theatres during February and the first part of March. All of these houses are in the Crandall circuit. New contracts are also reported from the Boston, Dallas, Kansas City, New York, Seattle, Cleveland and St. Louis branches.

"The Blue Pearl" and "The Amazing Woman," in addition to extensive bookings already announced, have been routed over the Proctor Circuit as well as into some of the William Fox theatres. William Fox's Fourteenth Street theatre is to present "The Amazing Woman" for three days successively in February. Marcus Loew's Eighty-sixth Street theatre has booked it for a February showing.

"The Strongest" Is Screene

Press Showing Given on February 5; Plans Being Made for Shipment Abroad

THE William Fox Film Corporation held a press showing of the picturization of Clemenceau's Story, "The Strongest," on February 5th in the projection-room of the new Fox building in West 55th Street. Regarding the trade screening, the Fox report says:

"The production of 'The Strongest' at once impressed all who saw it as distinctive and absolutely without fault as regards the detail of its French settings."

The Fox statement also describes some of the arrangements made for the distribution of the feature. It announces: "Arrangements have been made for shipment of a quantity of prints of "The Strongest" to France, England, Russia, Germany and other continental countries whose vital interest in the theme of the story finds its germs in the conditions resulti from the recent world war. Alrea the Fox representatives in these cou tries have reported the widest intere ever felt among the trade and the i ternational publicity which has be given this film has awakened exhil tors in districts where the big spec type of screen entertainments nev has been shown.

"The Strongest is the fourth of t big Fox specials for the 1919-19 season, the others being Evangeli Checkers and Should a Husband F give? And although these super-sp tacles have established many n house records throughout the count it is expected at the Fox offices th these new records in run and recei will be smashed at many big theat with the showing of the Clemence film."

Dempsey Favorably Receive

Showing of the Initial Episodes of "Daredevil Jack" Gives Satisfaction

THE serial sales department of Pathe Exchange, Inc., is authority for the statement that reports from the various branches indicate that "Daredevil Jack," with Jack Dempsey, which will be released February 15th, will smash previous booking records for serials.

It is said the unsolicited bookings for first runs of "Daredevil Jack" are so great as to be a revelation even to the exchangemen, while the number of houses where serials were never shown before contracting for this latest Pathe offering reaches a high figure, it is stated.

The claim is made by those who have seen the first episodes of "Daredevil Jack" that the new star appears to marked advantage on the screen. He was put through a course of instruction under Robert Brunto supervision in screen acting before went before the camera. Repo circulated regarding his acting cre the producer with a display of w dom and have evidently prevent Dempsey from the mistake, made so many who have been starred pictures, because of their prominen in activities far removed from t stage, and whose efforts disappoint everybody when they attempted to roles in screen or stage productio Word emanating from the Brunt studio has had the effect of raisi great promise for the serial from standpoint of production.

The cast supporting Dempsey headed by Josie Sedgwick. R Langston has another important fe nine role,

Some of the "Daredevil Jack" cast, including the star, Jack Dempsey, forsakin melodrama for "comedy without the music." It is said that as a singer Jack is first class prize fighter

Metro Starts on First Jack London Picture

The scenario for "Burning Daylight," first of the four Jack London novels that Metro will produce on the screen for C. E. Shurtleff, Inc., has been completed by A. S. Le Vino, and production starts this week at the Metro studios in Hollywood with Mitchell Lewis starring.

C. E. Shurtleff, who controls picture rights to the unfilmed works of the late novelist; Edward Sloman, who has been engaged to direct the productions, and Mr. Le Vino held a conference at the Hollywood Hotel and discussed the filming of the initial Jack London picture.

Two Additions to Ince Forces Reported

Miss R. Carol Kapleau is the latest addition to the Thomas H. Ince scenario department. Miss Kapleau comes to the Ince Studios after a year of similar work with a large company in New York.

Dorothy Faith Webster, well known writer of feature stories for the leading motion picture magazines and journals, has cast her lot with the Publicity Department of the Thomas H. Ince Studios, it is announced this week by Director of Publicity Hunt Stromberg.

As a member of the Thomas H. Ince publicity headquarters in Culver City, California, Miss Webster will concentrate mainly toward the provision of original stories designed for the fan readers of motion picture magazines and newspapers. She will also act as one of the associate editors of "The Silversheet."

Next Beban Production An Immigrant Tale

The new George Beban production, "One Man in a Million," tells the story of an Italian immigrant striving for success amid the strange surroundings of his new home in America. The exploitation and distribution of the picture will be handled by the Sol Lesser organization. Besides Mr. Beban in the cast are Helen Jerome Eddy, Irene Rich, Lloyd Whitlock, Jennie Lee and little "Bob White" Beban.

Goldwyn Reviews Acquisitions

Stage Successes, Popular Books and Tales Are on the List

GOLDWYN Pictures Corporation has gone to many sources for dramatic and comedy material to turn into photoplays during the coming months. Popular books, plays that have been numbered among the big stage successes, and original stories—all contribute to the remarkable list of productions.

In commenting on its recent acquisitions in the way of books, stage plays and original stories, Goldwyn has issued the following statement:

"From the viewpoint of the exhibitor looking for feature pictures of an extraordinary drawing power because of the fame the original plays gained on the stage, it would be difficult to make a stronger selection than Hall Caine's 'The Christian'; 'Milestones,' the remarkable study of changing generations by Edward Knoblock and Arnold Bennett; 'Bunty Pulls the Strings,' conceded to be the most penetrating and sympathetic study of Scotch character ever staged, and 'The Tailor-Made · Man,' the Cohan & Harris comedy that was played for several seasons without exhausting its popularity. These four renowned stage successes are placed among the All Star Pictures, along with 'Black Pawl,' by Ben Ames Williams and 'The Branding Iron,' by Katherine Newlin Burt.

"No less important are the other stage plays recently secured as vehicles for the Goldwyn stars. 'Madame X,' is going to be filmed with Pauline Frederick in the character played on the stage by Dorothy Donnelly. 'Officer 666,' the Cohan & Harris farce-comedy by Augustin McHugh has been assigned to Jack Pickford, whose 'Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come' is now awaiting release. 'The Double Dyed Deceiver' and 'The Man Who Had Everything' are other storie chosen for the young Goldwyn star Tom Moore is going to be seen i 'Stop Thief,' and later in a picturization of Ben Ames Williams', 'Th Great Accident.'

"In addition to this wealth of material from varied sources, much ma be expected from Rex Beach and th Eminent Authors whose novels are being transformed into pictures by Goldwyn. Mr. Beach will follow 'Th Silver Horde' with a comedy, 'Goin Some'; the scenario of Ruper Hughes' next scenario, 'Scratch M Back' is now in the hands of Directo Sidney Olcott; Basil King has writte a remarkable story in 'Earth Bound, to be released after his 'The Stree Called Straight'; Mary Roberts Rinehart has contributed 'Dangerous Days to the list; Leroy Scott is represente by 'Partners of the Night' and Gouverneur Morris by 'The Penalty.' Booth Tarkington's two-reel "Edgar comedies are also mentioned in th Goldwyn statement.

Transfer to New Studio Begun

F. P.-Lasky Starts to Occupy Long Island Building

THE work of transferring the activities of the Famous Players-Lasky productions from the five widely separated studios which have housed the productions in the East this winter, to the new $2,000,000 studio at Long Island City, has been begun by J. N. Naulty, general manager of the Eastern Studios.

Selecting and preparing his crew for the new studio is one of the most important tasks. Next to that comes the arrangement, cataloguing and indexing of the enormous amount of indispensible property which has been accumulated at the studios and in storage. In this, however, the system Mr. Naulty has already installed for providing a pictorial index of all this property, by which all articles desired may be selected from pictures and ordered by number is of immense assistance.

In speaking of the advantages of working with all forces and departments gathered under one roof instead of scattered under many, Mr. Naulty says: "I have been looking forward to the time when we shall all be able to work together as a unit, with each department in close touch with all the others at a time when we shall be able to make still greater successes than we have already accomplished. We have achieved splendid results with the organization working under the present difficulties, but we shall eclipse past performances when these difficulties are removed. In the Long Island studio we shall have every convenience conceivable to help make the best pictures. The new building will be equipped not only to facilitate work, but for the comfort of every employe.

"The needs of each department have been thoroughly investigated, and accommodation for each in the new studio has been arranged to the best advantage. There will be no lost motion—and there will be no needless burdens in handicaps of inconvenience on anybody.

"The art and decoration department, which I installed nearly a year ago and which has proved itself invaluable in the designing and construction of interior and exterior sets will remain in charge of Robert M. Haas and associated with him is Charles O. Seessel, decorator.

"The casting department, still department, construction, electrical, wardrobe, scenic, location and accounting departments have all been placed in the charge of the best men and women obtainable, who have in turn retained experts in the line a their assistants.

"Due to the efforts of Frank Meyer the laboratory will soon be in working order, which will relieve the congestion in our own present inadequat laboratory and obviate our scatterin much of our work in four separate laboratories about the city."

Realart's Chicago Manager Gets Assistant

Louis Reichert, for many year closely identified with the exchang business of the motion picture industry, has been appointed assistant t Harry W. Willar, Chicago manager o Realart Pictures Corporation.

Mid-West Business Booming

J. C. Ragland of Realart Reports That Exhibitors Prosper Despite the "Flu"

BUSINESS in motion picture houses throughout the Middle West is booming despite a widespread influenza epidemic, according to J. C. Ragland, general sales manager of Realart Pictures Corporation, upon his return from a ten-day trip in that territory.

"I visited Chicago, Detroit, and St. Louis," Mr. Ragland reported, "and came in contact with a number of exhibitors in the district covered by the exchanges in these cities. Although the influenza epidemic is severe, it is causing no alarm among the exhibitors, so far as I could ascertain.

"On the other hand, I was told that business was fine, and that there were crowded houses everywhere. Evidently people have no fear of contagion in the new modern, well-ventilated and thoroughly disinfected motion picture houses."

One of the principal objects of Mr. Ragland's trip was to install Ralph B. Quive as Realart's Detroit manager. Mr. Quive was recently transferred from San Francisco, and succeeds C. G. Kingsley, who is now Realart manager in Omaha, Neb.

In Detroit Mr. Ragland closed a contract with T. H. Ealand, manager of the Charles H. Miller circuit of vaudeville houses for a three weeks' showing in its three Detroit houses of "Soldiers of Fortune," an Allan Dwan production.

Finishing up his trip in St. Louis, Mr. Ragland renewed old acquaintances with exchange men and exhibitors in that city where for several years he was manager of the St. Louis office of Select Pictures Corporation. The principal object of Mr. Ragland's trip was to lay plans through Realart branch managers for co-operation with exhibitors in celebration of Americanization week.

Mrs. Chaplin Resumes Work

The Production of Her Third First National Release Has Been Started

WITH the arrival of Ramsey Wallace from New York Mildred Harris Chaplin has begun the filming of her third First National release, a feature picture adapted from a famous novel. No announcement has been made of the picture's title, as it is as yet subject to change.

Wallace, who has sixteen years of legitimate work to his credit and who has played leads in many film productions, will play opposite Mrs. Chaplin. Gareth Hughes, one of the best actors on the English-speaking stage, has already arrived in Los Angeles to become a member of the cast, which will surround the little blonde actress.

John Stahl, who is well-known in Eastern studios as a director, will direct this picture; and he will be assisted by Harry Hagenah, who has directed more than thirty of his own stories. In announcing the new picture Manager Bennie Zeidman of the Chaplin-Mayer Pictures Co., Inc., declares that it will be on a much larger scale than any production that Mrs. Chaplin has hitherto offered the public. The new picture will follow Mrs. Chaplin's First National releases, "The Inferior Sex" and "Polly of the Storm Country."

Goldwyn Stars Get Assigned

Three of Goldwyn's Stars Have Been Cast for Pictures of Former Plays

ANNOUNCEMENT is made this week of the assignment of three of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation's stars to popular stage plays recently purchased by Goldwyn for adaption to the screen, "The Truth," "Officer 666" and "Stop Thief." The selections for these famous successes of the speaking stage are Madge Kennedy in "The Truth," Jack Pickford in "Officer 666" and Tom Moore in "Stop Thief."

Those who recall the character of the wife in Clyde Fitch's "The Truth," as it was portrayed by Clara Bloodgood in the original American production and a few years ago by Grace George in an all-star revival, will recognize how ideally the role is suited to the Goldwyn comedienne.

As Miss Kennedy is still working at Goldwyn's New York studio in "Trimmed With Red," under the direction of Hugo Ballin, and no date has been set for the beginning of the production of "The Truth," it is probable that the supporting company will not be selected for some time to come.

With "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come" ready for release and "The Double-Dyed Deceiver," an O. Henry story in preparation, it is likely that Pickford will be free to commence work in the rollicking farce "Officer 666" before many weeks have passed. In this play, which scored success on Broadway under the management of Cohan & Harris the young Goldwyn actor will have a role unlike those essayed in his first starring vehicles.

Tom Moore is the logical choice for "Stop Thief" the other Cohan & Harris mystery comedy recently secured by Goldwyn. This is a rapid-action play calling for the most spirited sort of interpretation.

Minter Picture Is Scoring

Appreciative Communications Tell of Favorable Receptions Given Feature

Mary Miles Minter, whose latest picture for Realart release is "Judy of Rogues' Harbor"

REX FLINT, manager of the Terry theatre, Terry, Mont., isn't having the trouble some exhibitors in other cities have experienced with organizations interested in "motion picture uplift," according to a report from the Realart offices.

The indorsement, which is headed, "Resolutions Concerning Management Terry Theatre," declares: "The Ladies' Aid of the Community Church, the Woman's Club, and the Altar Society hereby adopt the following resolutions of appreciation for the enjoyable, high-class film, entitled 'Anne of Green Gables,' presented at the Terry theatre on the 4th and 5th of January.

"Resolved, That we indorse the efforts of the management in their careful selection of films that please the old as well as the young patrons, and that we take this opportunity to express our thanks and appreciation of this effort."

A message from Jack Freen, of the Victoria theatre, Rochester, N. Y., advises:

"Rochester has had the worst snowstorm in four years, and the Victoria Popular Playhouse playing Mary Miles Minter in 'Anne of Green Gables' for week of January 11 did the biggest business of any feature in four years, handling nine thousand people daily."

Mrs. F. McGraw, manager of the Gem theatre in Little Falls, N. Y., is the author of an appreciative letter.

"Your 'Anne of Green Gables' proved more than satisfactory both to the public and myself. The crowds were such as were never seen in Little Falls before."

Billie Burke in New Picture

Gives Up Stage Role to Begin Work on "Away Goes Prudence" Is the Statement

BILLIE BURKE does not look with favor upon the tremendous strain of making a picture and at the same time appearing upon the stage, as so many of the stars are doing. "It was the idea of devoting all her time to one thing which resulted in interrupting her successful stage play "Caesar's Wife" at a time when its popularity was at its height in order that she might begin her next Paramount Artcraft picture for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation," says Famous Players. The title of this picture will be "Away Goes Prudence." It is rumored that upon the completion of this picture Miss Burke will again go back to the stage in a revival of the classic comedy, "School for Scandal."

John S. Robertson will again pilot the star through "Away Goes Prudence." This story was written by Josephine Lovett and the adaptation was by Kathryn Stuart.

Marine Recruiting Film Edited by Fox

An acknowledgment of the services of Fox Film Corporation in editing the pictures is carried on every one of the films to be exhibited broadcast in conjunction with the big national recruiting drive of the United States Marine Corps.

The motion picture is called "The Fighting Marines at Work and at Play," and the contents bear out the title fully. The film will be a chief feature in the drive. Three companies of enlisted men, each known as the "Roving Marines," have been sent on tour and will visit every city and town in the United States. A jazz band and a minstrel show by service men will constitute the entertainment.

"The Luck of the Irish" at the Capitol

"The Luck of the Irish," an Allan Dawn production, handled by Realart, was given a pre-release showing at the Capitol, New York, during the current week of February 8. This exhibition follows the recent showing of the same feature at Sid Grauman's theatre in Los Angeles. Realart reports that the box-office returns in the Western theatre were gratifying. These two pre-release showings are said by Realart to be in the nature of test-runs in the two big picture centers of the country. "The Luck of the Irish" will probably be released about February 22, says Realart.

Universal Releases for Week of February 16

Among the Universal releases for the week of February 16 are "The Madonna of the Slums," a Jewel picture, featuring Holbrook Blinn and Jeanne Eagles; a Lyons and Moran one-reeler, "Old Clothes for New," "The Bull Thrower," playing Edna Gregory, Phil Dunham and Billy Engle; "The Racing Death," the second episode of "Elmo the Fearless;" the eighth episode of "The Lion Man," entitled "The Dungeon of Despair," and a western, "The Sagebrush Gentleman," with Bob Burns and Charlotte Merriam.

Master Films Executive Issues Statement

The following statement has been issued for the trade by Charles C. Burr, president of the Master Films, Inc.:

"It has come to my attention that there are rumors on the film rialto regarding the personnel of Master Films, Inc. For the information of all concerned, Master Films, Inc., was organized by myself in conjunction with the following gentlemen who are directors of the corporation: E. J. Clode, book publisher; Sigfried Hart, manufacturer; Alexander Grosset, book publisher. Together, we own the entire stock of the corporation.

George Fawcett Directs Dorothy Gish

Fox's New York Exchange Takes Over More Space

Simplex Notes

One of the visitors to the Simplex plant last week was Mr. H. Wedemeyer, Secretary of the Erker Bros. Optical Company, who hold the Simplex franchise for Missouri, Northeastern Arkansas and several counties in Illinois. The Erker Company was established in 1879 by the senior Mr. Erker, in a small store on Olive street between Fourth and Fifth. For many years this company had the distinction of being the largest optical company in the industry.

Today, besides the five-story building at 608 Olive street, a branch office does a large distributing optical and motion picture accessories business at Grand Avenue, which is located outside of the business section, and which is operated under the management of Mr. Robt. Bausch, of the well-known optical family of that name.

The entire third floor of the Olive Street building is devoted to motion picture accessories, and it is here that the Simplex exhibit may be viewed at all times. This department is under the supervision of Mr. H. G. Lihou, who for the past nine years has taken an active part in the large numbers of high-class theatre installations which the Erker Company have been responsible for in their territory.

The Erker Company had one of the finest motion picture exhibits at the time of the World's Fair at St. Louis. In the main building on Olive Street are contained the optical and camera departments on the first and second floors, while the third floor contents have already been described, and on the fourth and fifth the photographic and finishing departments are located.

Mr. Lihou reports unprecedented Simplex business in St. Louis and around his territory and spoke of the non-theatrical field which is leaning particularly toward the Simplex. A recent Simplex installation which points out the general trend being taken in the motion picture line by industrial groups is the one covered at the Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney store which is rated as the finest in St. Louis. In this instance Mr. Wilkinson, manager of the store in question, has equipped a regular bijou theatre which will be operated daily in conjunction with the store, the details of which theatre will shortly be published.

Close on the heels of the fire which visited one of the Simplex buildings on January 31st, comes the news that the entire ninth floor of the main building at 317 East 34th Street, has been leased by the Precision Machine Company, Inc., and within one hour after the signing of same, a large force of millwrights were at work arranging for the hanging of the shafting, while other crews of workmen attended to the installation of machinery.

This activity resulted in seeing considerable machinery installed on the floor in question, which in floor area will give the Simplex builders almost as much manufacturing space as that in the building affected by the recent fire.

The machinery being installed on the additional floor will be used for manufacturing and finishing Type "S" Lamphouse parts and pedestals which

J. Barney Sherry, one of the first legitimate actors ever to appear in films, has been signed under a long-term contract by Marshall Neilan to play prominent parts in all the forthcoming Neilan productions. Mr. Sherry's acquisition to the Neilan forces makes three stars the producer has permanently engaged, the others being Marjorie Daw and Wesley Barry.

"The False Road" Stars Enid Bennett

"The False Road" is announced as the very newest picture produced by Thomas H. Ince as an Ince-Paramount Artcraft offering, in which Enid Bennett stars. The story is by the noted scenarist, C. Gardner Sullivan, and was directed by Fred Niblo, with George Barnes at the camera. Thomas H. Ince supervised the production.

Lloyd Hughes, soon to be starred by Mr. Ince, has the leading male role opposite Miss Bennett and other notable people in the cast are Wade Boteler, Lucile Young, Charles Smily, Edith Yorke and Gordon Mullen.

parts, by the way, are the only ones out of the many used in the up-to-date projector that were affected in any way through the blaze.

Mr. E. M. Porter when seen at the factory marvelled at the speed at which the news of the fire travelled, he having received cablegrams from many of the Simplex distributors in foreign markets who were anxiously inquiring concerning the first news stories that were sent out to the effect that Simplex was wiped out. Each of the Simplex distributors were notified of the exact conditions and also received a reassuring notice from the factory in order to thoroughly offset the effects of the highly-colored stories of the fire.

Mr. E. M. Porter says that he is highly gratified with the manner in which the entire Simplex organization responded, and states that the night crew, which works from six in the evening until six in the morning, is helping wonderfully to maintain production until the completion of the ninth floor arrangements.

Her recent pictures will convince you that EDITH ROBERTS has come to the front with a dash—for newspapers in every community praise her genius, talent and splendid work. You can give your public supreme entertainment with EDITH ROBERTS in the following—

UNIVERSAL
SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS

"LASCA"—directed by Norman Dawn—termed rightly "A Poem in Pictures." Says John Morrell in the New York Review: "You will look upon a wonderful humanization of a passionate girl in Edith Roberts."

"THE TRIFLERS"—directed by Christy Cabanne—a society drama with the "society" seen through the eyes of a little shop-girl who ventures into it on a daring chance. A very human picture—with a happy end.

He's A Universal Star

Versatile

Monroe Salisbury

THE secret of the public's liking for MONROE SALISBURY is the rare intelligence with which he reinforces those strongly emotional parts in which he is at his best. Actors who can play a part with the finish of MONROE SALISBURY are very few, for versatility is not pronounced on the screen, and this is the reason why your audiences will find complete satisfaction in every one of the vivid and splendidly dramatic features listed here. In every detail of acting, staging and direction they are worthy of the name——

UNIVERSAL
SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS

" THE SLEEPING LION "—a marvelous characterization of a lonely man who adopts a street waif and wins a home for them both in the great West.

" HIS DIVORCED WIFE "—a Tennessee mountains drama whose great heart appeal has won it unending appreciation.

" THE PHANTOM MELODY "—the picture of a man who came back from the dead to save a woman in her hour of need.

She's A Universal Star

HERE is a young actress who has been accepted into the hearts of millions of picture lovers as one of the rarest personalities that the screen has produced in many years. The wondrous charm of her work, coupled with her instinctive understanding of every role she is called upon to portray has made her a star who matches up with the box office power of the best in the business.

No further proof of her ability is necessary other than seeing her on the screen. Any Universal Exchange will take pleasure in screening for you the productions in which Miss Billington has recently appeared. See her today in the following—

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS

"THE DAY SHE PAID"—directed by Rex Ingram—an intensely appealing heart-picture made from the well-known story by Fannie Hurst, "Oats and the Woman." As Genevieve Harris says in the Chicago Evening Post: "The picture is destined to please those who like a sentimental story with plenty of heart interest." And these people are just about ninety-nine per cent of your audiences.

The State Right Field

"Burlesque on Carmen" to Open in Albany

Victor Kremer, who has been preparing for several weeks the presentation of "A Burlesque on Carmen" in conjunction with a singing and dancing ensemble, has completed all of the preliminaries in connection with the show. Under the direction of Ira H. Simmons, newly appointed manager of the Independent Master Films, Inc., the Kremer exchange for New York and Northern Jersey, six companies are now in rehearsal.

Each company will comprise three principals, two singers and a premiere dancer, together with a chorus of six girls. The entertainment will be in the nature of a travesty on the famous opera "Carmen", and an excellent jazz version of the famous song "Carmen" has been written for the show by William J. McKenna. It is understood that the show will open in Albany during the latter part of this month.

"A Child for Sale" Is Getting Attention

Though the new Abramson-Graphic production, "A Child for Sale," is not promised for release before February 15th, by its author-director, Ivan Abramson, the business office of the Grahpic Film Corporation reports the receipt of inquiries from a great number of independent exchangemen of note throughout the country. The cast is headed by Gladys Leslie and Creighton Hale, supported by Bobby Connelly, Julia Swayne Gordon, Anna Lehr, William Davidson, William Tooker and William Bechtel.

Lauds "Tarzan" Photo Effects

James Hutchinson and John Holbrook Numa Cameramen Are Praised for Work

JAMES C. HUTCHINSON and John K. Holbrook are the cameramen responsible for what is promised as notable photographic effect in Numa Pictures Corporation's production of "The Return of Tarzan," ready for trade showing within two weeks.

Following is a statement on the photographic angle of picture from Numa Pictures:

"There are many night scenes, shot both in the Yonkers Studio and out in California, including water scenes, and a camera semblance of the jungle mist, that have been accorded unusual commendation from fellow photographers at the Coast who have seen them screened.

"In episodes in the jungle, Tarzan is shown springing from tree to tree with the agility supposed to have been acquired during his upbringing in the forests. These flashes in the treetops were taken from all angles and locations including an aeroplane that hovered breathlessly near the tips of the trees.

"Desert scenes afforded camera food, and, like all of that arid background, food that improperly assimilated, might have brought on film indigestion. But thanks to what must have been careful eyes on the lookout for flat-light, the desert footage is said to be highly palatable. Bands of Algerians play an important share in these episodes.

"Then there is the 'water stuff.' There are scenes made from every conceivable nook and crannie aboard a big liner; there are the incidents photographed in the life-boats; and there are the close-ups and the long shots of such exciting moments as the blowing up of a yacht, the throwing overboard and the escape of Tarzan, and the vicissitudes of three other characters in their fight for life and safety in mid-ocean."

Must Keep Finger on Public Pulse

"Successful makers of serials nowadays must get a lap ahead in the race for new ideas," says Jonh W. Grey, president of Supreme Pictures, Inc., and co-author with Arthur B. Reeve of their new serial, "The Mystery Mind," in which the well-known hypnotist, J. Robert Pauline, is being starred.

"To be genuinely successful one must have the gift of feeling the public pulse and getting the jump on its changing moods before any one else can do so. One can always find imitators—but they remain always imitators. They are never the stars of the game.

"As pathfinders we are breaking another new road for the cinema serial. We have become 'psychopath-finders.'"

"Crimson Shoals" Is Six-Reel Drama

"Crimson Shoals," Monopol's production, presenting triple characterization as an added bid for attention is not a serial. The picture is a six-reel drama, and deals with life and its complications on an uncharted island in the Pacific.

Oakman Plays Opposite Annette Kellerman

Sol. Lesser, who is producing a series of productions, featuring Annette Kellerman, announces the engagement of Wheeler Oakman as her leading man. He has played leads opposite Viola Dana, Blanche Sweet, Mabel Normand and Priscilla Dean. The Kellerman story was written by Bernard McConville, and is being directed by Chet Franklin at the Brunton Studios, Hollywood. The pictures will be distributed by Sol. Lesser.

Arrow Film Man Returns After Extensive Tour

J. S. Jossey, special sales representative of the Arrow Film Corporation, has just returned to New York from a four-months' trip, which took him to the West Coast. During that time he visited every independent exchange in the United States, it is stated. "Especially in the Middle West are things flourishing," says Mr. Jossey. "There is a great demand for comedies such as the Hank Mann series, and big features."

Keynote of " The Whirlwind " Is Happiness

"The Whirlwind", a fifteen-episode serial, written and directed by Joseph A. Golden and produced by the Allgood Pictures Corporation for distribution on the state-right market, is made the subject of a lengthy statement issued by "Al" Alperstein, general manager of the Allgood Pictures Corporation. The keynote of the new chapter-picture is "optimism", according to Mr. Alperstein.

"We've attempted to do more than make money for the exhibitor, "declares the Allgood Pictures executive. "We've tried hard to spread the message of good cheer, right thinking, right living, in our 15 chapter serial photo play. Whether the exhibitors or the public will give us credit for our ideals is yet to be seen but we feel that spreading the gospel of happiness can do no one harm and unquestionably does a lot of good for all."

Territory is Sold on " Jolly Comedies "

Film Specials announces that it has sold the rights on "Jolly Comedies" to the Celebrated Players Film Corporation of Chicago for Indiana and Northern Illinois; and to the Phil. Goldstone Film Exchange of Omaha for Iowa and Nebraska. Willis Kent of Denver, Colo., has acquired the rights on "Brown of Harvard" for the Denver territory.

Colleen Moore Contracts with Christie Film

The Christie Film Company has taken from the more serious photodrama one of its most promising young stars, Colleen Moore. Miss Moore recently signed her name to a long-term contract, and she will start working as soon as she finishes with Sessue Hayakawa.

J. E. MASTBAUM WOULD CAPITALIZE YOUTH

AT a meeting of the Federation of Jewish Charities, held recently at the Bellevue-Stratford, Philadelphia, in connection with the Federation's drive for $1,100,000 for philanthropic purposes, Jules E. Mastbaum, president of the Stanley Company of America and well-known in the picture and theatrical fields, inaugurated a new campaign for $100,000 to be used in establishing young men in business who are without the necessary funds to set themselves up in legitimate enterprises.

Mr. Mastbaum called attention to the frequency with which ambitious young men of ability are forced to go to loan-sharks for the purpose of securing ready cash to start a business. Mr. Mastbaum donated $5,000, it is stated, towards the new project, and at last reports, the entire sum was well on the way to being speedily realized.

Minter Picture Pleases Author of Story

Grace Miller White, author of "Judy of Rogue's Harbor," Mary Miles Minter's current release for Realart Pictures Corporation, viewed a private showing of the screen adaptation of the story recently in California. She expressed satisfaction over the production and said that Mary Miles Minter had made an ideal type of heroine. William D. Taylor directed the production.

"Tarzan's" Trade Showing Is Postponed

George M. Merrick, who supervised the production of "The Return of Tarzan" for Numa Pictures Corporation, is in charge of the cutting and assembling of the film, now nearing completion in California. The original date set for a trade-showing of the picture was postponed for two weeks owing to the tremendous task of assembling the nine-reel story.

"Determination's" Cast Good

U. S. Photoplay Corporation Announces Future Program and Also Personnel

WM. H. TURNER and Leslie Stowe, two character actors who have appeared in over 150 screen releases, have signed contracts this week to appear in "Determination," Turner being cast for the part of Hicks, the family butler, and Leslie Stowe as Jonathan Morton, the money lender, the Shylock. Tod Sloan, the well-known jockey, is under contract to beat the world's one mile record. He rides the horse Determination. Maynard, the "flying parson," who recently established the world's transcontinental aviation record, is under contract to beat the world's 500-mile aviation record in "Determination." "Kid" Broad is under contract as Dan McGovern, a notorious dive-keeper, in "Determination."

Negotiations are now under way whereby in a few days the director of this photoplay will be announced. The cast will be all-star. Fifty thousand dollars has been set aside by the board of directors for advance publicity prior to the release of "Determination." The cost of production is estimated at $500,000.00.

The next stories following "Determination" are "The Soul of Man," "The Home of Man" and "Deception." All four of these scenarios are stories written by Capt. F. F. Stoll. "Determination" covers every phase of the Whitechapel district, shows Scotland Yard activity, and also the Apaches of Paris and Parisian detective activity.

The E. K. Lincoln studio at Grandwood, N. J., is under lease for two years. When the third picture is under production the U. S. Photoplay Corporation will build its own studio wherein four ten-reelers can be produced at one time. Plans are now under way for this studio, which, it is estimated, will cost no less than $750,000.00.

The following gentlemen are the officers and directors of this corporation: Capt. F. F. Stoll, president and acting treasurer; Dr. G. L. Carder, first vice-president, of Cumberland, Md.; Mr. E. B. Dean, Sr., second vice-president; C. L. Wakeman, secretary; Dr. H. H. Prentice, D. C.; Wm. P. Doing, Jr., and C. A. L. Miller.

" Screaming Shadow Comes "

First Episode of Ben Wilson's Serial Will Be Released on 22d of February

FEBRUARY 22nd has been set by Frank C. Hall, president of Hallmark Pictures Corp., for the release of the first episode of Ben Wilson's second serial production, "The Screaming Shadow." The title of the first episode is "A Cry in the Dark."

"The Screaming Shadow" follows in release, the first Ben Wilson serial production for Hallmark, "The Trail of the Octopus." In both of these serials Ben Wilson is co-starred with Neva Gerber, and practically the same supporting cast is seen in both. Duke Worn, who directed Wilson in many of his first serial productions, is credited with the direction of both these Hallmark serials and King Gray photographed.

The theme of "The Screaming Shadow" is based on the recent scientific discovery by eminent physicians that human life can be prolonged by transplanting to the human body what are known as monkey glands.

W. L. Rogers, general sales manager for Hallmark, and M. J. Mintz, who has recently been appointed by Mr. Hall as sales manager for serials, report that advance bookings on this serial are in excess of the bookings obtained on the last Wilson serial by a good percentage. Mr. Mintz has left to tour the Hallmark exchanges east of the Mississippi River for the special purpose of exploiting and introducing "The Screaming Shadow," and the new Benny Leonard serial, "The Evil Eye" which Mr. Hall expects to have ready for release some time in the spring.

Territories Sold on Hank Mann Comics

The Arrow Film Corporation reports the sale of the Hank Mann two-reel comedies for the New England territory to Sam Grand, of the Arrow Film Company, 48 Piedmont street; and for Michigan to the Arthur S. Hyman Attractions, Film Building, Detroit. Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Wisconsin territory has also been sold on this series. This just about completes all territorial rights on this series of two-reel comedies in which Hank Mann is making the big hit.

"Face to Face" Issued Soon

Is the First of a Series of Eight Under Contemplation by Grossman

HARRY GROSSMAN, President of Grossman Pictures, Inc., has announced the completion of the first picture of a series of eight features. The picture, in which Marguerite Marsh is starred, has the title "Face to Face" and was made at the studio of the company at Ithaca, N. Y. It is now being cut and assembled and will be ready for screening within a few days.

"Supported by a competent cast, Miss Marsh adds new laurels to her successes in screen interpretations," says a report from Grossman Pictures. "It might be said that it is perhaps the best role of her career. Miss Marsh by her work in this new picture becomes a top notch artist and gives promise of attaining the highest prominence through her work in the series."

Mr. Grossman is now working out elaborate plans for the continuation of production on the series, it is stated. In an interview recently, he said: "Our project in producing this series of eight features, of which "Face to Face" is the first, is due to a determination to do our bit to fulfill the pressing demands of exhibitors for better pictures. We are going to give them what they want, if it can be done; and we are willing to submit "Face to Face" as a standard.

"The scheme of the series contemplates elaborateness in every department, with particular attention to magnificance of production and direction of an artistry that will go far toward the success of each picture. Preparations are now completed for production of the second picture, which will be begun at once. We expect to release the pictures at the rate of one every six weeks."

Jans Plans Strong Campaign

H. F. Jans Promises Exhibitors Help in Presenting Olive Tell Vehicle

UP to date accessories and an extensive advertising campaign has been promised by H. F. Jans on the initial production of Jans Pictures, "Love Without Question" featuring the Broadway star Olive Tell, which will be ready for release to the state rights buyers the middle of February.

It is understood that special care will be exercised in giving exhibitors the country over just the kind of helps that they really want. The contract for the lithographs has been given out, and Mr. Jans says that these will be something different and far above the usual output; that is, if the rough drafts are any criterion. Further than this, specially made slides, heralds, press book, music cue sheets, lobby display photographs and others will be offered in conjunction with the production, it is stated.

Mr. Jans further states that negotiations are under way for an extensive advertising campaign with leading newspapers in various sections of the United States, the exact details of which cannot be ascertained at the present time, Due announcements will be made upon this plan later, it is promised.

An exchangeman for a number of years, Mr. Jans realizes only too well the value of artistic accessories, and the exhibitor booking this feature can feel that the wide experience of Mr. Jans will be behind every advertising effort made, assuring them of helps that will successfully get their picture over. It is understood that many new exploitation stunts will be offered, giving the exhibitor not only real helps but individual suggestions from an experienced exchangeman.

Kremer Opens New Exchange

Office Will Distribute Kremer's Productions for New York and New Jersey

FOLLOWING the occupancy of his new quarters in the Leavitt Building this week, where executive offices have been installed, Victor Kremer announced his intention to open distributing offices for the Chaplin productions which he is at present state-righting throughout this country and Canada.

A completely equipped exchange will be installed, including large poster rooms, a projection-parlor, reel-rooms and film vaults. The exchange, which is called The New York Independent Masterfilms, Inc., will distribute all of Victor Kremer's productions for Greater New York, upper New York state and Northern Jersey. These pictures include Charlie Chaplin in "A Burlesque on Carmen," the four part production which enjoyed a run at the Rivoli theatre recently.

Ira H. Simmons has been engaged by Mr. Kremer to act as general manager of the new exchange. Mr. Simmons has been signally successful in handling "Yankee Doodle in Berlin" for New York and New England. Prior to his connection with the Sol Lessor organization, Simmons was special representative for the New York exchange of the First National Exhibitors Circuit. He will place several new ideas in effect in the marketing of "A Burlesque on Carmen" for the territories mentioned. Under his supervision will work a corps of high class salesmen, who will assist the exhibitors in the exploitation of the Chaplin production.

Roger Lytton, veteran "villain" of the screen, who appears in "High Speed." Mr. Lytton will soon be seen in a Wisteria production being produced by Burton King

Arrow Has Teaser Campaign

State Right Buyers Are Circularized in Novel Way for Wm. Steiner Series

A TEN-DAY teaser campaign has just been completed by the Arrow Film Corporation on their new five-reel feature series, "Tex, Elucidator of Mysteries," produced by William Steiner. The campaign consisted of a series of postcards mailed on each of the ten days to every state right buyer in the country.

The only communication on these cards was some cryptic statement or question, incorporating the name "Tex," which whetted the curiosity of the recipients, and it was not until the last card arrived that they learned the name of the company sending out the cards. Each card referred in some way to "Tex" as a potential panacea for the hard knocks and calamities from which exchange men suffer, and that sufficient curiosity had been aroused was evidenced by the flood of inquiries that were sent in on receipt of the final card.

This interesting stunt is the beginning of a big advertising campaign planned by P. B. Dana, sales manager of the Arrow Film Corporation, to inaugurate a new selling arrangement for a series of five-reel detective stories which will be known as "Tex, Elucidator of Mysteries." A new method of distribution is to be used by Arrow in connection with these features, inasmuch as they are going to sell the state right buyers twelve five-reel features, which will constitute this serie and deliver them one each month. Th release date will be March 13, by whic time five of the features will be com pleted.

The cast which will be used i "Tex, Elucidator of Mysteries," is strong one and will include such we known players as Glen White, Davi Wall, Joseph M. L. Striker, Alexand F. Frank, Leo Delaney, Jane McA pine and Marie Treador.

Dramatic and Impressive Picturization of Famous Novel

Bert Lytell in
"THE RIGHT OF WAY"
Screen Classics—Metro

DIRECTOR......................Jack Dillon
AUTHOR......................Sir Gilbert Parker
SCENARIO BY..................June Mathis
CAMERAMAN..................Robert B. Kurrle
AS A WHOLE.....Highly appropriate picturization of famous novel; should score heavily particularly with better class audiences.
STORY.....Holds the interest all the way and contains a number of intense dramatic crises.
DIRECTION.....Has handled various sequences realistically.
PHOTOGRAPHY..........Generally very good
LIGHTINGS...........................Very good CAMERA WORK......................Good shots
STAR.......Gives carefully studied and impressive characterization of difficult part.
SUPPORT.....Very good; Gibson Gowland stands out in very important role.
EXTERIORS.......Good French-Canadian village stuff for the most part.
INTERIORS.....................All appropriate DETAIL........Everything carefully attended to CHARACTER OF STORY.....Awakening of agnostic through contact with lives of simple and trusting people.
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION.....About 6,800 feet

Here is a picture that is going to make a big impression on most everyone that sees it, probably scoring more heavily with the better class audiences because of the more or less improved nature of its theme. But while it contains not a little penetration into the psychology of important character's mind, there is enough thrilling physical action throughout its lengthy footage to warrant the picture receiving universal endorsement.

It opens with a particularly fine sequence in a Montreal court where Charley Steele, the brilliant, cynical, supercillious lawyer acquits one Joe Portugais of murder when all the evidence is against him. Steele is at once the pride of Montreal's society as well as the thorn in its flesh. He is one who scoffs at God, willing to be convinced but permitting no one to convince him. In addition he is a heavy drinker.

Two years after his marriage he is drawn into a brawl in a tavern on the river's edge, knocked out and thrown in the water. Joe Portugais finds him and takes him to the village of Chaudiere where he lives. After many months an operation restores Steele's mind but a paper then informs him that he is believed dead, with the stain of embezzlement on his name, and that his wife has married again.

He secures work in a tailor shop operated by a religious fanatic who is near crazed when Steele professes his doubt of God to him. That night he sears his chest with a burning cross. But it is the love of Rosalie, the rose of Chaudiere, that brings Steele to a better understanding of something infinite. His old superciliousness drops from him and he lives for a time untroubled save by the thought of his wife in Montreal. Then one night while protecting the funds of the church from thieves he is mortally wounded and died in the arms of the Cure. Before the simple villagers he has redeemed himself for his words of doubt.

The story maintains an admirable thread of interest throughout and is sustained often enough by dramatic crises of real power, namely Steele's argument in the court room, his fight in the tavern, the act of the fanatic in burning his chest with the cross and the final redemption of Steele in his fight to save the funds of the church.

Bert Lytell gives a carefully studied and impressive characterization of the difficult role of Steele. He brings out the arrogance and superciliousness of the man wonderfully well.

A Wonderful Buy for Exploitation as Well as Entertainment

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

"The Right of Way" is a well known title for the reason that the novel by Sir Gilbert Parker had a wonderful sale. You ought to be able to get an unusual amount of publicity from it because editors and other influential folk can be interested in the production. Then there is Bert Lytell, a rapidly rising star. Title, author and star should create a real box office card for all better class houses.

The producers are sending the picture out with two endings. One as related above, the other concluding happily with the understanding that Steele and Rosalie finally marry. The exhibitor may chose which to use. Here again is a chance for additional publicity. Both endings might be utilized and a contest inaugurated as to which is the most fitting. All in all from the exploitation angle you have a wonderful buy here.

Titan Attractions Give Out Statement

Titan Attractions, Inc., with temporary executive offices at 145 West Forty-fifth street, has, at its recent meeting, elected the following officers: George K. Rolands, president and director general; B. A. Curley, vice-president; Nat Nathanson, general manager and treasurer; H. J. Patenall, secretary.

It is the intention of the Titan Attractions, Inc., to produce a series of 25 two-reel comedies a year with an all-star comedy cast. The players are being selected, and as soon as satisfactory arrangements are made as to its complete organization, the company will leave for Florida.

Mr. Rolands has prepared several stories of dramatic value for five-reel productions, and arrangements are being made in the careful selection of a star well known in the legitimate and motion picture field who will play the leading part in the first picture selected by Director Rolands. It is the purpose of the Titan Attractions, Inc., to distribute their productions on the state rights plan.

International No. 5 Has Some Good " Shots "

The International News reel No. 5, released through Universal, contains an Alpine avalanche scene which is said to make an interesting view. Edwin D. Meredith is shown taking oath of office as secretary of agriculture. Former Secretary of Agriculture Houston assumes the office of secretary of the treasury, while the resigning encumbent of the latter office goes to the senate. Picturesque views of St. Augustine, Fla., are also included among the other "shots."

" The Deadlier Sex " Set for March 28

It has been definitely announced by Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., that the Pathe Extra Special, "The Deadlier Sex," from the Jesse D. Hampton studios and starring Blanche Sweet, will be released on March 28.

Pioneer Plans Spring Drive

Contemplates Meetings of Exhibitors at Exchange Points for Collaboration

UNDER the direction of General Manager M. H. Hoffman, the forces of the Pioneer's home and branch offices are being marshalled into line preparatory to an extensive campaign to bring the exhibitors into closer touch with the service which the Pioneer can offer them.

Another feature of the campaign will be meetings which it is planned to hold at the various Pioneer exchange centres. At these meetings the local exhibitors will be invited to express without reservation their views and opinions as to the ways and means to be pursued to make the Pioneer a powerful force behind the exhibitor, without impairing the independence or freedom of action of the individual theatre operator.

Special service departments will be instituted to work along with the exhibitor either by actual collaboration or by device. In several parts of the country this plan has been tested and found to be of the utmost value, and under the new arrangements its sphere of operations will be greatly increased.

It is expected that in the majority of these meetings Mr. Hoffman will be present and will address the gathering. According to Mr. Hoffman there will be no strings attached to this service, it will be gratuitous; the only purpose of the Pioneer being to learn at first hand the kind of pictures that ought to be made and the kind of service rendered so that the exhibitor will be able to increase his profits, and become a real factor in the matter of service to his patrons.

Opens Non-Theatrical Dept.

Universal Plans to Supply Service to Non-Theatrical Organizations in United States

THE Universal Film Manufacturing Company announced yesterday the establishment of a non-theatrical motion picture division to supply a complete service covering every part of the United States. The division is under the supervision of Harry Levey, general manager of the industrial and educational department.

While performing a distinct service, the non-theatrical division from the outset will utilize every facility of the Universal organization, which includes more than fifty fully equipped exchanges in stategic centres and as many more which are prepared to distribute direct to non-theatrical film users.

Executive offices for the non-theatrical business of the Universal have been established on the eighth floor of the Mecca Building, 1600 Broadway, and within a short time, it is expected, Mr. Levey will announce the appointment of an executive to take immediate charge of the work.

"Mr. Laemmle and the other officials of the Universal have had in mind for more than a year the idea of establishing a non-theatrical division," said Mr. Levey, "and now I have the pleasure of announcing that the step has been taken.

"In my office there is an accumulation of thousands of letters that bear witness to the American need for the scientific distribution of motion pictures to associations, schools, churches, granges, Y. M. C. A.'s, Y. W. C. A.'s, Y. M. H. A.'s, meeting places where people congregate for social purposes —thousands and tens of thousands of such organizations scattered throughout the land."

Fairbank's Next Under Way

Greater Part of Action to Take Place in West; New Leading Woman for " Doug "

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS has resumed his activities before the camera following a rest of eight weeks during which time the story for his third United Artists production has been in preparation. While the title has not been announced for the athletic star's next "Big Four" picture, it is known to be an original story by Fairbanks, the screen version of which has been prepared by Tom Geraghty, editor of productions.

The greater part of the action takes place in the West, with a very generous share of the story dealing with outdoor scenes, thereby affording the star tremendous scope for a lot of new stunts which have been cleverly worked out.

Many new faces will be seen in support of the star. A new leading woman, drawn from the legitimate stage and declared to be a "find," has been added to the Fairbanks organization. Frank Campeau has an excellent part, giving him an exceptional opportunity for his particular character of "villainy."

Victor Fleming, who made his initial bow as a director in "When the Clouds Roll By," will shoulder the same responsibilities again, with Ted Reed assisting. William McGann and Harry Thorpe, who were responsible for the excellent photography in the last Fairbanks offering, will again do the camera work.

Few scenes will be filmed at the Fairbanks studios in Los Angeles. The story is of a character requiring considerable location work, much of which will take the entire company to Arizona and the East.

Robert Fairbanks, manager of productions, under whose supervision the little community which was destroyed by flood in "When the Clouds Roll By" was built, is already engaged in the construction of the necessary accommodations to house the company in Arizona.

United Picture Theatres of America is releasing "Women Men Forget," starring Mollie King

United Reports Heavy Demand on Feature

A report from the offices of the United Picture Theatres gives a glowing account of the way in which the bookings for "The Corsican Brothers' are mounting up. "Reports fro United branch managers all over th country indicate that bookings wil greatly exceed the expectations o United officials," announces the statement. "'The Corsican Brothers' wil hang up a high-water mark in recor bookings.

"Beginning February 22, when 'Th Corsican Brothers' is to be released many exhibitors are planning to pla the feature for two and three times a many days as they do the usual five reel feature. The picture has in man instances been given heavy advanc advertising, campaigns in many citie having been in force for a week or mor past, and there is every indication tha United's picturization of Dumas' famous story of the twin brothers wi gladden the heart of many an exhibito by adding many dollars to his bank account."

Thomas Ince Buys Thre Popular Stories

Word comes from Thomas H. In that three new stories—representi the best and most popular works three prominent authors—have be purchased as screen vehicles for t Ince stars. "The Counterfeit," by B. Daniel; "The Incubus," by Marjorie Benton Cooke, and "An Adventurous Day," by Stella Wynne Herrc are the stories purchased by Mr. In and scheduled for production at early date.

Salesmen Trained by Screen

By William H. Fournier

"VISUALIZE," like a few other of our intimate word acquaintances, has been played across the board often during the past few years—so often that much of its original kick is gone.

Nevertheless, the word must remain inseparably connected with two professions—moving picture directing and salesmanship. Granting the moving picture director a good scenario, his picture succeeds or fails in proportion to his ability to make his actors see and feel the unfolding of the story as he sees and feels it. And so it is with the sales director; upon his ability to make the people under him visualize the thing they are to sell depends in the ultimate whatever measure of success he attains.

The writer, who trains new salesmen for the Encyclopedia Americana Corporation, experienced his greatest difficulty in impressing the recruits with the magnitude of the proposition they were undertaking to handle. He found that a downtown New York office filled with mahogany furniture and reams of "literature," impressive as such things are, was insufficient even when supplemented by figures proving that it had cost over one million dollars to produce the thing they were being trained to sell. He realized that the best way to imbue the salesman with confidence in his merchandise and arouse his enthusiasm was to let him see for himself the effort represented in the expenditure of that one million dollars.

And so it happened that a "one-reel thriller" of the making of the Encyclopedia Americana was taken at the company's plant and a "print" thereof sent to every sales office in the United States. Almost daily these reels are run off for the benefit of the new men who are being constantly added to the company's sales force. Thus they are aided in visualizing the thing they are about to sell.

Making the Kaufman Weekly

SINCE the start of the nation-wide advertising of the Herbert Kaufman Weekly was made, considerable interest has been manifest in just how the actual producing of these pictured editorials is being carried on. This is no more than natural in that Lewis J. Selznick has undertaken something new in the picture world. At present two of the one-reel subjects have been completed, and the start of the third is expected soon. The first one is "Little Red Riding Hood." This is a pictured version of the Kaufman editorial on the tragedy of a young girl, brought up under strict discipline, who comes to ruin through ignorance. The scenes are entirely separate tableaux, each distinct from the other—part literal—part symbolic—each illustrating a title taken verbatim from the Kaufman editorial.

The first shows the young girl in her home with pious parents who have reared her on a code of "thou-to-heart talks of the actual fundamentals of life have been given her. In shalt-nots." No information of heart-such knowledge she is like a small child. She is romantic and eventually runs away with a man who lures her to the depths of degradation. A symbolic scene follows which presents Little Red Hiding Hood at the cross-roads of life—and she takes the dark road. Another scene shows her parents disowning her and casting her out. This is followed by another symbolic scene presenting many lost or ruined women walking to and fro in front of a church where the vision of the Christus appears above the arch. The moral is emphasized in a sub-title which says, "Wake up, you Ostriches, and guard your chickens."

Almost without a sequence and with parts unrelated, this method of handling the humanized editorial results in a pictured story that is powerful in its appeal. The essence of the gripping editorial is not lost, and the written message of the typed page is made even plainer through the medium of the camera. Preceding the picture is an interesting close-up of Mr. Kaufman seated in his study. Then follows several axioms from his pen, all very much to the point and brief. Betty Hilburn is the featured player, and she reveals a charm and talent that are as effective as they are appealing.

It is a peculiar fact that there are hundreds of managing editors today who have little or no knowledge of the value of the motion picture as an entertainment. They are buried in their small desks and the activities of their little political world. Yet the leader of these supposedly brilliant men, Herbert Kaufman, consents and agrees to the screen presentation of his work. It may be that this will convert others to a more modern belief.—Laurence Reid.

Current Universal Releases

The Special Attraction of February 23 Schedule Is "Prince of Avenue A"

"THE PRINCE OF AVENUE A," featuring James J. Corbett, is announced by Universal as its special attraction for release during the week of February 23. The story deals with a two-fisted young Irishman, the Prince of Avenue A, played by Mr. Corbett, who overcomes many difficulties to win a girl of a higher caste of society than his own. Corbett, as the son of a prosperous East Side plumber, mixes politics with pipes and love; and laughs and tears are the result, it is said. It is while on a "job" for his father that he meets the girl he later falls in love with, and eventually marries.

Commenting on the new production, Universal says: "The story is full of the snap and punch that is characteristic of Corbett pictures. A well-balanced cast consisting of Mary Warren, Harry Northrup, Cora Drew, Richard Cummings and Frederick Vroom, lends excellent support to the story. The production was staged by Jack Ford, who also directed the recent Harry Carey feature, 'Marked Men.'"

Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran blossom forth in their inimitable comedy creation, "The Latest in Pants." The Century Lions are represented in the week's release in a two-reel animal comedy offering: "Tiger Rose and Dandy Lions."

The week also sees "Sold Into Slavery," the ninth episode of "The Lion Man," in which Kathleen O'Connor and Jack Perrin are featured. This episode is said to have its quota of thrilling moments. In the third episode of "Elmo the Fearless," "The Life Line," Elmo Lincoln shows his prowess as a fighter as well as an actor of exceptional merit, several realistic scraps offering a good setting for flying fists, according to reports.

The program is rounded out by a two-reel Western, "The Sheriff's Oath," in which Hoot Gibson and Josephine Hill are featured. It is a light interesting story with a good plot. Hearst's News, International News, the New Screen Magazine and Universal Current Events, news reels, complete the program.

"The Superman" Scoring in the Northwest

"The Superman," the five reel thrilling melodrama being released on the independent market by Tower Film Corp., is reported as meeting with success by the Northwest Exhibitors Circuit of Seattle, Wash., who control this production for the northwestern territory.

Organized Labor Said to Back Keenan Picture

Labor organizations throughout the country are said by Pathe Exchange, Inc., to be supporting a plan to have every organized labor man see Frank Keenan's production, "The World Aflame," distributed by Pathe. There have been more than a score of instances, says Pathe, where labor union locals bought out theatres for two and three days, in order to give full exploitation to "The World Aflame."

"Smouldering Embers" was known under the working title of "Enter—A Vagabond," and is marked by the same human wholesome appeal which is found in "Brothers Divided," his current release.

Mr. Keenan intends to remain East five or six weeks. He is stopping at the home of his son-in-law, Ed Wynn, at Great Neck, when he is not pursuing Wynn's new show or running over to Philadelphia to some boxing bout. Mr. Keenen is a zestful devotee of the manly art.

Arrow Film Increases Selling Forces

The Arrow Film Corporation has recently increased its selling force because of the number of new subjects which have been added to its already long list of pictures, as a consequence of W. E. Shallenberger's negotiations for material while on his recent visit to the coast. Among the recent additions is David Mountain, who will concentrate his efforts at present on the booking of the big new series of features, "Tex, Elucidator of Mysteries," which Arrow is now unloading on the independent market.

Kathleen Kirkham May Be Seen on Stage

Kathleen Kirkham, film star, has been requested to appear in the role of Katherine Burton in "Distinguished Service" at the Community theatre, Los Angeles. It will be Miss Kirkham's first appearance on the speaking stage in five years, during which time she has appeared in pictures exclusively.

"Producer Buries Home Talent"

In a statement just received, Charles Whittaker, who wrote the original story for Maurice Tourneur's production, "Woman," takes the producing powers to task for neglecting the scenario writer in their search for story material and paying out enormous sums of money to authors of the best-sellers, whose work after the purchase must then be adapted to the screen, and sometimes so radically changed, says Mr. Whittaker, that "the plot has been altered out of all recognition in order to fit it to the exigencies of the screen."

Mr. Whittaker says that the great cost of production gets its first rise in the excess initial expenditure, paid out to get a "best-seller." Of course, the exhibitor and finally the public have to pay the bill, says Whittaker. His statement continues: "How far this cynical attitude of producers to scenario writers has limited those same producers may be deduced from the experience of Mr. Cecil de Mille, whose wonderfully successful picture, 'The Cheat,' was drawn from a story deliberately written for the screen by a scenario writer. Then followed a series of pictures which fell far short of this production, artistically and financially—not because Mr. de Mille was failing in his technique as a director, but because he was going to books and plays for his material. When he 'came back with a wallop,' it was with 'Don't Change Your Husband,' written for the screen by his scenario writer, Miss Jeannie MacPherson.

"Almost alone, Mr. Thomas Ince has been ready to recognize and demonstrate the real worth of the screen story (as distinguished from the book or play story), by the development of studio talent in the persons of Mr. C. Gardner Sullivan, Mr. Josephson and others. He has even purchased a story, I understand, from his stenographer, who has evidently turned her studio experience to good account. Mr. Harry Garson is another from whom aspiring writers may get a hearing. 'The Forbidden Woman,' Clara Kimball Young's recently completed picture, was written by a young lady in the Garson studio who so far has been guiltless of writing either a play or a book.

"However, this is not a quarrel with the legitimate author, nor an argument for minus literary merit, but for plus screen insight and technical understanding. Plot ideas may germinate anywhere, and for picture purposes do not need to be swaddled in fine writing, but expand through dramatic action, vivid characterization and artistic setting. Who can do this better than the man on the job who knows what to do and how and when to do it most effectively?"

Chas. Richman Returns as Paramount Star

Charles Richman will be welcomed back to the screen, after an absence of over a year, in Sir J. M. Barrie's play "Half an Hour," in which he will play opposite Dorothy Dalton, Paramount-Artcraft star. The direction of this play is in the hands of Harley Knowles, and the adaptation for the screen was made by Clara Beranger.

Charles Baker Made an Associate Editor

Graham Baker, who for some time has been assistant editor of Vitagraph productions, has been advanced to associate editor. George Randolph Chester is editor-in-chief.

Mr. Baker's new duties will include the selection of the stories for the stars and the handling of the continuities for the same.

New Sperry Searchlight in Fox News Reel

Fox News No. 36 contains an unusual picture of the Sperry High Intensity searchlight in Brooklyn, taken at night in a heavy snowstorm. This light has a candlepower of one billion, it is said, and has been seen as far as 300 miles away.

As a proof of how hard movie stars and directors have to work we offer this photograph of director William A. Seiter and company of the National Film Corporation of America

"Kindliness in Director Gets Best Results"

The method of discipline employed by Director Edward J. Le Saint, of Fox Film Corporation, is unique. He treats his company, from the most menial assistant to the star, with the fullest human consideration—on the assumption that they are not only human, but individuals with understanding. He declares emphatically that his method produces the best results, and contribute much towards the excellence of his pictures—as demonstrated in the first scenes of "The Mother of His Children," now being screened at the California studios of William Fox.

Gladys Brockwell, star of this new picture, seconds the director's judgment in this matter of discipline. He defies the traditional reputation of the motion picture director and never bellows at his people, she asserts. If he finds it necessary to correct or to admonish, he draws the person aside and speaks privately and in the kindest tone.

"It is this spirit that gets across in pictures," Miss Brockwell says. She is a firm believer in the theory that the spirit of harmony in a company of actors makes itself felt in some subtle way in the audience.

Rawlinson to Play In Blackton Production

Herbert Rawlinson has been signed by Commodore J. Stuart Blackton for the leading role in "Passers-By," adapted from the stage play by C. Haddon Chambers. Mr. Rawlinson plays Peter Waverton, an Englishman of birth and distinction, interpreted on the stage by Richard Bennett and later by Charles Cherry, a very different part from that of the "Master Mind" crook, or present day Sherlock Holmes in which he has been concentrating for some time past.

Personal and Otherwise

Roger Lytton is to play a very important part in the next Wisteria production to be made at the Mirror Studio at Glendale. He will again portray one of his well-known "heavy" parts, an exact opposite from the sort of man he is in his current release: the Hallmark production of "High Speed."

Ann May, that delightful little traveler, is back in town after nearly a year's absence. Her latest part, she tells us, is that of the lead opposite Charles Ray in his latest production, not yet released. We are looking forward to it, as Mr. Ray, with Miss May as his leading lady, should be perfectly irresistible. We are afraid that Miss May found the state of the Metropolis rather a shock, after having enjoyed Southern California for so long, especially as her first call was from the Selznick studios in Fort Lee. After phoning in vain for a Black and White, she took the Lexington avenue subway (of course), instead of the Broadway, and then set out to walk across town to the Fort Lee ferry. When she finally arrived at Edgewater, there were no trolleys running. Neither was anything else, and Miss May thought she had walked quite far enough. She phoned the studio, and they replied encouragingly that they had already sent a sleigh to meet her; whereupon Ann realized with horror that the man she had just snubbed unmercifully, because she thought he was trying to flirt with her, must have been the appointed delegate. So she climbed humbly into an uncertain sleigh with a more uncertain driver and a most uncertain horse, and held her breath, intermittently, till the Universal water tower hove in sight. She had never before appreciated its familiarity so well. In fact she had always considered it rather unsightly. She began to hope that her troubles were over, but not so. By the time she was ready to return, even the reliable old ferry had given up in despair, and she must needs go in search of another. Suffice it to say that it took her no less than three hours to reach her Riverside Drive apartment.

Ricca Allen, who has also been out of town for several moons, with the Apex in Indianapolis, is with us again. We were delightfully surprised when, after sending word for "Miss Allen" to come in with no idea as to which Miss Allen it was, no one appeared during an expectant pause, and then slowly, a familiar "character" peered scrutinizingly around the doorway, and "Ricca" rushed in. She is tremendously enthusiastic about picture locations around Indianapolis, and she should be a pretty good judge, as there isn't much of the civilized world that Miss Allen hasn't seen at one time or another. One spot in particular, called "Shades of Death" on account of an Indian legend, she describes as one of the most picturesque places she has ever been in. The outdoor scenes in the Apex productions make the pictures worth seeing for themselves alone, she declares. The studio was thoroughly modern, with all the most up-to-date equipment, and the dressing rooms were charming. She evidently enjoyed her six months stay immensely.

George Beranger is directing George Walsh in a film of which the working title is "Find the Woman" at the College Point studio.

William Sistrom, for many years manager of Universal City, has entire charge of the remodeling of the old Harlem Casino into the new International studio. He reached New York last fall, to find a beer garden and a ball room that he was supposed to convert into a suitable place for an exacting director to start picture production in the same week. He admits that everything was not just as he would like to have had it, but the film work was begun on time, and has been running according to schedule ever since, in spite of the tremendous alterations that have been taking place. Space there is in abundance, for the concrete building occupies an entire block and a half, and consists of five floors, each measuring 179 x 74 feet. Mr. Sistrom is greatly pleased with the prospect of what he is planning to turn it into. Due to his long experience and proven efficiency at Universal, he will have the floor space laid out with accessibility as the first consideration, so that necessary property and wardrobe rooms can be reached easily and quickly, thus saving a great deal of everybody's time. The property rooms, of course, will contain every article known to be needed in film production, the lights will be as plentiful as modern electricians can make them, and no useful facility will be overlooked, as few men know as well as does Mr. Sistrom, precisely what is needed in the producing of successful pictures.

Percy Marmont, having completed "The Sporting Duchess" with Alice Joyce, will be seen next as leading man for Billie Burke, in a new story written for her, which will be directed by John S. Robertson. Mr. Marmont's most recent parts have been five Vitagraph productions, including one opposite Corinne Griffith and four leads for Alice Joyce.

How Screen Took Molly Malone

Petite Molly Malone, who is pleasing film fans with her clever work in Robertson-Cole Supreme Comedies, was literally "forced" into screen work, although she had never had any experience as an actress.

Born in Denver, Colorado, Miss Malone spent the greater part of her early life in traveling with her father, who was an army officer, to army posts in remote corners of the world.

As was natural when she came to Los Angeles, Molly visited the Lasky studio one day with a friend. Her youth and beauty attracted the attention of a director, and she was asked whether she would like to play in "movies." Very much thrilled Molly accepted the offer and for some time appeared in Famous-Players Lasky Productions in small roles. Her work came to the attention of other film producers, and shortly after her first appearance on the screen, Molly left the Lasky Studio to play leading woman opposite Harry Carey. Then came a nine months' engagement with Roscoe Arbuckle as leading lady, after which Miss Malone left to be featured in the Robertson-Cole comedies.

Miss Malone will shortly be seen in "Artistic Temperament," in which she plays the role of an artist. Molly declares this is her favorite picture as she had an opportunity to demonstrate her ability in drawing and painting.

Jefferson Makes Record

What is considered to be a record for a scenario writer was set recently when L. V. Jefferson, editor at the studios of the National Film Corporation of America, turned out eight original screen stories and one complete two-reel continuity in six days. The first of the eight stories is now being filmed by the Flanagan and Edwards Comedy Company and is called "The Road to Ruin."

EQUITY

Equity's Policy

Equity's Policy in the matter of BIG pictures has been proven in its first release, "Eyes of Youth." Equity's coming productions will be of the same character—up among the big winners. "The FORBIDDEN WOMAN" is of that type. So is the next Equity picture now in the course of Production. In addition to making our own big specials, we will take on the marketing of big pictures from other producers, if those pictures measure up to the high standard set by this organization. Correspondence invited.

"Eyes of Youth"

"Eyes of Youth" is making moving picture history in thousands of theatres. It is setting a new standard of entertainment for millions and is bringing thousands of people to picture theatres who never went there before. Naturally this is gratifying to exhibitors. "Eyes of Youth" being one of the big five of the season needs but to be seen, or its accomplishments inquired about to secure your booking. It is being "sought for" more than engagements solicited. As a showman you must understand what that means.

"Silk Husbands & Calico Wives"

"Silk Husbands and Calico Wives" is not a super picture. We dare to say so because we believe exhibitors will appreciate a producer's frank expression in that it is entirely unusual to "call a spade a spade" in the picture business. It is however bigger by far than the average good feature, having a Box Office star, big human interest story, and brilliant cast and will earn fine profits if properly exploited by the helps we have ready prepared for you in an unique campaign book. Special proposition to Independent Exchanges—write for information.

Lynch Declares Scenario Art Is Backbone of Industry

IT was given out this week as the opinion of John Lynch, scenario editor of Selznick Pictures, that the art of preparing the stories for the screen is the very backbone of the whole motion picture industry.

In an interview Mr. Lynch declared that it is surprising how many writers submit absolutely worthless material which they expect to be filmed as "the greatest production ever made."

"The field is open," said Mr. Lynch, "and it is up to the writers to turn out material worthy of production, as there is no doubt in the minds of any picture officials that the scenarioist is the man of the hour."

"The Cinema industry is too widely diffused, too various in aim, and employs too many branches of art and commerce to ascribe its probable success or failure to any one agent," said John Lynch, "but I am tempted to say the most important single factor in the motion picture of the future will be the writer—the man who makes the plot for the actor to interpret, the director to adapt, the cameraman to photograph, the business office to release, and the exhibitor to show. It all goes back to the humble pen pusher who burns the midnight oil thinking up new situations for the hero and heroine, or rather, putting a new kick into the world-old situation. He must start the ball rolling.

"The cinema industry is too great and important a business to depend on a by-product for its source of supply—that is to say, on scenarios adapted from books, short stories, or plots written in their spare time by authors who will not, or cannot, master the technique of screen writing. The screen is worthy of the best efforts of the best writers—the rewards are great, both financially and artistically. The market is open, the demand exceeds the supply—yet authors continue to send in the most utter drivel—shavings from their work bench, in a word, in the deluded idea that everything is good enough for the screen.

"The time has come when the screen folk must demand the best for their use; to pay well for it, and to make use of it. The author should be played up, and encouraged to give of his best, to respect the films as an important branch of the arts, and to master the technique of writing scenarios. After a plot passes thru a half dozen hands, it is no longer recognizable. First as a story, then a synopsis, then put into continuity form by a third person, adapted by another and played by yet a fifth, rare is the author's original idea that reaches the screen. And a great deal of this could be obviated by the writer himself knowing what he is really writing about."

Mr. Lynch is well qualified to talk on the subject of successful writing for the screen, as he is considered one of the most valuable contributors to film drama in the history of the motion picture. Within the past three years he has written, seen produced and released more than forty-five feature pictures, many of them being played by Dorothy Dalton, William Hart, and other notable stars. He is at present engaged in editing film stories for the Selznick stars, and has written no original dramas for some months. He is convinced that the scenario writer is the man of the hour in the moving picture, and believes that the importance of new, entertaining, clever and modern plots cannot be overlooked in the production of pictures, aside from the excellence of stars and directors. They must be given proper material to work with, or they are handicapped, he says.

It Pays to Be Bad

Arthur Millette, prominent as a deep-dyed villain on the stage for twenty years, did so well in the bad man's part in J. Warren Kerrigan's new Hodkinson release "Live Sparks" that the popular artist and his producer, Robert Brunton, have engaged him to display another brand of his villainy in the forthcoming Kerrigan production. "A Prince of Bad Men," is how the star characterizes Millette.

The stock exchange in every detail has been reproduced for the forthcoming Famous-Players Lasky production, "The Cost," starring Violet Heming

Two Directors on Bessie Love's Pictures

The motion picture world will watch with interest for the outcome of a unique experiment that is to be tried by the Andrew J. Callahan Company in making the new Bessie Love productions. Miss Love is to have two directors on each story.

It will be a costly experiment, for the combined salaries of Mr. de Grasse and Miss Park—who, by the way, are husband and wife, and formerly were on the stage together—call for an outlay on this item of production that has never been expended on any other star.

"We have taken this course," said Mr. Callahan, "because we believe that it will more than justify itself in results. We shall have on every step of the way the benefit of the masculine and feminine viewpoints. I need not point out that in the case of many stories this will be of very great value. For a certain kind of story, it is obvious that all the vigor of the masculine nature ought to be brought to bear upon the conceptions that enter into direction; on the other hand, there are sentimental situations, dealing with incidents in which the feminine psychology dominates, that can best be interpreted by one of that sex.

Norma Talmadge Said to Have Received Unusual Welcome on Visit to Cuba

Norma Talmadge, who has been spending a three weeks' vacation at the Hotel Sevilla at Havana, Cuba, has been received with the most astonishing attentions ever tendered a screen star, according to reports. On the day of her arrival there were flowers from forty-six unknown admirers, filling every nook and crevice in her suite, it is said. Miss Talmadge has been receiving over a hundred letters a day at the hotel, and the theatres have been decorated with gaily colored banners, which look like a welcoming tribute to a returned war hero, but are, in fact, announcements to the public that all previous programs have been cancelled, in order to show only Talmadge pictures during the screen star's personal visit to Havana.

Norma, it is stated, has been entertained by all the most prominent citizens, diplomats, and government officials, and has had a round of dances, dinners and entertainments at country clubs, such as she has never known before in her busy screen career.

Universal

The production of three new features has been started at Universal City in the past few days. One is that directed by Lynn Reynolds, which will star Harry Carey in a story of the Canadian and American west by John Frederick, entitled "Luck." Kathleen O'Connor has been selected as leading woman for Carey in this company and the supporting cast includes Beatrice Burnham, Jay Farrell MacDonald, Will Ryno, Fred Gamble, Robert McKim and others.

Jack Ford is to direct the making of "The Girl in the Mirror," which is from the Elizabeth Jordan popular novel, adapted for the screen by Philip Hurn. Frank Mayo is to be featured with Claire Anderson, Eleanor Fair and Harry Hilliard in leading roles. Others taking part in the cast are Ray Ripley, Bull Montana, Arthur Hoyt and Robert Golden. One of the features of this film will be a rough and tumble fight between Mayo and Bull Montana; the latter is an ex-champion wrestler.

Edith Roberts has been engaged to play the leading role in the comedy drama entitled "The Daring Duchess" and her part in this is said to be something similar to that she played in "Lasca" and "The Triflers." Harold Miller is to be leading man of this company and a very notable cast has been selected, which includes Kathryn Kirkham, Ogden Crane, Leota Lorraine, Rudolph Christians, Stanley Beecroft and others.

All of the Universal serial companies are at work, including Albert Russell, who has made the final scenes for the last episode of "The Lion Man," which is an adaptation from the Randall Terry story, "The Strange Case of Cavendish." Work has been resumed by the Moon Riders serial company, which is headed by Art Acord, the star having recovered from injuries received in a fall, so that he can appear in a number of scenes, but he still finds it necessary to use crutches when moving about.

Two short subjects are being made; one is directed by Reeves Eason, who has "Hoot" Gibson as his star and is making "The Rattler's Hiss" with Mildred Moore as leading woman.

Arthur Flaven is directing another short western photoplay entitled "Held for a Honeymoon," which has Josephine Hill and Robert Reeves in the principal roles.

"The Vanishing Dagger" serial company is now at work on the twelfth episode and plan to complete the serial by the first of May, at which time Eddie Polo, the star and director, will leave for a trip to South America and uba, where one or more five-reel features will be made. Polo recently entered into a contract with the Universal, which provides he shall be with them for the next four years. This is the longest contract made with any Universal player to this time.

Rollin Sturgeon is to direct the next Priscilla Dean picture, which will be "False Colors," by Edwina Le Vine.

The third feature for Tsuru Aoki is to be "A Tokio Siren," which is based on the Gwendolyn Logan story entitled "Sayonara." Scenes for this are laid in Tokio and San Francisco. The director for this subject has not been named.

The team of Lyons and Moran are now at work on their initial five-reel comedy feature, "Everything but the Truth," and have selected as their leading women Anne Cornwall and Kathryn Lewis. Miss Cornwall is a new comer to films and is direct from New York, where she made a success of her part with the Dolly Sisters in "Oh! Look."

Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven, co-stars in Paramount-Carter De Haven comedies

Brunton

The many conflicting rumors respecting the Mayflower company since they were brought into litigation in New York by George Loane Tucker were put at rest, so far as the west coast is concerned, when definite information was given respecting future production activities.

Alan Dwan has made the statement that he is going to remain with Mayflower until the expiration of his contract in July, thereby editing the three pictures he now has filmed and making one additional subject. All of these are referred to by Dwan as having non-star casts. The films to be edited are an adaptation of the William Allen White story, "The Splendid Hazard"; adaptation of Harold McGrath's "In the Heart of a Fool," and an original story named "A Scoffer." Mr. Dwan will make a trip to New York and upon his return, the latter part of February, will begin the work of editing the films and preparing material for his next subject.

Sidney A. Franklin has been engaged by the Mayflower, and now at work with two scenario writers preparing screen version of the Robert W. Chambers story, "Athalie," which is based upon spiritualism and the occult. Franklin, it will be remembered, directed several pictures for Norma Talmadge, and "The Hoodlum" and "Heart of the Hills" for Mary Pickford.

The recently formed company to star Bessie Love in a series of comedy dramas is reported to be ready for producing, and will work at the Brunton studios. Joseph Callahan, organizer of the company that filmed two photoplays with Fred Stone in the summer and fall of last year, is organizer of this new producing company.

Benjamin B. Hampton will next produce a Winston Churchill novel with an all star cast, under the direction of Jack Conway. Players engaged for this film are Claire Adams, King Baggot, Robert McKim, Buela Booker, Aggie Herring and a number of others. Conway has just recently completed the filming of the Zane Grey story, "The Desert of Wheat."

Metro

The Metro plant is to have additional improvements, according to a decision of the officers, who are now at the West coast studios. An appropriation of $45,000 has been made for the building of an enclosed stage, which will be the third of this kind at the Metro plant. Work on this is to begin immediately.

The next screen vehicle for Bert Lytell has been selected and is "The Temple of Dawn," which will be an adaptation from the I. A. R. Wylie story of the same name. It will be remembered that Miss Wylie is the author of the two stories that were used for the screen story "Stronger Than Death," a recent Nazimova production. Arthur Zellner of the Metro staff is now preparing the continuity for the Lytell pictures, while the star is working in the final scenes for "Alias Jimmy Valentine."

Everything is in readiness for the filming of the first of the Jack London series, "Burning Daylight," which will star Mitchell Lewis. Director Edwin Sloman will make the first scenes during the coming week.

All of the Metro companies are nearing completion of the subjects on which they have been working for the past four to eight weeks. These include "Eliza Comes to Stay," with Viola Dana; "The Cheater," starring May Allison; "Shore Acres," with Alice Lake; "The Hop," with an all-star cast, and "Old Lady 31," starring Emma Dunn.

Finis Fox of the Metro scenario department has resumed work at the studio after an absence of two weeks as a result of an automobile accident, in which the bones of one foot were broken and the writer received bad cuts over the eye.

The Metro company has added two new members to its stock organization: King Baggot has been signed to play opposite May Allison in "The Cheater," an adaptation from the stage drama "Judah." The second is a new ingenue for the films just from a girl's finishing school near Philadelphia. This is Mary Beaton, who the first few days at the studio took small parts in "Alias Jimmy Valentine" and "Shore Acres."

Selznick

The forces of the Selznick interests in Los Angeles were visited this week by V. P. Whittaker, general representative, who spent several days here with Manager of Production Harry Rapp and others of the producing forces, as well as going over conditions at the offices of the exchanges.

Randolph Bartlett, recently re-employed by the Selznick organization to serve in the capacity of supervising director of publicity and advertising of the various Selznick interests, is remaining in Los Angeles for two or three weeks more prior to returning to New York to assume his new work there.

Lindsey McKenna, who for the past six months has been in charge of Canadian publicity and exploitation for the Selznick interests, has been transferred to the Los Angeles studios to serve as publicity manager there for Selznick Productions, Republic Pictures and National Picture Theatre subjects. He arrived in Los Angeles during the past week and has already assumed his new work.

Goldwyn

The Rupert Hughes story, "Scratch My Back," Eminent Authors production, directed by Sidney Olcott, will have a cast including T. Roy Barnes, Helene Chadwick and Lloyd Whitlock and the company has gone to San Francisco for the making of the first scenes.

Al Green, who recently has been directing for Harry Garson productions, has been engaged by Goldwyn and will guide Jack Pickford in his next subject, "The Double Dyed Deceiver," adapted from an O. Henry story. The cast for this film is now being selected.

Reginald Barker is next to film "The Branding Iron," and it is expected work on the first scenes will begin during the coming week.

Victor Schertzinger has "The Slim Princess" in production, which will be a starring vehicle for Mabel Normand, and work has been started on the Gouverneur Morris story, "The Penalty," under the direction of Wallace Worsley. Cast for this film was recently selected, the leads being Lon Chaney, Claire Adams, Kenneth Harlan, Ethel Grey Terry and Charles Clary.

This is one of the "heart rending" scenes from Christie's new comedy, "Save Me, Sadie," in which Helen Darling, Eddie Barry, Earl Rodney and Gene Carey have principal roles

The proposed trip of the Frank Lloyd company for the filming of scenes for "Roads of Destiny," starring Pauline Frederick, has been abandoned, as transportation to Cuba could not be secured without a long wait. Instead of Cuba, the company will go to Victorville, where similar location to those of Cuba can be secured.

Director E. Mason Hopper has completed the second of the Edgar series.

T. Hayes Hunter is still at work on "Earthbound," and Director Clarence Badger is taking the last scenes for "Jes Call Me Jim."

President Samuel Goldwyn of the Goldwyn company has advised the West Coast studios that he is shortly coming to the coast and he is expected to arrive within the next week.

F. P.—Lasky

It has been determined that Charles Main, who came west to direct a film version of the Robert W. Chambers' story, "The Fighting Chance," will remain in Hollywood to make another film, but as yet the story has not been decided upon. He has all scenes for "The Fighting Chance" completed. This film co-stars Conrad Nagle and Anna Q. Nilsson.

William C. DeMille has made the final scenes for "The Prince Chap." The last to be made were those in the interior of the "William Peyton" home and at the studio they are considered to be the most beautiful settings ever erected for a screen play at this studio. In fact, these settings are referred to as reproductions of Maxfield Parrish paintings.

Bryant Washburn is now at work in "Sins of St. Anthony," a characterization of a young chemist, who becomes so engrossed in work that he overlooks his personal appearance and is finally thrown over by his sweetheart. This causes him to seek modern culture of every kind, and in this he takes dancing lessons and falls in love with his teacher. This role is taken by Margaret Newman, professional dancer, formerly of the Orpheum and other big circuits. James Cruze is director of this film.

The subject which Wallace Reed is working on at present is decidedly different from his recently made film, "The Dancin' Fool." Inasmuch as practically all of his time will be spent in bed, in "Sick a-Bed," adapted from the stage comedy of the same name. Exterior scenes for this are now being made from the script prepared by Clara Kennedy. Sam Woods is continuing as director and Bebe Daniels is leading woman for Reed's film.

Because of undesirable weather conditions in the mountains, George Melford and company returned to the studio last week from making scenes for "The Roundup," but upon telegraphic advice early this week they again returned to exterior location. The company has had about four weeks' stay in the mountains, but none seem any the worse for the camping out and reports have it that Roscoe Arbuckle has taken on additional flesh instead of losing any by his ride on mountain canary and the chuck wagon used for camp life.

Tom Forman is to do his first directorial work when he takes up the filming of the coming Ethel Clayton story, "The Ladder." Walter Edwards was to direct this film, but a vacation has been granted him, and Forman, who has been with the Lasky company for the past four years as actor and writer, will be stationed behind the camera with a megaphone.

Other films in production are "Held by the Enemy," from the William Gillette play, being directed by Donald Crisp, and "The City of Masks," from the George Barr McCutcheon story, being directed by Thomas B. Heffron. Robert Warwick and Lois Wilson are the principals of the latter.

Vitagraph

The Vitagraph organization was increased one producing unit this week by the arrival of Earle Williams and others, who will take part in the completing scenes for "Captain Swift." Interiors for this film were made in New York and the exteriors will be made by Chester Bennett in California.

Antonio Moreno, Director William Bowman, Pauline Curley and other members of "The Invisible Hand," Vitagraph company, are now making the last episode for this serial. Script provides that scenes in Los Angeles harbor, Catalina Islands and aboard ocean liners will be used in this final episode.

The Montgomery and Rock troup, which includes Patsey DeForest as leading woman and Melville Brown as director, have gone to Tia Juana, where a race track comedy will be completed. This is laid in a Spanish village and many of the exteriors will be made in the vicinity of San Diego.

Here and There

G. B. Samuelson, the British producer working at Universal City, this week chartered a Pacific Ocean freighter for the Madge Titherage company, which is filming "Her Story." Opposite the star in this are C. M. Hallard and Campbell Gullan, well known players of the English stage.

The first of the Samuelson films starring Peggy Hyland "At the Mercy of Tiberius," from the novel of the same name, will be finished within a week by Fred Le Roy Granville, who is directing the subject.

The recently organized Sylvanite Productions has one company at work at the Inceville ranch in the making of a western melodrama under the direction of Alvin J. Neitz. This organization plans to make a series of western pictures with all-star western players, and have engaged some of the best western stunt cowboys of the film colony. Mr. Neitz has been identified with the industry for the past several years in the capacity of writer and has a number of very excellent stories for the screen to his credit. Robert Sullivan, former Denver banker, is general manager of this producing company.

David Horsley has returned to Los Angeles from a stay of several months in New York, where he has been perfecting plans for future film productions. Mr. Horsley states he will make announcement very shortly of his future intentions.

The Warner Brothers have selected title of "The Paper Hanger" for the next comedy of Al St. John, and have engaged Ferris Hartman, former producer of musical comedy, to assist the comedian-director in his work.

Marshall Neilan has engaged as co-director Henry R. Symonds to fill the place left vacant by Victor Herrman, who has gone to the Harry Garson studios to direct a special production. Symonds has been identified with Henry Lehrman for the past five years.

The Haworth company has engaged Wallace MacDonald to play the lead opposite Edith Storey in "Moon Madness," now being filmed under the direction of Colin Campbell.

Local capitalists identified with one of the leading Los Angeles banks have financed a motion picture producing company to be supervised by Norman Manning, who has served as business manager at several west coast plants. It is the intention of the company to film a series of feature productions of from five to seven reels, each to be released as Norman Manning Productions. The first will be titled "Spotted Heat," from an original story by H. H. Van Loan, which has scenes laid in the Hawaiian Islands, San Francisco and New York. It is the intention of the company to feature the author and producer in their advertising, and the productions will have an all-star cast.

The King W. Vidor company is this week working on steamboats on the Sacramento River for a number of exterior scenes for "The Family Honor." The scenes taken in the north will constitute the last needed for this new producer's initial First National subject, and immediately upon his return all efforts will be directed toward the editing of the film. What will be made next is yet to be determined, but it is understood Vidor has under consideration several books by well known writers, one of which will probably be selected.

Douglas Fairbanks and Tom Geraghty are working on their next story, which they now believe will be ready for production work within the next week. Up to this time the two have given about eight weeks to the preparation of the story and script, which is an original one for the screen, it being Mr. Fairbanks' belief that stories must be created for the screen if motion pictures are to continue to hold their popularity.

While the story has been in preparation the technical staff of the studio, under the direction of Robert Fairbanks, has been making plans for some additional novelties which will outdo those introduced in "When the Clouds Roll By." One of the interesting props prepared is a land and sea schooner, which will serve as a mode of conveyence in water as well as on any kind of land. The schooner will be given a very severe test, as it is to be transported to the eastern part of Arizona and then will take the company of twenty to location, which requires fourteen days of travel from the railroad station.

Director Melville Brown and Eral Montgomery, Vitagraph comedian discuss a scene for the next Vitagraph comedy with this star.

ON THE FOX LOT

Story for the next William Russell Fox production has been selected and is titled "Leave It to Me." This is a comedy drama and promises to be the funniest in which this star has appeared. Emmett J. Flynn is to continue as director of Mr. Russell, and, with the company and star, is now at Santa Barbara using some of the magnificent residences there for exterior locations.

Four Fox dramatic companies are completing pictures this week, this list including "The Mother of Her Children," by Barbara Lamar Deely; "Molly and I," directed by Howard M. Mitchell and starring Shirley Mason; "The Iron Mask," a Denison Clift story, directed by the author, starring Madlaine Traverse, and "One-Quarter Apache," the western, directed by Jacques Jaccard, with Tom Mix as star. Francelia Billington plays the lead in the latter.

HAMPTON

Jesse D. Hampton, who has completed his organization and now located at his new studios, expects to materially better productions of the future. His scenario staff includes Waldemar Young, George Elwood Jenks, Fred Myton and Eugene B. Lewis, with Dwight Cleveland as editor. E. L. Smith will continue as studio manager; Gavin Young, casting director, and R. C. McNitt, art director, with Howard Morton as New York representative.

Cast has been selected for the film version of "Behind Red Curtains," and this provides that Anna Q. Nilsson shall be leading woman for H. B. Warner. Others to play in this subject are Frank Leigh, Thomas Guise, Dorothy Hagar, Adele Farrington, Lillian Rich, J. P. Lockney, Howard Davies and others. This story requires elaborate society settings.

Dwight Cleveland, new scenario editor for Mr. Hampton, has gone to New York for a conference with Howard Morton respecting the purchase of story material for Blanche Sweet, William Desmond and H. B. Warner.

The recently filmed Blanche Sweet subject, "Simple Souls," was recently given a preview in the Hampton studios and has been shipped to New York by release through Pathe.

Sid Grauman had Martin Beck, Adoplh Zukor and Smauel Goldwyn paged in the Alexandria when members of the Metro organization were assembled for a dinner tendered by the stars and players to Marcus Loew and President Rowland. Everybody tried to see if the parties paged were present.

SPEAKING OF PUTTEES!

Now that the moneyed interests have a corner on leather, and thereby are in position to greatly increase the price of commodities made from their wares, the demand for puttees is said to be much greater than ever before, and with so many wearing them, the task of discovering who was the original introducer, becomes even more difficult. Then too, the leather trust has introduced the wearing of leather coats, and meeting one with a long coat and puttees, makes it impossible to tell whether the man is wearing puttees or leather breeches. But a few difficulties encountered in the quest for definite puttee information have been mentioned, but the reader could be burdened with many more. Suffice to say, puttees have been introduced as an official part of a director's garb, and anybody who don't believe it is hereby respectfully referred to the chief of the wardrobe department of any studio. Puttees may come, or puttees may go, but HOKUM hopes to go on forever. (Quick curtain, or as we say in the films, rapid iris.)

News Notes

Carl Fulton, sales manager of the E. E. Fulton Co. of Chicago, has been in New York for several days. He reports the line of Fulton products as traveling faster than ever before. The firm is also expected to bring out several new devices during 1920, some of which will be a distinct departure from their usual line.

That gang of hustlers that go by the name of the Monsoon Cooling System are certainly selling their "fresh air proposition." The new Capitol theatre at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., described at length in this week's Equipment Section, has been signed up for one of the Monsoon Systems.

Following close on the heels of this contract comes another one signed up by J. F. Dailey. Mr. Dailey has just returned from Berwick after signing up Mr. C. E. Sitler of that place for one of the Systems to be installed in the new P.O.S. of A. Opera House which is now being altered.

Last Week We Met—George A. Blair

THIS genial representative of the Eastman Kodak Company, of all members of this industry least needs an introduction. Particularly if the reader ever happens to have had the need of a strip of film in any length from one inch to a million feet. For George is at the head of the motion picture department at Rochester and as such knows film from its first raw ingredient to the exposed product as well as those who use it.

Unless the gentleman is "pumped" in approved newspaper style, the interviewer does not realize the vast amount of information contained ready for instant use in the Blair cranium. Besides his comprehensive knowledge of the field he is better acquainted probably with actual conditions as they exist in laboratory and exchange than any other man in the industry.

And when you've mentioned Blair's wide knowledge of the craft, his wholehearted devotion to the firm with which he is connected and his suave even flowing disposition you've described the man to perfection. His characteristics have made him a friend of everyone in the motion picture industry.

But even a little sketch such as this would not be finished unless slight mention were made of his one evil—which consists of an insatiable desire for fishing in Canadian lakes whenever he imagines the whir of the reel or the slight spat of the fly on the water's surface. But then, if a man is an expert angler for business during 'leven twelfths of the year he is certainly entitled to a let-down while he goes after another and—shall we say it, Mr. Blair—more wily object the remaining time.

As an evidence of the strides that the smaller theatres are making comes the report from Cherokee, Iowa, that the new American theatre in that town is to have a regular press agent just like its larger but no better city theatre friends. Mr. Goldie, the new director of publicity for Sisk and James, the owners of the American, has been a frequent contributor to the NEWS and we know that his knowledge extends to every part of theatre management. We await to see if his "flimsy sheets" will have a different way about them than the style his brother scribes in the large city have adopted.

Auditorium Lobby

The Capitol Theatre, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

THE M. E. Comerford Amusement Company, with headquarters for their circuit of forty-seven houses at the Regent Theatre Building in Scranton, Pa., have announced that the new theatre, the Capitol, now in course of construction at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., will be ready to open by the first of May; that Breig Bros., the contractors, are rapidly overcoming the obstacles placed by the steel and coal strike and the always stormy weather of northeastern Pennsylvania in December and January.

The Capitol will be located on Public Square in Wilkes-Barre, the center of the city's business activities and directly behind, with the lobby adjoining, the Fort Durkee Hotel. A central city site has long been the despair of prospective theatre builders in Wilkes-Barre and the problem has been solved by "Mike" Comerford, who is credited with being one of the shrewdest, most far-sighted men in the amusement game in this section of the country. Every street car and public bus will pass the Capitol's door; even to the suburban cars and this, in Wilkes-Barre, is a big item in the handling of theatre crowds for Wilkes-Barre depends, in no small extent, upon the out-of-the-city patronage.

The Capitol theatre was designed by Leon H. Lempert & Son of Rochester, N. Y., who also planned the new Strand theatre for the Comerford people in Binghamton, N. Y., which will be managed by Fred Gillen of that city, and the Strand theatre in Scranton, Pa. The house will seat 3,200 people on orchestra, mezzanine and balcony floors. The entrance to all sections of the house will be through the main lobby and this lobby will be one of the featured beauty spots of the new house. A grand stair case of Italian and Vermont marble will lead from the main lobby to the mezzanine and from there to the balcony proper.

There will be thirty-eight rows of orchestra chairs on the lower floor arranged in three sections and without one single seat being obstructed by a post or overhang, and in the balcony there will be twenty-four rows of chairs, these in three sections, and they to be preceded with eight rows of mezzanine chairs in a most luxurious arrangement; these to be of a wicker type. On the mezzanine floor will be located the lounge, the ladies' retiring and rest rooms and, what will be an innovation in this part of the country, a reception room which will be a model of beauty and art; a real "green" room of other days, only located in the front of the theatre and for the patrons rather than "back stage" and for the artists.

Lighting to Be a Feature

The management plan on making the lighting of the theatre a feature and with this in view have consulted the best known lighting experts in the country, who have submitted plans. R. T. Swartz, chief electrician of the Comerford Circuit, has planned the front of the house effects. Every house light, interior and exterior, will be controlled from both the stage and the booth, a plan that will make safety absolute in every way. The X-Ray equipment alone for the Capitol cost in excess of $5,000. In the ceiling cove of the auditorium will be 270 sixty watt lamps backed by eight-inch X-Ray reflectors and in the ceiling dome there will be ninety-six lamps also backed with reflectors; on the balcony front will be 48 one hundred watt lamps and these will be in three colors and all of these effects are so arranged that they can be thrown from absolute darkness to bright daylight.

Progress on Capitol, up to Jan. 1. The two center beams are over 82 feet in length and weigh 32 tons and 21 tons respectively

The stage board and the dimmers have been planned by A. J. Kutchera, chief engineer of the Cutter-Hammer Company of New York. The board is banked with twenty-eight dimmers and contains ninety-one individual switches for every part of the theatre and stage proper. Each color and section separate and controlled by its own master switch and these, in turn, controlled by the main master. From the balcony there will be a series of spot lights or search lights that will play, with vari-colored effect, on the paintings by the G. A. Brand Company of Chicago, who have been given the contract for the decorations.

The color scheme of the interior will be ivory and old rose and most of the sides will be silken tapestries. In this department there will be several radical departures from the commonplace, in fact the entire scheme of decoration will be a surprise and this will extend to the stage where the scenery will be of the "new art" type and where each week there will be different stage settings to accompany the showing of the feature picture.

The projection room, built entirely outside of the theatre proper, will have a throw of 135 feet from the screen and will be equipped with two of the latest model machines as well as with every other device so far perfected for the proper projection of the film subject. In the booth there will also be the flood and spot lights to be used as occasion demands. There will also be the stereoptican machines for the slide announcements.

The heating will be the combined direct and blast type. Floor coverings will be of ceramic tile and wood. As a fire risk the house should secure a particularly good rating, for it will be constructed entirely of brick, steel and concrete, reinforced with tile throughout. Additional precautions have been taken by the installation of a sprinkler and stand pipe system in the front of the theatre, back stage and in the dressing rooms, with hose racks in available parts of the theatre and yet hidden in such a way that they will not be a mar to the beauty of the theatre.

The stage will have a proscenium opening of 45 feet, the width from wall to wall will be 80 feet and the depth 47 feet. There will be sixty-five set of lines on the gridiron, twelve dressing rooms, all with hot and cold water, two bath rooms with shower baths, an elevator to the upper floors and the fly gallery and the counterweight system with a pliable steel cable instead of the hemp rope as usually used.

The Capitol will be practically panic proof, for there are eighteen sets of double 5-foot doors on the main floor and the balcony exits lead onto fire escapes on one side covered with a high grille, and on the other side they lead into towers set on the outside of the building and which are five feet in width.

The Capitol will have a policy of feature pictures with shorter subjects of comedy, historical, educational and travel interest with several added features of a musical nature and booked through one of the important lyceum and musical celebrity offices. While the Comerford Amusement Company already have seven theatres in Wilkes-Barre, the Capitol theatre will be an entirely separate institution and under the personal management of Frank Whitbeck, who, since his return from France, has been looking after the advertising and exploitation of the various houses on the Comerford Circuit.

Cumberland Theatre, Brooklyn, a Model for Community Houses

AFTER running continuously since June 1913, the Cumberland Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., was shut down during the early fall of 1919 and thoroughly renovated and redecorated, inside and out. When it reopened one of the best equipped and managed community theatres in the New York District was made available to its patrons. Situated at one side of a public square, the façade of the Cumberland is visible for a considerable distance down the streets in two directions, and its elevation all in ivory white makes it both attractive and distinctive when viewed in comparison with its surroundngs.

The theatre which seats 600 is equipped with every convenience for the comfort of its guests. These refinements apply not only to the seating arrangements but also to the color and art treatments.

There are few theatres of the size of the Cumberland that can boast of such a beautiful auditorium. The ceiling is dome shaped with all lights set into and flush with the surface. Diffusing glass is used to cover the ceiling outlets. Inside each ceiling receptacle arrangements have been made to allow for the use of six different colors of lamps, to aid in carrying out the lighting effects for which the Cumberland is locally famous.

On the side walls the illumination is furnished by wall lights enclosed in elliptical receptacles, the glass of which is vari-colored in order to give a soft pleasing tone to the light rays. There is a noticeable absence of glare from these wall lights, and they can in no way affect the eyes of the patrons or the definition of the picture on the screen.

It is in the matter of ventilation that most of the smaller houses are guilty. Very few of them have been equipped with sufficient capacity to care for the supplying of fresh air to a crowded auditorium, especially during the humid days of summer. In this respect the Cumberland far exceeds the average house of its class. Ventilating fans of greatly sufficient capacity exhaust the devitalized air from the auditorium through outlets in the side walls and a number of oscillating fans on wall brackets keep the lower stratum of air in constant circulation.

Frames, Easels, Rails, Grilles, Signs, Choppers, Kick Plates, Door Bars

A FEW REASONS

why "NEWMAN" METAL FRAMES have been chosen by all the big circuits and best class of theatres.

1—Because the constant exposure to all sorts of weather conditions cannot affect "NEWMAN" NON-CORROSIVE METAL FRAMES.

2—Because of their richness in beauty and design, they liven the entrance and render the lobby more inviting than any other kind of frames.

3—Because they will outlast a dozen wood frames. They are practically un-wear-out-able.

What the architect says:

The engineering staff of Monsoon Cooling System, Inc., has laid out and installed several systems for theatres designed by us. We are glad to say that these systems are giving the best of satisfaction — ventilating perfectly at all seasons of the year. The cooling results in hot weather have been excellent; and the houses are exceptionally comfortable during the hottest summer-days. Every house equipped with the Monsoon System does a good business during the hot season.

them are the product of the manager, Mr. John Manis. Mr. Manis, who by the way has been unusually successful in his management due to his appreciation of the needs of his patrons, was convinced that to make a motion picture successful the illusion should be maintained to as high a degree as possible. One of his firm beliefs is that the white screen should never be viewed by the audience unless a picture is being shown. To do this it is necessary that some sort of a movable covering be arranged over the face of the screen. The larger theatres can afford expensive machinery to move curtains but this is generally out of the question as regards the smaller exhibitor.

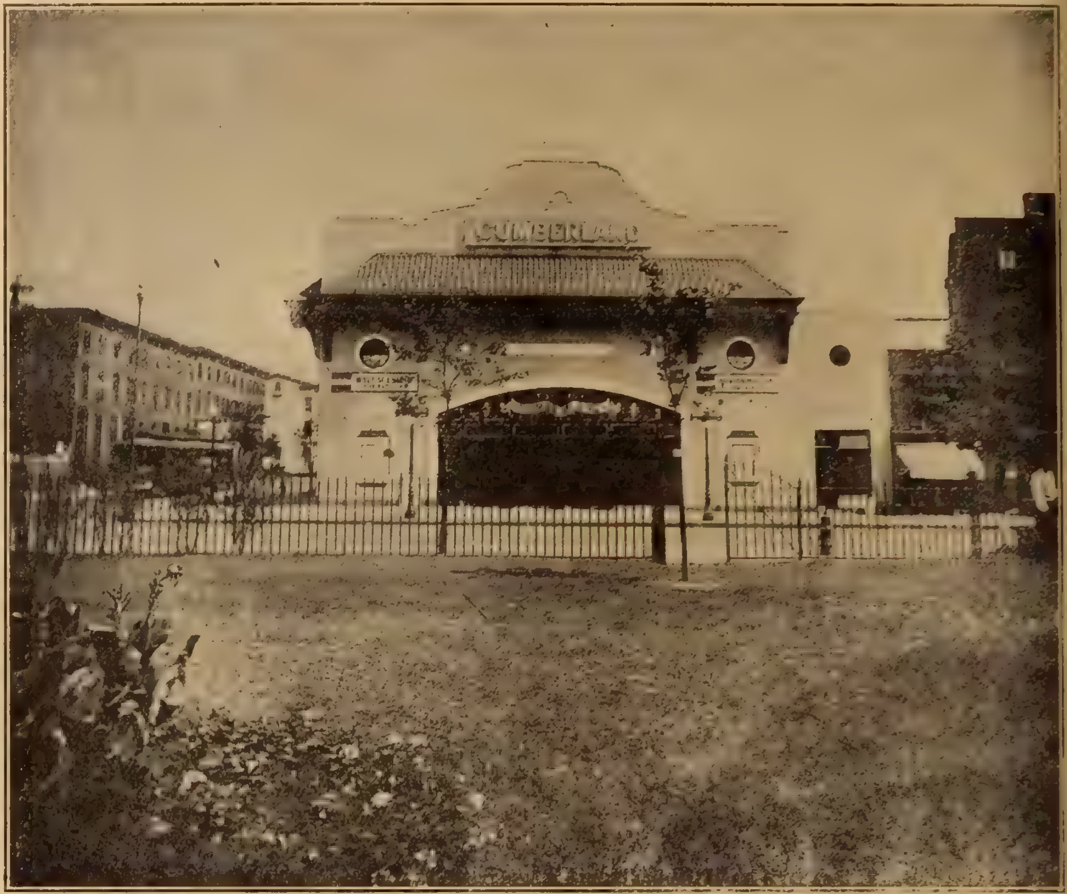
Requiring a device of this sort Mr. Manis went to work and perfected a curtain regulator of his own and its operation has been so successful that he intends to patent it and offer it to the trade.

Besides possessing considerable mechanical ability, Mr. Manis has used his knowledge of theatre management to good effect in putting into execution some other innovations. For instance, instead of scheduling the "Overture" at the commencement of his first evening performance as most managers do, he arranges his program so that the "Overture" comes just prior to the feature. With this arrangement the Overture can be enjoyed by patrons who arrive a trifle late and what is perhaps of even greater importance the enjoyment of those already seated is not interrupted by late arrivals. By the time the Overture with its beautiful lighting effects is put on the house is practically full and the audience is in a receptive mood for the success of the musical feature.

All effects and illumination are controlled from the projection room, in charge of Jack Lazarus and Charles Spicer, both members of the American Projection Society. The machines are Bairds which have been installed for four years. Due to the care of the men in charge the projectors are kept in perfect condition and produce a picture that can't be improved upon. The condition of the projection room is such that it would do credit to a "Spotless Town."

Directly between the two machines are the dimmers for controlling the lighting effects. Before the overture is put on the projectionists study it and devise a series of the effects that have been the means of drawing a select clientele to the Cumberland.

The general atmosphere of the theatre, the quality of the projection and the class of pictures that are run all point to the effectiveness of a combination of intelligent Manager and Projectionists. The Cumberland could serve as a model for community theatres of its size.



The Cumberland Theatre with its unusual type of theatre front architecture is an ideal community house.

Is Convinced That He Has Located Individuals Who Are Doing Most Damage to Films

W. B. Allen, President of Local 360, Supports His Beliefs with Proofs

SOMETIME ago we mentioned the fact that the popular official of the Edmonton Local was keeping in the dark. He accepted our defi as to what he was doing by coming along with a regular letter in which he takes certain organizations to task and doesn't leave off pursuing them until he has had the very last say. His letter says:

Just received Jan 17th issue of the "NEWS" and upon turning to the P. D. noticed the name of M. H. Thoreau and having seen the name several times before I decided to listen to what the aforementioned Gentleman had to say and upon listening long enough it was discovered that he was discussing the age-old subject of City versus Town Projectionists. So seeing that Brother Thoreau asks for my opinion on the subject here goes. (I'm never backward about expressing my opinion on any subject).

Regarding the condition of the films I handle I can say that a punch hole is a rare thing with me but I agree with the Bro. when he says that the films are not in the condition that they should be in considering that they have only played the high class houses i. e. about six or seven of the so-called high class theatres. The features I run are fine except for a little oil, a few scratches at the beginning and end of each reel and no leaders or trailers. Then some of the features are in a deplorable conditions and one might stop to wonder how it got that way, well, here is the secret in two small words: THE CENSORS. Those are the fellows that you must watch. They are the parties that are getting away with it and apparently nobody even suspects. So I am going to take it upon myself and expose the censors and lay the blame where it rightfully belongs. Now listen and see if I am not handing out the facts: Now, the features I run are all practically the same age on the road, they have all gone through the same theatres, the same machines, the same number of times, under the same conditions and are handled by the same Projectionists. Alright, I think that you will agree with me that far, if so, follow on and we'll investigate a little further. Now, we must furnish the answer to this question, taking into consideration the fact that each feature goes through the same 'mill'. IF THE FILMS ALL GO THROUGH THE VERY SAME PROCESS, WHY ARE SOME IN EXCELLENT CONDITION AND OTHERS PRACTICALLY WORN OUT? After thorough investigation on my part I am prepared to furnish the correct answer to the above question.

The first half of this week I had the pleasure of running Goldwyns "Flame of the Desert". This subject was originally in seven parts but the censors saw fit to cut out about 1500 to 2000 feet (closer to 2000 than 1500) now this film was in a frightful condition, the splices were enough to burst the gate open and give the Projectionist heart failure. Upon examining this film carefully (as I have done with many others) I could see that the splices were certainly not made by a competent Projectionist and by comparing the scenes I found that a portion of the scene had been deleted, unquestionably by the censors, and in place of the deleted portion, something objectionable I suppose, we find a "splice" that is a —— sight more objectionable to the projectionist, projector and the audience than the scene on the film. Now if all the Projectionists who run this film will take note they will see that what I say is correct. This applies to all the films that have been butchered by the censor and if the Projectionists will take note of them and compare them with other stuff that has not been butchered they will soon find who is responsible for the ruination of the films in this country before they are three months old. I will mention one reel that I venture every Projectionist has noticed that has run it and that is The Canadian National Pictorial. Who ever has trouble with it? It always comes in fine; no bum splices, no cuts and always full to the top of the reel which proves that the censors did not get their shears on it. Now, I receive this reel every week and when I compare it with the poor features that have come in contact with the censor's shears and so forth, well, I bless the censors.

Now, in this country there are quite a number of censor boards, and, as a rule, these boards receive films from the exchange just as they are received from the laboratory now when you come to think of these features going through an old antique projector with an incompetent in charge of same and if the projector is modern it will no doubt be found in need of adjustment and repair as well as a good thorough cleaning. When we know that the new films are run through these projectors at break-neck speed by an incompetent man or some one who has not time to bother with the machine or anything else it is no surprise to find that when this film goes through this process several times it is in pretty bad shape, then the City Projectionist gets the blame because he ran it first, like the devil he ran it first. Now, gentlemen, this is not a lot of bunk but it is something that should receive our serious consideration and more so the serious consideration of the exchange managers.

Now as regards these censor splices and so forth I am not saying anything that I will have to apologize for because I have gone into this subject very thoroughly and I KNOW what I am talking about. With further reference to the splices in "Flame of the Desert" I will swear on a stack of bibles as high as "Pikes Peak" that they are censor splices. If a projectionist in a first run theatre did the damage to a feature that the censors did to this feature and many others the exchanges would make an awful row, in fact they would never get over it. BUT why not get after the censors? I guess we all know why, but then something should be done and done quickly. Now if any of the boards should read this letter and want any more facts on the subject I am here to give it, PAGES of it, but I don't think we'll hear even one word from the Boards because I think that they realize we have got 'em. So in view of the foregoing my advice to all Projectionists, in all sections is: before you criticize the work of others i. e. the condition of new films DON'T FORGET OUR CENSORS because THEY get the films FIRST.

Today I received Fox's "The Lone Star Ranger" and one of the reels in this subject had a number of punch holes in it, but I don't know where it came from to here and to date we have no run very many of the Fox features.

Now, last but not least, regarding the small town Projectionist. Here is all that I have to say about him. My personal opinion of the small town projectionist in our province, or more correctly, in the northern part of this province, is that they are as a whole decidedly unprogressive. This opinion has been arrived at after writing to practically every one of them in our jurisdiction.

Some time ago this local wrote to all the Projectionists a personal, lengthy, letter and we did not receive one reply, not even a card as an acknowledgement that they received our letter. Now, that does not sound very good for our small town friends and if they do all their work in this manner then it is not wonder that they are accused of destroying the films that they handle.

The letters I mention were sent out by this local on their official stationery, signed by the officers of this local and bearing the seal of the International Alliance and the letters pointed out to them the necessity of lining up with their brothers in the city for the mutual benefit of all concerned and the industry at large. Also a very generous offer was made so that if they wished to join the International Alliance and get in with the thousands of other Projectionists they could do so without any great outlay of money. This was all done voluntarily by this local and at its expense with the full knowledge that we could assist them if only they would allow us to do so and realizing their position we felt that it was our duty to break the ice. We just wanted to do for them what we had already done for ourselves and we were anxious to have them enjoy the same privileges and working conditions that we enjoy. Now not one of these gentlemen took the matter seriously enough to answer our communication and we enclosed stamped and addressed envelopes for their reply. What have they to say for themselves. What can they say. Perhaps they will not object to letting us hear from them through the Motion Picture News.

Regarding friend Editor's remarks that we have been a little bit too quiet and that we are liable to spring a surprise any minute. Well, as to being too quiet perhaps we have, but don't forget that we are with you all in spirit even though you do not hear from me. This latter statement reminds me of the story about the minister who was selling tickets for a little church affair and upon approaching one of the members of the church he said: "Can I sell you a ticket?" whereupon the member replied "Sorry that I cannot be with you personally but remember that I will be there in spirit", so the minister said "Where would your spirit like to sit?"

CHARLES A. CHRISTOPHER, Rochester, Pa., writes: "Once more I shall let you know I am in the land of living but am on the sick list but hope to be able to go to work tomorrow again.

"Well I certainly am sorry that I haven't a photo of my projection room but as soon as I have it repainted and different lighting system put in, I will send you one. The work has been begun already by myself and trusty assistant.

"Well here goes with a little info about my room.

"My room is seven feet high, eight by nine feet square; have two Powers motor driven machines and they are four feet apart.

"I have a work bench six feet long and two and a half feet wide.

"The distance from lens to screen is about 90 feet or more and my machines are level with the screen and are sitting solid on the floor.

"I have two Sterling economizers running on two lines, one to each machine.

"Am using white A. C. Special carbons and get a fine light.

"For fire I have sand, liquid and dry extinguishers but I think I will take the sand out for it is not much use and then a bucket of sand is pretty heavy to handle.

"Oh! yes 'Lest I forget' I have never received my membership button yet. I think it has been lost so you will have to send me another one, I guess, also a new bunch of labels.

"For a change over at the end of the reel I always make a cue sheet. Not on paper but in my mind and I never have a bit of trouble.

"We are glad to know that the N. A. M. League is going to do so much good and we know that it is doing good and we all are proud to belong to it. But, why the Sam Hill doesn't some one start a crusade against the different exchanges that practice seeing how many exchange numbers can be put in a reel of film. Believe me, I cut every exchange number out of every reel that comes to me for there isn't a punch mark, scratch or exchange number ever passes over my aperture.

"I think we have the rottenest Board of Censorship in Pennsylvania of all the States."

Reply: It is a good man that can keep the floor for an extended period. Christopher seems to have that knack. All the more honor to him. First and foremost he started that row of "Small towner versus City Man" that waxed to such proportions that we found it necessary to smother it with the blanket of veto-power. Then he writes a good account of some ideas of his—and they were good too. This time he describes his projection room in a tone that almost says "Come one there, men; can any of you beat it?"

We wonder if they can.

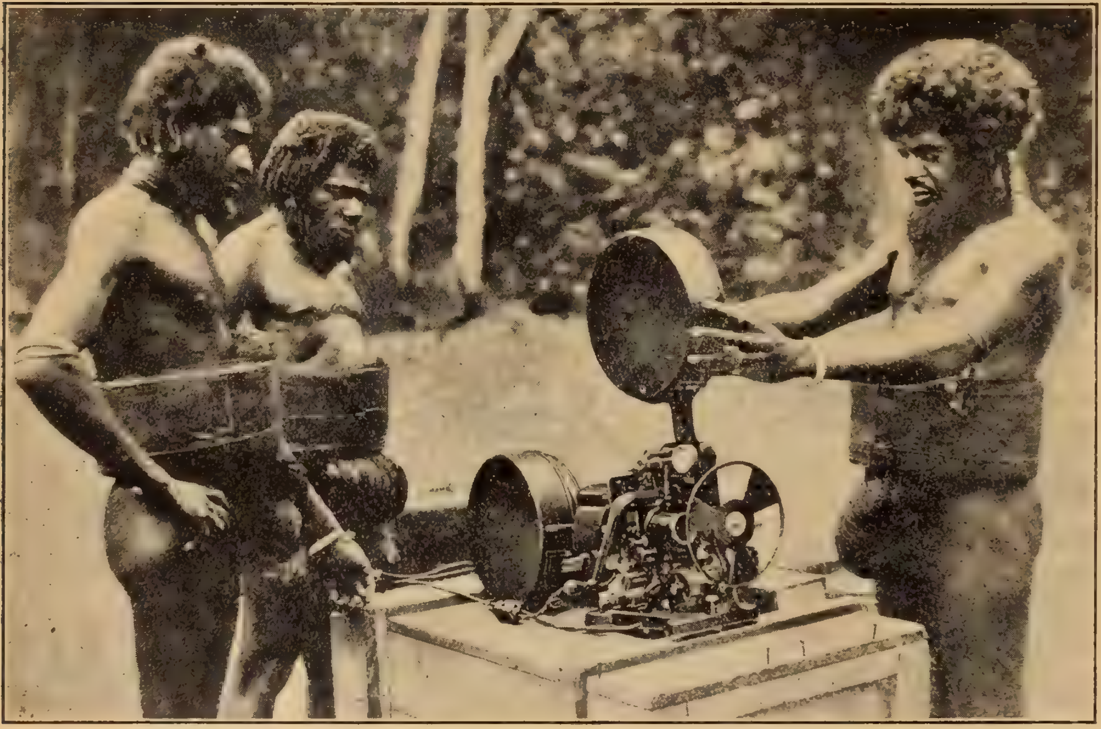
And don't forget to read what he said about that Penn. Board of Censorship.

We shall watch for that photo of your room when you have finished frescoing and crocheting it.

And don't forget, you others, that question "Who has the best projection room?" That little question might be the basis of a good prize contest. Wonder if there is enough interest among the readers for us to start one with real cash money as the bait.

Peerless Projector Enchants Wild Men As Wehit Magic Is Flashed on Screen

Letter from Martin Johnson Emphasizes Value of Portable Projector and Generator



John J. Molzkdmw, at the right, is subjecting the Pathescope to a rigid cannibalistic test. It's the first machine he and his henchmen have ever seen.

WE have been six months among the most savage people in Earth, among cannibals and head hunters, and the greatest pleasure we have had was the nights we would hear the exclamations of surprise and wonder as the savages saw the moving pictures. They went wild when I showed them moving pictures of themselves that I had made two years ago.

I used Radium Flares and made movies at night of the savages looking at themselves on the screen—and the negative has developed up fine.

We first landed at Malekula—where the savages (and Chief Nagapate in particular) tried to hold us two years ago. Under an armed guard we showed them the pictures on the beach and next day I was treated like royalty. To think that anyone could maek devil-devil magic and make their own faces move about on a white screen was too much for their simple natures and it opened Malekula for me.

I was much in demand, and through the story having traveled from tribe to tribe in the mountains I was sent for and offered safety in the way of whole armies of savages. Nagapate himself found great pride in guiding us—and probably behind our backs he would take credit for bringing us!

For months we traveled from tribe to tribe—just Mrs. Johnson and myself—and the Peerless opened the way for us. It would have done you good to see it and the Generator going over mountains and into valleys, on the backs of savages, and at night to have seen hundreds of cannibals squatting around the devil-devil grounds, watching the wonderful things they never dreamed of before. Many a time the trees and houses would be full of human heads—dried—all about us.

We turned the handles of the Generating outfit so much they both twisted off, (they should be slightly heavier) and we made new ones of hard wood.

The savages liked a five hundred foot piece of Armistice Day in New York City better than any of the films; it shows hundreds of thousands of people on the streets. These cannibals never dreamed that there were so many people on earth. They thought the earth revolved around Malekula up to this time.

We arrived here in Sydney several days ago and now I am busy printing positives of the finest films I have ever made. They are going to create a big sensation when shown. I think I will name them "WILD MEN OF MALEKULA."

I have the Peerless set up here in the house and will do all my cutting and assembling on it.

Another remarkable thing about the Peerless and the Generator is, that when we showed among the cannibals—away up in the mountains, the picture was as clear and sharp as any I have ever seen in a picture show, of course slightly smaller, but the light was perfect and the picture showed as clear and steady as any you ever saw.

The Peerless will be a part of every expedition I make—my next trip is among the tree dwellers

The Question Box

In the belief that many projectionists would use this Equipment Service Department to a greater degree if they could be assured that their names would not appear with their questions and appeals for help, all names will henceforth be omitted. But in order that the questioner may recognize the answer to his question his initials and the name of his state will be published. The full name and the exact address will be kept on file in the event that any reader wishes to communicate personally with any of the correspondents.

W. B. J., Pennsylvania: I am the youngest member in our local and have the largest theatre and hardest job, but I believe I am making good. But I have a few troubles which I would like to have you comment on, providing you will not use my name. First, I am troubled with excessive condenser breakage. I have two Motiograph DeLuxe Projectors and a 75 amp. Transverter. My throw is 132 feet. The picture is 14x18 and I use 40 to 70 amperes, depending on the thickness of the film. My condensers are two 7½'s. My objective is of 6¼" E. F. and it is 21" between condensor and aperture. My carbon set consists of a ¾" upper and a 11-32" Silvertip lower. I carry my arc about 4½" from my condenser and it is always the lens nearest the arc that breaks. My lamp houses are not ventilated to the open air, but instead let the air out into the room. The boss thinks that way is cheaper. I think better ventilation would cut down on the condenser breakage, but I can't afford to install the ducts myself. Now tell me what is wrong that causes my condensers to break.

If my condensers are of the wrong size please tell me what is the right size.

Also tell me what size stereoptican lens I should use to get the corners in my slides clear. I also run a spotlight off my transverter, having hooked it up with a double throw switch. I would like to know what size lens to use in it. I can use one of either 5 or 6-inch diameter. My machines are set at about a 45° angle.

Reply: With your arc placed over four inches from the rear condenser there should be little danger of

THE G-E COMPENSARC
Makes Pictures Steady

The G-E Compensarc is a device that provides and maintains proper arc voltage and current, resulting in the steady projection of any sized picture on any line current.

Compensarcs are made in two general types. The transformer type is used on alternating current to produce an alternating current arc. The motor-generator type is used on direct current to produce direct current, or for use on alternating current to produce direct current.

Compensarcs are economical, efficient, safe, reliable and easy to operate.

cracking the glass under ordinary conditions. In fact the working distance is usually less than 4". This means one of two things. Either your arc is flaming when you run your amperage to 70 or a draught of air is striking the rear surface in some manner. The latter surmise is probably the correct one. No doubt the deficiency of your lamp house ventilation has something to do with the strains in the lenses, but there are any number of projectionists working under similar handicaps and yet are not being bothered with cracked lenses. We would suggest therefore that you look first to your condenser mounts, to see if they are properly fitted. Then with your amperage at the lowest point gradually increase it to the top limit at which you work it, watching the arc at the same time through a piece of smoked glass. If you note a distinct lengthening of the arc stream toward the condenser it is probable that this is the reason for your breakage. One way out—if you really feel that you must use the 40 to 70 range in current is to use a ⅞" upper. When using your lower amperage, the illumination will not be so satisfactory as at present because the carbon will not be heated to the same degree of incandescense.

One other possible cause of trouble during the winter months is the sudden heating of condenser lenses after they have remained in the comparatively cold room over night. It is an excellent plan to warm them gradually for a few minutes before starting the first show. Sudden heating produces stresses within the glass and once these have been produced it takes very little to finish the work of destruction.

Your stereoptican lens should be of 22" focus. If your only trouble at the present time is a fringe of color at the edge of the picture it is probably due to your arc being set too far away from your condensers. Bring it nearer gradually and see if the coloring does not disappear.

With a 5" spot light lens its focal length to give you a 6-foot spot should be .... inches. By withdrawing the arc from the lens you will be able to produce a "head spot" on the stage.

W. R. R., Ohio, asks several questions about theatre layouts. His letter reads: I am contemplating a picture show in a small town and would like to ask a few questions. First, can good results be obtained in a house 55 feet wide with a 65-foot throw, if the projectors are placed from 15 to 18 feet from the centre line of the building?

You will never be able to get good results by offsetting your machine 15 feet with a throw of only 65 feet. This arrangement would produce an angle of approximately 20 degrees and anything beyond 10 degrees is practically impossible. With the intended arrangement, it would be necessary to set your screen at such an angle that those on one side of the house would view nothing but a very vague picture entirely out of proportion. Although not usually to be advised, it is far better in your case to work out some way by which the projection room can be built into the roof or suspended from the ceiling.

You do not give the reasons for the offset, but if it is because of a few seats which would be lost of the room were to be located centrally, it is better to lose the few seats.

Second, Would the Mazda Lamp outfit give satisfactory results with a throw of 65 feet to 75 feet?

Provided that your projection room is finally placed on the center line and not offset, the Mazda Lamp would be working under its best conditions. Lamp manufacturers are working on a new lamp which it is hoped will work out to better success than the style originally produced. Write to the Edison, National and Westinghouse lamp works for more information about their incandescent outfits.

Third, What carbon combination should I use with alternating current to give best results without using a rectifier?

With a house of your size, it is probable that you would have a comparatively small screen and this would hardly require more than 35 amperes a.c. For this carbon setting you should use a combination of ⅝" cored both top and bottom. If you find it necessary to go above 35 amps. then change your carbon sizes to ¾" cored top and bottom.

Fourth, With alternating current at 110 volts, 3 phase, 60 cycles, what is the best equipment for reducing to the proper voltage at a minimum of cost excluding the mercury arc rectifier?

For reducing and converting at one and the same time there is no device better than the motor generator. There are three makes you should consider, these being the Westinghouse M G Set, the Fort Wayne a.c.

The unanimous choice of the expert projectionists, because it combines the most advanced ideas in design with unique convenience in operation.

Motor (or hand) drive and rewind at any speed.

Film threads easily, runs in a straight line without twists or turns and where you can see it. Studios and directors use it to cut and edit film as easily as on a rewind table.

Less flicker at three quarter speed than any other projector at normal speed.

Its skillful design and superior mechanical construction are a revelation to users of ordinary portable projectors.

Monoplane Mazda Lamps.

Frame and supports all of aluminum.

Widefaced, helical-cut, bronze on steel, noiseless gears.

Oil-less bearings throughout. Westinghouse universal motor.

Operates on 32 volt. 110 volt or 220 volt line current A. C. or D. C. or on a small storage battery, or when no electricity is available on the wonderful Peerless Hand Driven Electric Generator weighing only fifty pounds!

Fifth, Do the laws of Ohio compel the use of metal or fireproof projection rooms? What are the important points of construction?

Whether the laws of Ohio compel their use or not, the projection room should be of fireproof construction either of metal, asbestos, tile or concrete. We haven't the Ohio laws at hand, but it is exceedingly probable that the requirements in this respect are laid down in detail.

The important points of projection room construction are named in the order of their importance; fire proof construction, rigidity, size, location, equipment. Rigidity is placed second because it is a fact that with the best equipment it would be impossible to secure a good screen image if the projection room swayed or was in any way insecure.

Size is important from the viewpoint of comfort to the projectionist as well as from that of the location of the equipment and general accessibility.

A perfect picture can be secured only with straight away projection. Many theatres it is true are drawing a select clientele by the quality of their pictures which could be made even better with "perfect projection conditions." That is why "Location" has been placed ahead of "Equipment."

But "Equipment" is so vital to the success of any motion picture theatre, that though it comes last in the list, it should occupy a place alongside each of the other attributes. For "Equipment" should be fireproof, or at least it should have all available fire protective attachments. In the case of revolving machinery it should be in balance, so as not to endanger the rigidity of the room; when deciding on "Size" the bulk of equipment to be used is an important item; and so on.

Sixth, I am in the market for two second hand motor-driven projection machines, preferably Powers 6 or 6 A. Can you direct me to the proper place to get prices, etc., on same? I also want to buy the necessary equipment for reducing the voltage as above stated?

Most of the theatre supply houses have second hand projectors for sale. In Cincinnati and in Cleveland, you will find a number of these supply dealers, handling the standard projectors. These firms would also know about converting equipment suitable for your needs.

J. G., New York: Kindly let me know through your department of projection whether we can use two 110 volt economizers or Power's inductors in multiple to get more amperes at the arc. Tried this combination, but could get no light on them, that is on my 220 volt supply.

A Paper Read at the Philadelphia Meeting of Society of Motion Picture Engineers

In using exterior mattes, in place of matching each other exactly as is the case with interior mattes, they must overlap one another slightly and the amount of this over-lap is determined by the diaphragm opening. For a small diaphragm it is narrow, for a large one it is correspondingly wider. For cloud effects, he has a number of color filters of different hues and of different depths of color and, when using these, he generally, although not always, uses panchromatic negative stock which is sensitive not only to blue light, but to green, yellow and red to which ordinary film stock is comparatively insensitive. With ordinary negative stock only the most pronounced blonde will photograph as being light-haired. With panchromatic stock and a yellow screen he may make the yellow-haired heroine as blonde as he pleases and reduce freckles and facial imperfections to a minimum. With a graduated sky filter, he can give full exposure to objects in a scenic locality and yet retain the details of the beautiful clouds in the background, or bring out the blue distant mountains that would be scarcely visible were they photographed upon ordinary negative stock without a filter. With mattes of yellow celluloid, the outer edges of the close up may be diffused and darkened without suppressing them altogether, by means of mattes mechanically operated by a flexible shaft attached to an elongation of the shutter shaft or other moving part of the camera, one scene may be rolled aside and another take its place as it disappears; not by one dissolving into another, but as if one scene were slid on at one side and by its coming would push the other off at the other side, or, by changing from vertical to horizontal, make one picture go like the scene painted on a theatre curtain which rolls up, disclosing the setting behind it.

Optical attachments of small reflecting prisms placed partially before the taking lens permit of double exposure effects being made at one exposure and so forth ad infinitum, limited only by the ingenuity and resources of the individual camera operator.

One attachment usually scorned by the average professional is the speedometer for giving the number of frames taken per second. While such an attachment is regarded by many as being superflous, it should be of considerable value, especially to those operators who are engaged in the production of comedy films of the Mack Sennet type, for many comedy effects depend upon the accuracy with which certain number of pictures per second may be photographed, generally a number considerably less than sixteen per second, and while there are operators who can compete marvelously with a stop watch in turning to a certain speed per second, they are the exception and not the rule.

Next in our line of attachments we come to the view finder, although we wish to register a protest against classifying the view finder as an attachment or accessory as it is much too important to be otherwise than an integral part of the camera even if it seldom fulfills the functions for which it is provided. It is of the utmost importance that the view finder show plainly at all times the exact field covered by the lens of the camera and yet it can never do this exactly, because it is not possible to place the view finder so that it will have exactly the same point of view as the taking lens, unless by some as yet unknown device we can utilize the taking lens both as a finder and a photographic objective. The nearest aproach to this ideal is perhaps found in the Bell and Howell Camera where the lens performs both of these functions, but not simultaneously. This ideal condition being only fulfilled when the image can be viewed through the taking lens at the same time that the picture is being photographed. While this is theoretically not impossible, it is practically so on account of the amount of mechanism, that it would be necessary to place in the space already occupied by the shutter to make such a device practical. We can however, develop the view finder enough so that it is an instrument precise enough for our purposes by placing its objective lens as close as possible to that of the photographic objective and using a compensating device to account for the slight variation between the different view points of the two lenses. Another desirable feature with the view finder is that it should show the image brilliantly, right side up with the image right for right and left and not reversed as is usually the case. Negative lenses are not ideal for this purpose as they depend for their accuracy upon the position of the eye being along a certain axis. A view finder should be within the camera box, so that it does not have to be adjusted to the camera after it is taken from the case. It should be plainly and easily visible to the photographer's eye from his natural cranking position. Mr. Akeley, in designing his camera, has paid more attention to the important functions of the view finder than any other camera manufacturer, and yet must all admit that the ideal view finder is yet to be made. Discussion of the problem of an ideal view finder brings us to the problem of the range finder, and by range finder, we mean an instrument which performs for the camera exactly the same function that the range finder performs for the artillery,—that of measuring the distance from the camera to the object so that the focus may be instantly set without measuring the distance or focusing upon the film or ground glass. Range finders are so well and scientifically worked out that it should be no considerable problem at all to make a simple form of this instrument which would fulfill all of the requirements of cinematographic use Such an instrument is an integral part of some models of pocket cameras manufactured by the Eastman Company and the manufacturers of moving picture camera should not lag in following this example. View and range finders are of course great aids to the accomplishment of the most efficient use of the photographic objective.

The taking lens is of course the most important part of the camera. It must be of the best quality possible, suitably mounted so that it can be accurately focused upon the plant of the film, some modification of the micrometer principle being probably the best and most accurate practical method. Once the scale of distances are calibrated upon a micrometer scale, so that no climatic condition or ordinary wear and tear will derange its adjustment, there should be no further use for focusing devices except to occasionally check results in order to see that no possible accident has happened to its mechanism. Where an accurate calibration of the focusing scale has been made under favorable conditions with a reliable focusing mount it would be impossible to make any better adjustment by focusing on the thing itself than to measure the distance and set the scale to the proper calibration, no matter how often it may be necessary to inspect the image in the framing aperture for the purposes of lining up or obtaining composition. In an instrument where such accurate work is required as in a motion picture camera, a ground glass for focusing purpose is an absurdity, the coarseness of its surface is much greater than the limit of definition to which it is desirable to adjust the lens. Ground glass should only be used for the determination of the extent of the image within the frame. For focusing the objective a microscope should be provided, so adjusted that its cross hairs or reticule lines will appear in the focus plans; by means of such a microscope the focusing mount should be calibrated. For purposes of viewing the image in the framing aperture some form of reflex attachment is of considerable value. If the mechanism of the camera gives room for the placing of such an attachment between the lens and the film, so much the better, as it renders the opening of the camera and the spoiling of film unnecessary.

As the subject of focusing devices alone is worthy of an extensive paper, it would be unwise for us to dilate here upon the various phases of this subject.

Under the head of attachments, we had also placed in our notes metal fittings. This seems almost superfluous, as there can be no doubt that the film race ways should be made of hard metal capable of receiving and retaining a mirror-like polish upon which there could be no chance of the film being scratched or abraided. Frictional contact with the film should be avoided wherever possible. Static electricity is one of the greatest enemies of the motion picture photographer and friction upon celluloid, as everyone knows, generates static electricity. Here again we must cut our desertation short as the cause of static, static markings, and static prevention are the subjects for another exhaustive paper, and we dare not intrude this subject upon an already lengthy article. The subject of camera attachments is necessarily a lengthy one and we have attempted in this paper to touch upon only the more saliant features in the hope that we may furnish the germ of an idea which may develop in the brain of some of our more able confreres and give to the cimeatographic world some noteworthy addition to its many inventions.

Tinting Dyes Have Not Changed

IN an endeavor to ascertain if the quality of tinting dyes had been altered in the last two years the Research Department of the Eastman Kodak Co., has made a number of tests of new samples and compared the results with those obtained before the publication of the booklet "Tinting and Toning of Motion Picture Film."

These tests showed that the quality is substantially the same in the case of those dyes supplied by the National Aniline and Chemical Co.

However, the trade names of a number of these dyes have been changed and the old list is here given together with the new.

Company Incorporated to Handle Project-A-Lite Products

IN order to meet the rapidly increasing demand for Project-A-Lite products and to properly finance their manufacture and sales, Rutledge & Co. of Chicago, have recently incorporated under the laws of the State of Illinois, and now are seeking quarters offering larger manufacturing facilities. This progressive Chicago accessory company, although young in years, has come rapidly to the front since W. R. Rutledge sold his electrical interests in the northwest with the hope of entering the military service in the world war and, being rejected on account of physical disqualifications, turned his attention to the development of electrical apparatus for motion picture theatrical work.

The use of Mazda illumination in this field caught his attention and he began a series of experiments looking towards the development of suitable apparatus for regulating line current to meet the requirements of the standard motion picture high efficiency lamp. After that his attention was given to the development of an adapter that would hold the Mazda lamp in position in the present day carbon arc lamp house without necessitating any serious changes or destroying the lamphouse now used. The success of both these efforts is known to the great number of motion picture men now familiar with Project-A-Lite products.

Mr. Rutledge in telling of the growth of his company, said, "Our beginnings were very small and the pages of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS were first resorted to as a means of informing the world of these helps towards Mazda illumination on the screen.

"During the last six months such a demand has arisen for this apparatus that, although doing our utmost, we are unable to keep pace with it and this has forced us to expand our business by incorporating and finding larger quarters.

"A strong demand has arisen in European fields and it is the purpose of our company to engage in the export trade. May I add that in response to our advertisements in the columns of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS, we have received inquiries from London, Paris and Rome as well as from several international agencies which have applied for commissions as distributors.

"The advantage to the exhibitor of being able to retain the use of his own lamphouse with its present condensing and projecting lenses, makes a strong appeal because of the fact that nothing need be thrown away. The absence of excessive heat results in longer life to all the projecting apparatus, thus effecting an economy that saves him many dollars in operation.

"We shall soon announce our new Automatic Regulator through your columns. This will be a feature, as up to the present, there has been no real automatic transformer available, although there has been and is a strong demand for them."

A Real Partnership

H. D. Shay, of the Reaper theatre, Monroe, Mich., says: I am enclosing herewith my blank for membership in the N. A. M. L.

I have been following it up ever since it was originated, but owing to my not being in the show business for a year, I did not apply for membership.

I have been running projectors for ten years now and I have been very much against punch mark in the films and it seems to be a very much used evil around Detroit and nearby towns.

I do not deem it necessary to resort to punch marks or razor blade marks to be used as a signal for the approach of the end of a reel. Man was given brains and if he uses them can carry the ends of his reels in his mind and not destroy other people's property. If he cannot remember then let him write them down.

Friend wife is as much against these methods as I and she is a first class projectionist and has put six years in the study of projection. She reads everything on projection and in fact has her nose in Hawkins and other electrical books in preference to other kinds of reading.

She runs the machine in our other house every Saturday and Sunday and gets along fine.

REPLY:

Which reminds us that a short time ago in a very large city, the city authorities were tipped off that a theatre manager was allowing a girl to operate his projectors. The inspector hitched up his belt, tipped his hat over one eye—like a "movie" detective, you know—and set out for the theatre where the underhand work was going on.

Reaching the theatre he slipped up the stairs to the projection room, listened an instant to make sure that the voice he heard was a female's and then—rushed the place.

The girl was humming away while she threaded her second machine and hardly gave him a glance as he catapaulted into the room.

"Ha, ha, my little lady!" he said, or words to that effect. "Now I've caught you."

"You look like an inspector," the little lady said as she slipped the leader under the clip and gave the lower reel a twist. "How's everything?"

But the inspector wasn't to be bulldozed at any feminine remark. He snooped from one end of the room to the other in the most approved style taught by correspondence detective schools and finally laid his official hand on the young lady's shoulder.

"I'm sorry, miss," he said in a tone which showed that he wasn't sorry in the least, "but I'll have to arrest you for operating without a license."

Without even looking his way, the girl retorted sarcastically:

"Humph! if that ain't just like a man. Why don't you use your eyes? There's my license over there in the corner."

And it was there. A "first class operator's license." She had passed the examination with flying colors many months before and had been getting excellent screen results.

As for the inspector—what could he say except maybe, "Yer sure gotta hand it to the little lady."

Two Christie Comedies

(Two Reels Each)

IF these Christie Comedies served no other purpose than to show comical studios of youth without resorting to slapstick measures in scoring their points—then the production of them has not been in vain. No hokum is employed—no trick photography—no gallivanting about on the part of the principals in capitalizing such overworked ideas as the "chase"—none of these things are utilized in Christie Comedies. If they are more quiet in action as a result, at least they have some compensation in their ideas. A capable group of funmakers are employed on the Christie lots, among whom are Helen Darling, as charming acomedienne as any actress in comedies, and Earl Rodney, who brings to the screen a fine spirit of youth.

It may be that the two comedies, "Ducks," and "Monkey Shines," will disapoint those who are susceptible to slapstick. They may find them too quiet. But we venture they will be remembered by thinking people, because there is a thought behind each of them. The slapsticks are remembered for some particular incident or bit of "business." And then forgotten.

"Ducks" tells the story of a pair of honeymooners, the husband being addicted to the habit of going duck-hunting occasionally. Wifey suspects that his object is chasing chickens—those that walk with two feet—and so starts in pursuit. When hubby's pals get a ducking in the water they are forced to go to a neighboring farmhouse where the farmer's daughters dress them up in feminine clothing until their own is dried. And the young bride frowns and pouts and stirs up some trouble before she finds out that the girls have a distinct place in the plot.

"Monkey Shines" features the idea of monkey glands—a perfectly good comedy idea, incidentally. An old gentleman goes to the doctor's office and becomes youthful again after the operation. He cuts up several didoes in a cabaret and his nephew, the doctor, is worried that the old man's fortune will be gone before he can inherit it. So he gives his aunt the monkey treatment too, and she lures her husband back to the "straight and narrow," although she has to show considerable pep to woo him away from the young girls. In the end the doctor gets his reward. This idea is capitalized for its full value. The comedies are restful to anyone who has been slapsticked too often. They are good fillers on any exhibitors program. —LAURENCE REID.

"Bullin the Bullsheviki"

(Eff and Eff Comedy—Five Reels)

THIS comedy, in the writer's opinion, is many points away from the mark. Frank P. Donovan, who is its author and director, showed it to us some months ago and we did not like it. Since then it has been revised and changed, but still we do not like it. We mean we do not like his idea of comedy. He has introduced many new subtitles and scenes, but summing up the old with the new, it seems to be a conglomeration of hodgepodge and nothingness without obtaining in the slightest degree the object aimed at—to amuse and be funny. In the first place there are few comedy lines in the subtitles and less comedy in the actors, who by the way are of the third or fourth class variety and seem to resort to the kind of comedy called "slapstick" with a vengeance.

They hit and kick and mug and fall and tumble and heaven knows what, in vain efforts to secure a laugh, but in almost every case, they fail. Comedies of the rougher kind can be made funny if the situations are right and if competent actors in this line are handling the parts. But with the cast which Frank P. Donovan has selected the fun seems rather painful.

And then again, what is it all about? We see a number of actors rushing hither and thither entering automobiles, eating in restaurants, rushing about the streets, cheering cabaret girls—they always introduce them when there is nothing else to think of, and then again they have gone back to the grave and dug up the "old prop horse," stuck two commedians into him for his back and front legs and tried to make him funny, and have also introduced the Ford car as a prop, filled it with "comedy" cops, and sent it in the usual way zig-zagging about the street.

This comedy may amuse in some of the smaller houses and it may not.—FRANK LEONARD.

"Her Naughty Wink"

(Sunshine Comedy—Two Reels—Fox)

HERE is a Cissy Fitzgerald title adorning a Sunshine comedy, and after this high tension piece has run through its spool we fail to see any connection between the caption and the action. If there is any winking to be done the spectator will take care of it nicely, since it will tax his optic nerve to follow the assortment of zippy stunts which are unfolded. The picture is broad burlesque and is so utterly ridiculous that it will be accepted as funny. This is all that is necessary toward making a slapstick comedy successful.

Jack Blystone, the director, hasn't uncovered anything new, but his ideas are effective, notwithstanding. The action transpires in a two-story house which literally falls to pieces in the concentrated attention given the plot. Plot? There isn't any, unless you call the exposition of the "chase" the link that holds it together. Upstairs, downstairs, into rooms, out of rooms, the players tumble after each other. Speed is the one ingredient which is incorporated here. And there is no stopping of the incidents in any part of the action.

Mr. Blystone uncovers a new trick or three in some places, but for the most part he is content to travel familiar ground. The antics of the players, their grotesque make-up and costumes will in all likelihood encourage laughter, but the Sunshine people in our opinion are capable of being better funmakers. They are grooming Ethel Teare along the style of Louise Fezenda of the Sennett forces, and she makes a capable comedienne indeed. Others who assist in the weird concoction are Glen Cavender, Ed Kennedy, and Bill Franey. And—oh yes—the girls.—LAURENCE REID.

"The Land of Opportunity"

(Americanization Picture—Two Reels—Selznick)

SECRETARY LANE'S suggestion that motion picture producers should realize the power of the camera as a medium in the Americanization of certain forces in this country has been adopted by Selznick Enterprises. This concern has come forward with a timely and vital pictorial message in this direction. In commemoration of the birth of the great Emancipator, "The Land of Opportunity" is released to exhibitors and it would be to the advantage of all of them to present this picture not only as a tribute to Lincoln but as an ideal subject in showing America as a wonderful land of opportunity.

No man need look further than Lincoln in choosing a model for his guidance. If this picture could be shown in all the picture theatres that are located in the highways and byways of the United States—and repeated several times it would do more to crush the spirit of discontent and destroy the radical serum that is seeping into the brains of certain types than all the sermons that could be shouted from the pulpit.

"The Land of Opportunity" conveys a fine thought. It presents the idea that opportunity is waiting for everyone to take advantage of it just as it did in Lincoln's time. He was once a railsplitter but he studied diligently and worked hard and rose above his lowly station. The theme revolved around Americanism versus radicalism. A certain "advanced" thinker is arguing in behalf of "red" doctrines in a club. A butler relates a chapter in Lincoln's life and the scene dissolves to a few years before the Civil War when the Emancipator is campaigning in the vicinity of Salem, Ill. The dramatic contents are revealed in his walking twenty miles to save the life of a youth convicted of murder whose mother had befriended him once.

The humanity, the high ideals of the great figure are excellently brought out and so well is the lesson established that when the scene dissolves into the argument at the club, the radical tosses his "red" literature into the fireplace. He appreciates that America is the land of opportunity. The picture is compact and the sequences are developed spontaneously, the action going forward with sustained drama and plenty of suspensive interest. Ralph Ince appears in the dual role of the radical and Lincoln and gives a very effective study of the immortal figure.—LAURENCE REID.

Index to Complete Plan Book and EXHIBITORS BOX OFFICE REPORTS

EDITOR'S NOTE—Exhibitors will find here a complete list of all feature pictures for last seventeen weeks arranged alphabetically as an index to The Complete Plan Book for this period, naming the picture, the producer, the star, the release date, and designating the issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS which contained the original review.

The following also contains our reviewer's opinion encompassed in a brief single line and gives the comments of exhibitors who have shown the picture and forwarded their opinions. And we also publish a final line fairly summarizing a consensus of all opinions received on each picture. As many of the exhibitors do not comment on every picture (merely checking it Big, Average or Poor), we arrive at the consensus not only by the actual comments made and published, but are also guided by the reports from exhibitors who have made no actual comments, but have merely checked the box office value of the picture.

All the pictures mentioned are five-reel features, unless marked otherwise. Serials are reviewed also. At the conclusion of this department will be found the "Flash-Backs," being comments on films released prior to October 11, 1919.

"THE STRONGEST"

(FOX)

Clemenceau's Name May Carry This Picture By

THE wealthy manufacturer worshipped money and neglected his wife and she sought refuge in the arms of a lover. When a child was born, the rich man thought she was his own and years later he attempted to marry her off to gain social recognition. But she chose her own husband and chickens came home to roost on the manufacturer's doorstep. Antiquated material, isn't it? This is the idea contained in Clemenceau's story, "The Strongest," which Fox has adapted to the screen. Between the covers of the book it may be good reading, but looking on at the silver sheet it uncovers a number of faults.

The action, instead of being connected in scenes of direct continuity, wanders in its development. Years are dispensed with through the aid of subtitles and the salient points are confusing as a result. In fact the sequences are decidedly choppy, so much ground has the director covered. But despite its haphazard treatment the idea is a hackneyed one that has been done time and again and often it is successful, particularly when presented with a few well chosen strokes and dominated by its moral. There are no subtleties—no artistic measures in the production.

If the first two reels were re-edited the picture would look decidedly better, for the thread of interest is lost in establishing so much detail. However, Clemenceau's name in all likelihood will bring in the receipts. The greatest fault in the feature is the overplaying of the principals, with the exception of the gifted and beautiful Renee Adoree, a Parisian actress. Hers is the only performance that rings with sincerity, although Harrison Hunter as her supposed father works hard to overcome an unsympathetic role. Carlo Liten's lack of repression somewhat mitigates the performances of the others. Foreign actors haven't learned that simple pantomime is most effective on the screen.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"The Strongest" is the name of the picture which comes to the ——— theatre for three days beginning ———. This Fox feature is an adaptation of the story of the same name by Georges Clemenceau, the "Tiger of France." He has put into his one and only novel which is a powerful tale—a tale of France today—characters which he knows thoroughly. "The Strongest" presents the natural passions of life and the artists who interpret it seem to get their message home without obvious effect. The cast of players is headed by Renee Adoree, the Parisian star, who is as talented as she is beautiful. Raoul Walsh has directed the work with admirable insight into its dramatic values.

The central character, Claudia is the daughter of Harle, a rich manufacturer, whose wife is dead. The latter despairing of winning her husband's love while she was alive entered into a liaison with Henri, a friend of the family and the girl is really the latter's daughter—a fact which is concealed from the father until Claudia has reached maturity. Harle endeavors to marry her off to a bogus Count, but the plan is interrupted by her American sweetheart, Maurice. Things come to a head when Harle's employees kidnap the girl when their demands for a wage increase are refused. Henri is killed when he attempts to rescue her. Eventually the bogus Count is presented in his true colors, but he shows his revenge by proving to Harle that the daughter is not his own. The news breaks the manufacturer's heart but in compensation the lovers are united.

CATCH LINES

The first and only story written by the "Tiger of France," Clemenceau, will be presented as a photoplay next ———. See "The Strongest" a picture of human passions—a picture of the triumph of youth and love over selfishness and caste.

"OVERLAND RED"

Vital and Vivid Western Is Harry Carey's Latest

THERE is no denying the strength of this feature. The Harry Carey offerings have been conceived on such program foundations that when a work of the calibre of "Overland Red" happens along it is entitled to the highest praise by virtue of its vividness and vitality. No matter if the theme is not entirely logical the director has so treated that it carries a semblance of reality. The star assumes the role of a tramp here—a different characterization for him, and so colorful is it drawn and executed that the figure will be long remembered.

It is a story which is strong in all the necessary ingredients and no doubt it would score even though Lynn Reynolds gave it an ordinary production. But undoubtedly he was inspired by the rich assortment of incidents and the picturesque characters and so the picture is embellished with high lights (they look like Reynolds' own) and richly scenic backgrounds. The plot moves forward with ever-increasing action, although this element is bewildering at times because of its rapidity. Carey's tramp, in some respects, is his best contribution to the screen. He makes it a rollicking, likeable figure who accepts everything with a keen sense of humor, but who is resourceful enough to take care of himself and those who have earned his affection.

The picture is well fortified with romantic moments and the humor and pathos are elements which are emphasized for their full values. Mr. Carey is supported by Harold Goodwin and Vola Vale, two players who are genuine in their interpretations. The former may be put down as one of the most capable juveniles on the screen. He is tremendously in earnest and always natural. H. H. Knibbs is the author of this different Western.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Harry Carey, the popular Western actor in Universal pictures, will be seen at the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week in his latest photoplay entitled "Overland Red." This subject is from a story by H. H. Knibbs, the scenario and direction having been attended to by Lynn F. Reynolds. The latter's work has long been a source of wonderment and admiration to those who follow closely the various western plays of the screen. The amount of rapid action he instills into his work and the picturesque backgrounds he incorporates are little short of marvelous. In "Overland Red" he well upholds his reputation—even surpasses it—it seems. The picture tells the story of a tramp prospector for gold, Overland Red, and Collie, a boy whom he has befriended. They stumble across an aged miner in the last stages of starvation. Their efforts to revive him are futile, and as he dies they depart with his bag of gold, but bury the papers found on his person. The two pals are arrested for murder when the body is discovered, but escape eventually. They are tracked, however, by a gang who believe Red knows the location of the old man's mine. Red and Collie win the sympathies of Louise Alacarme, who lives on her uncle's ranch, and she saves them from re-arrest by the sheriff on a trumped-up charge of the gang. Red starts in search of the mine and with his friend, Winthrop, they meet with many adventures. Louise helps them to escape from certain dangers. In the end Red finds the vein of gold and decides to share it with Collie and Winthrop. But on digging up the papers he finds that he is the uncle of the girl. He keeps a secret, but hopeless affection for Louise who finds romance with Collie. Mr. Carey is thoroughly in character as the hero and he is well supported by a competent cast.

CATCH LINES

In which Harry Carey turns tramp. His latest work is a masterpiece of character drawing—don't miss him in "Overland Red."

The story of a tramp who outwitted a band of crooks through his two-gun ability. Quick on the trigger, he saved himself and his gold mine. A rare picture is "Overland Red"—a picture of pathos and humor, action and suspense and marvelous western scenery.

His pal was shot down by unseen hands and Red declared war on the enemies. See "Overland Red," the greatest Harry Carey picture ever made.

PROGRAM READER

He was a tramp, was Overland Red, and with his pal, Collie, they discovered a gold mine. Being vagabonds they were arrested for a crime of which they were innocent. But Red wasn't always a tramp—he was once a sheriff and when he saw his opportunity he turned the tables on his enemies. He hadn't forgotten how to pull a trigger. And he became a two gun man when they wounded his pal. We will not go into details concerning this latest Harry Carey picture, "Overland Red." That would be robbing it of its suspensive qualities. But suffice to say that the subject is one of the best—if not the best—that the popular Western actor ever had. He appears in a different role—but a role which gives him splendid opportunity to display his personality and talent. The feature abounds with fast moving action and unfolds a charming romance. And it is remarkably rich in picturesque scenery. The story is written by H. H. Knibbs and Lynn Reynolds is the director. Make no mistake about it, an entertaining hour awaits you when you see "Overland Red" at this theatre soon.

SUGGESTIONS

The fact that Harry Carey appears in a different role here is sufficient to exploit him. Make mention that he appears as a tramp who finds regeneration through the good fortune of finding gold and the influence of a beautiful girl. You might bring out that the picture is a superior Western in that it builds with ever increasing action and suspense. Concentrate upon the character drawing and that the hero is hemmed in by a group of enemies but fights his way through in characteristic style. Feature the title. It is attractive, and mention that the cast includes Vola Vale and Harold Goodwin.

"HIS WIFE'S FRIEND"

(PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT)

Has Many Good Points Which Should Satisfy

THIS feature has enough strength to carry it through on any program, but there are many things lacking which tend to hold it back from the point aimed at. The original story may have been convincing in many ways, but in scenario form it seems to be a number of scenes joined together with little effort to bring out the strong situations and hold back the weaker ones until the time arrives for "landing" the big scenes.

Faulty direction also may be to blame for the way in which many of the situations were handled. For the star seems to resort to "heavy breathing" and distended "eye work" in many of the dramatic moments, and is frequently seen in a standing position, using these expressions, when action is needed and called for.

However, there are many other points which this production has to its credit, such as the charm which is lent to it by good acting in many places, by a capable cast, the mounting of good sets and the up to date manner in which it has been produced.

In summing up, this is a good average program picture, which should hold its own if too much is not expected of it.—Length, 5 reels.—Frank Leonard.

PRESS NOTICE--STORY

The latest Dorothy Dalton picture, "His Wife's Friend," will be the attraction at the ——— theatre for ——— days, beginning It was produced by Thomas H. Ince from the popular novel, "The White Rock," and is a story in which mystery is said to be entertainingly mingled with a love and adventure theme.

Miriam Grimwood is unhappily married to a man much older than herself who does not care for her, spending much of his time playing chess. One day a former sweetheart calls upon her and is seen by the husband making love to her. The husband says nothing and invites him the next evening to play chess. After the game the husband is found drowned in a lake on a neighboring estate, Suspicion points to the wife's admirer, who has now gone to India where he is a major in the British army, engaged in a campaign against the rebels. Returning to England he takes up the trail of the murderer and through a series of adventures and clever deductions discovers that Ling Foo, a Chinese criminal whom he knew in India has, poisoned Lord Robert in a chess game and that Wiverly, lord of the adjoining estate is also guilty. Through the death by violence of the Chinaman and the baronet the hero and heroine find their ultimate happiness.

This feature contains some thrilling spectacles, such as the Chinese hordes attacking the garrison of the Indian fort and there are startling bits of realism shown in the deaths of Wiverly and the Celestial. The suspense is said to be well handled and entertainingly sustained.

Miss Dalton's work is uniformly excellent and Henry Mortimer plays the lead very Cazeneuve are others in the cast. well. Warren Cook, Richard Neal and Paul Mystery stories in the movies have heretofore usually been left to the serial production. In "His Wife's Friend" the latest Dorothy Dalton production, Thomas H. Ince has produced a highly interesting piece of work in which a baffling murder case is mingled with a love theme of more than ordinary appeal.

PROGRAM READER

The murdered man is an eccentric millionaire given to playing the game of chess in solitude and neglecting his young wife for the pleasure which the game gives him. A former sweetheart of the wife's appears and the husband to all intents and purposes commits suicide to allow the two to be free to marry. Suspicion, however, points to the wife's admirer who has now gone to India where the suspected man is a major in the British army engaged in a campaign against the rebels.

Returning to England the mystery is cleared up in a most startling and satisfying manner. Miss Dalton is supported in this feature by a capable cast headed by Henry Mortimer.

CATCH LINES

Her husband neglected her because he was terribly fond of playing chess. And she spent a very lonely life. But an old sweetheart of hers called to see her and her husband suspected his love for her. How did it turn out. See Dorothy Dalton in "His Wife's Friend."

He had been away in India but had been suspected of a cruel crime. How did it turn out? Dorothy Dalton will tell you in "His Wife's Friend" at the ——— theatre.

He loved his wife but became suspicious of her when he saw a former sweetheart call to see her. And then he invited him to play a game of chess and was never seen again. Did the former sweetheart commit the crime? See "His Wife's Friend" with Dorothy Dalton as the star at the ——— theatre. It will tell you.

Why did Ling Foo kill Sir Robert Grimwood? Was it for revenge or was it for his money? Let Dorothy Dalton tell you in "His Wife's Friend" at the ——— theatre.

SUGGESTIONS

When you book this feature in the writer's opinion it would be a good idea to feature the star and under her name mention that this feature contains much mystery done in clever fashion. Also mention that there are some thrilling spectacles and some startling bits of realism which are bound to hold and grip the attention.

In this feature Miss Dalton does some very good work and is ably assisted by Henry Mortimer, her leading man. A well selected cast also supports the star among whom are Warren Cook, Richard Neal and Paul Cazaneuve.

And do not forget to mention that this is a Thomas H. Ince production. It contains many dramatic moments and is released by Paramount-Artcraft.

SUGGESTIONS

What does the name of Clemenceau, "The Tiger of France," suggest to you? Doesn't it suggest rich advertising possibilities. Therefore it would be advisable to concentrate mostly upon this international figure. Play up the fact that "The Strongest" is his first and only story. Tell something about the man and his genius in saving France. Exploit the all-star cast. It carries several international favorites such as Renee Adoree, the beautiful and talented Parisian star. Use stills plentifully of her. Every patron will be interested in her for she brings a new and distinct personality to the screen. Feature the picture as a powerful drama of human passions—a drama of youth and love in conflict with the elements of greed and lust and ambition. Mention the director. Feature him as responsible for such fine attractions as "Evangeline," and "The Honor System." You can link up the author's name with the title of the picture. He is easily the strongest man in France.

"FOOTLIGHTS AND SHADOWS"

(SELZNICK)

A Pleasing Picture with Many Strong Points

A PRETTY star and capable director are responsible in many ways for the success of this feature. When analyzed, this picture is lacking in many ways, principally in story and the inability of the star to grasp its important points and interpret them correctly. But there is another angle which must not be forgotten. It is Miss Thomas' ability to attract and hold the eye whenever she appears in a scene. And she knows how to "set off" her graceful figure in the beautiful gowns she wears.

Jack Noble has given us as pretty a piece of direction as we have seen in a long time. He has been very careful in selecting his cast, his sets are expensive and up to the minute and he possesses the "knack" of keeping his star to the fore, which he did in many instances with beautiful close-ups.

Pictures of this kind do not tend to excite the emotions, although this story has its dramatic moments, but the tendency to amuse and please is there.

A wealthy man falls in love with a cabaret singer and is about to marry her when a "fever crazed" young explorer appears in her home, is taken sick and nursed back to health by the heroine. The romance she has been waiting for develops into love, with marriage as the result.—Length, 5 reels.—Frank Leonard.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Olive Thomas's latest feature, "Footlights and Shadows," a Selznick production, will appear at the ——— theatre on ——— week. In the picture Miss Thomas shows us what art and beauty, coupled with a good story and a good cast, can do to interest and hold the attention of an audience throughout and send them home in a happy frame of mind.

And Miss Thomas will certainly do this if opportunity is taken to witness her performance. For she has never worn prettier costumes and gowns to "set off" the beauty and charm which she possesses. And she has never been more convincing in any part she has ever undertaken.

And let us not forget that this production was directed by John W. Noble, who is considered one of our best. Mr. Noble has given special attention to Miss Thomas's personality and has developed it in a way that cannot help but command attention from those who enjoy the work of a beautiful star surrounded by a capable cast and luxurious sets to enhance the eye.

She was a cabaret singer who longed for romance, but had begun to despair of its ever coming, for she was about to marry a wealthy man whom she did not love. But it came to her at last and in a most peculiar and unexpected way, in the shape of a fever-stricken young explorer whom she finds in her home and who suddenly becomes too sick to be removed.

She nurses him back to health, but his mind remains a blank in many ways. Suddenly one day he leaves her home and does not remember where he has been, although he never forgets the one who has been so kind to him. He longs to see her again and finally does in the cabaret where she is singing. But she does not receive him with open arms, for she believes him to be ungrateful.

Presently a fire occurs and the young heroine is seen leading her lover, who is in a drunken condition, to safety. Her romance is now nearing its end, for she is to marry him and let us hope "lived happily ever afterwards."

PROGRAM READER

She longed for romance all her life but had never found it. It simply wouldn't come her way. And what could the poor girl do but to marry the millionaire who was determined to have her. But, like many other things, romance came quick and unexpectedly to her, as it has come to many others. And in what a peculiar way! It was in the form of a young fever-stricken explorer whom she found in her home and who was too sick to be removed.

She cared for him and brought his health back, only to be terribly disappointed one day in finding he had deserted her. Did she hate him for this and did she take revenge upon him when she saw him again? Let Olive Thomas tell you in "Footlights and Shadows."

Olive Thomas, star of Selznick's "Footlights and Shadows"

SUGGESTIONS

This feature contains many exploitation angles which if handled in the right way should bring in an audience without any fear of disappointing them. The story, although not of the strongest, has its dramatic moments and contains enough interest to amuse and please. Olive Thomas should take the premier place in your billing. She is a beautiful star, seen in many beautiful costumes and gowns, which cannot fail to attract the eye of your feminine audience, as the writer observed when viewing this picture.

Then she is surrounded by a well-known cast and has been directed by John W. Noble, who has paid great attention to detail and the arranging of some luxurious sets.

Do not let them expect too much of this feature, but at the same time do not be afraid to let them know that it is a good picture which will be to their liking.

CATCH LINES

She longed for romance but despaired of its ever coming. Was she successful? See "Footlights and Shadows."

Girls, what would you do if you found a man in your room? Would you turn him out? See what Olive Thomas did in "Footlights and Shadows."

(GOLDWYN)

Artificial Picture of a Woman's Ambition

BACK to the tried and true subject of a woman's search for wealth and social position, with its attendant sobs and sighs and occasional flashes of humor, have the producers gone to collect material for "The Loves of Letty." The hinges of the ancient formula creak as loudly as ever despite the fact that it has received capable treatment from the director. Once again is Pauline Frederick found interpreting the ideas of a British dramatist. No matter how richly dramatic these same ideas may be when expressed through the medium of the stage they are invariably found wanting when translated into picture material. The situations heightened by clever dialogue are valueless when deprived of this element on the screen.

"The Loves of Letty" is a stage story, seldom suggesting real people in real situations, except for the personal note of sincerity struck by the earnest star herself. At no time is the spectator likely to be so absorbed in what he sees as to forget he is in a theatre—the real test of play or picture. Miss Frederick does not sound any sympathetic note in her portrayal, due to her extreme fickleness. It is merely a case of "off with the old love—on with the new," and her indecision as to which one to accept does not develop any sustained drama.

The story drags interminably because the plot and characterization are colorless and are presented in a line of action of a single track pattern. Some success is derived in the contrast of characters but only by employing exaggerated humor. The truest thing about the offering is the atmosphere which is excellently suggested throughout. Miss Frederick's performance is as artistic as usual and Lawson Butt is acceptable os one of the lovers. The other players are not so representative of the types they portray.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Pauline Frederick, the distinguished emotional actress of Goldwyn pictures, will be seen in her newest photoplay entitled "The Loves of Letty" at the ——— theatre beginning ———. This subject is an adaptation of Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's celebrated play, "Letty," and it offers the star unusual opportunities to reveal her talent. Mr. Pinero is one of the most famous playwrights of the English-speaking stage. "The Loves of Letty" involves the problems which come to every attractive woman during her lifetime. Letty Shell considers the problem of clothes and social position since she is infatuated with Neville Letchmere, a London clubman. She endeavors to win him because of his standing in society.

So she makes the great experiment by giving up everything to catch Letchmere, only to find that he is a married man. Even then, being penniless, she is willing to sacrifice herself to him; but during a turn of affairs in which he protects his own sister's honor and shows nothing but selfish intentions with Letty, she comes to understand what the genuine devotion with a real man would mean. It is then that she realizes that her worship of money and clothes and social position have not brought her true happiness. She also undergoes other severe tests of character, but in the end triumphs over her weaknesses and comes to appreciate true standards. Mr. Pinero has evolved a tale that is rich in dramatic conflict and which sustains itself with a powerful THOUGHT. Miss Frederick is supported by such competent players as Lawson Butt, John Bowers and Florence Deshon.

CATCH LINES

She worshipped the power of money, the fascination of clothes and the security of aristocratic society. And to obtain these luxuries she won the affections of a married man. Then she woke up to the fact that her hopes and ambitions were false. What did she do?

PROGRAM READER

Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's celebrated play, "Letty," has reached the screen under the title of "The Loves of Letty," which comes to this theatre in the near future, with Pauline Frederick as the star. This is a powerful picture of the problems that involve every attractive woman during her lifetime. Letty Shell worshipped clothes and money and society and to obtain them she stopped at nothing. She even fell in love with a married man and intrigued him so as to secure her social position. Then one day Letty realized that the things she had worshipped did not bring her peace and happiness. She found herself in love with a genuine man. Letty came through her temptation and arose as a beautiful character. How this play reaches its climax is told in scenes of absorbing dramatic conflict. A rich play—a play with a moral. A play that every woman in America should see. At this theatre soon. Watch for the date.

"THE COPPERHEAD"

(PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT)

An American Classic and Great Personal Triumph for Star

ETHEL BARRYMORE is credited with having said that Lionel is the best actor of the family. After seeing his "Milt Shanks" in "The Copperhead" we are inclined to agree with her. Certainly Mr. Barrymore has given the screen a wonderful characterization, satisfactory even to those who had expected much, having seen him act the same role in Augustus Thomas' stage play of the same name.

As for the production itself, the producers have been prodigal. They have presented a page from history, correct in every detail. The story is sad, needlessly sad one will say at first thought. There is not even a hint at comedy. It just goes on telling what happened to Milt Shanks when, at the beginning of the Civil War, he was sworn into the secret service by his friend President Lincoln, and posed as a "copperhead" even to his wife, during the war and for forty years thereafter to the day of his death.

But for the dramatist to impose this hardship on his character was essential. Milt Shanks was a one purpose man. His patriotism was the patriotism of Lincoln. His patience and forbearance was that of Lincoln and he was the sort of man who obeys orders. Lincoln said no one was to know and that settled it with Milt Shanks. That his life was wrecked, that he was sentenced to the penitentiary, that his wife died of a broken heart, that he was denied viewing the body of his son, killed in battle, did not swerve him from the path of duty.

This is the Milt Shanks of the play and is the Milt Shanks which Mr. Barrymore has brought to the screen. The picture is an American classic.—J. S. Dickerson.

THE CAST

Directed by Charles Maigne from the play by Agustus Thomas, dramatized from the story by Frederick Landis. Press Notice Story.

Coming to the ——— theatre for a ——— days engagement beginning ——— is the most notable picture of the season, "The Copperhead," starring Lionel Barrymore in the immortal character of "Milt Shanks" the supposed "copperhead" of Civil War days, who in reality was President Lincoln's most trusted secret service agent.

Adapted from the famous play by Augustus Thomas, Famous Players-Lasky Corp. has made a picture which is a distinct achievement in many ways. Not the least of these is the drama contained in this heart interest story of the days of the Rebellion. The feature is also a wonderful piece of celluloid in its historical detail. A complete country village as it was in the sixties was built for a background. All the costumes and properties are identical with the period. Not a thing has been left undone to make this picture the great American Classic. As to acting Lionel Barrymore coming to the screen as he did with the character of "Milt Shanks" after having played the role on the speaking stage for a long season, has evolved the most wonderful, colorful and unusual role ever presented. What Milt Shanks suffered, the depth to which his patriotism extended, the fineness of the man who could subordinate all else to his duty as a secret service agent for his beloved friend and president, Abraham Lincoln, the patience and forbearance of a great soul is all brought to the screen with a realism which is scarcely believable. Those who have seen the dramatic version of the play are loudest in their praises for the picture. The soul of Milt Shanks shines out more clearly on the silver sheet than in the play.

As a supporting cast, Mr. Barrymore has been given a company of practically all star players. W. P. Carleton plays the role of Tom Hardy, Doris Rankin, of "Ma Shanks" fame in the stage play, plays the same role in the picture, and the other players are equally as capable.

Lionel Barrymore as "Milt Shanks" in "The Copperhead"

PROGRAM READER

The long heralded and most notable success of the photoplay season, "The Copperhead," starring Lionel Barrymore in the role of Milt Shanks, comes to this theatre for a ——— run beginning ———.

What "The Birth of a Nation" was as an epoch in picture making and as a historical feature is not less than "The Copperhead." Perhaps one of the most wonderful characterizations of the history of the screen is to be found in Mr. Barrymore's "Milt Shanks," the man who suffered for forty years under the appellation of "copperhead," who saw his wife die of a broken heart, who was denied the privilege of looking at the face of his dead son, who went to prison, all to serve his country as President Lincoln's most trusted secret service agent. "The Copperhead" is a leaf from American history, with the life and characteristics of the martyred president coming in for inspection. The role of Lincoln is played by N. Schroell, who is one of the most famous portrayers of this character in the country. The rest of the cast is universally excellent. The attention to detail which has been given the production is also a notable feature. A whole village in Missouri was constructed for the background.

TIN PAN ALLEY (FOX) ALBERT RAY-ELINOR FAIR (DEC. 28)......JAN. 10

TOBY'S BOW (GOLDWYN) TOM MOORE (DEC. 20)......................DEC. 27
“ A very entertaining photoplay.”—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—“ Just an ordinary feature. The story appeared to be rather weak. Average business.”

TONG MAN, THE (HAWORTH-ROBERTSON-COLE) SESSUE HAYAKAWA (DEC. 14)....................DEC. 20
“ Hayakawa in different role that scores.”—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—“ The best feature this star has appeared in. Patrons well pleased and played it to big business for seven days.”

TREE OF KNOWLEDGE, THE (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) ROBERT WARWICK (JAN. 11)....................JAN. 24
“ Kathryn Williams runs away with the show.”—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—“ Played this picture for one week to better than average business. The cast including Kathlyn Williams and Wanda Hawley are strong factors in getting the picture over, even though Warwick's acting is above his usual picture standard. The story while not unusual is carried along by the stars and satisfied my patrons. Photography, direction and settings are all that can be desired.”

TREMBLING HOUR, THE (UNIVERSAL) KENNETH HARLAN-HELEN EDDY (OCT. 26)....................NOV. 1
“ Well knit drama of crooks and mystery.”—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—“ A pleasing picture to extra big business one day.” “ A very good picture. Extra big business.” “ Average picture to poor business two days.”

TRIFLERS, THE (UNIVERSAL) EDITH ROBERTS (JAN. 12)............JAN. 17
“ Will afford very pleasing entertainment.”—M. P. News

TURNING THE TABLES (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) DOROTHY GISH (NOV. 16)....................NOV. 15
“ Farce will agreeably entertain majority.”—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—“ A very good picture, big business two days.” “ Big business all week with Arbuckle comedy on program.”

TWELVE-TEN (REPUBLIC) MARIE DORO (DEC. 14)....................JAN. 3
“ Heavy drama with a mystery element.”—M. P. News.

23¼ HOURS LEAVE (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) MACLEAN-MAY (NOV. 16)....................NOV. 8
“ Best comedy offering of the season.”—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—“ Extra big business all week with attendance increasing during run in spite of adverse weather. We bring it back for another week.” “ Excellent picture, good action and comedy. Big business two days, average one.” “ A very good picture, pleased my patrons. Big business three days.” “ Two news stars made quite a hit in this popular story. Comedy was clean and easily appreciated by all. Everyone delighted with picture that drew more business every night and week finished strong, as people started to talk about it.” “ A phenomenal feature which did phenomenal business for me and pleased my patrons. I played it one week to extra big business every day.”

TWIN PAWNS (PATHE) MAE MURRAY (SEPT. 28)....................OCT. 11
“ This will be generally acceptable.”—M. P. News.

UNDER SUSPICION (UNIVERSAL) ORA CAREW (NOV. 23)............NOV. 22
“ Will pleasantly entertain generally.”—M. P. News.

UNDERCURRENT, THE (SELECT) GUY EMPEY (NOV. 23)............NOV. 29
“ Patriotic note may carry this picture by.”—M. P. News.

VAGABOND LUCK (FOX) RAY-FAIR (NOV. 16)....................NOV. 29
“ Heart interest and atmosphere here.”—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—“ Had heard of this picture, got it and put it over for three days to big business. It is not a big production but a pleasing one and my patrons went away satisfied.”

VALLEY OF TOMORROW, THE (AMERICAN-PATHE) WILLIAM RUSSELL (JAN. 11)....................JAN. 17
“ William Russell in story of vengeance and love.”—M. P. News.

VENGEANCE OF DURAND, THE (VITAGRAPH) ALICE JOYCE........NOV. 15
“ Good suspensive dramatic photoplay.”—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—“ Extra good. Extra big to big business two days.” “ Story weak, photography good, star better than her last two releases. Average to poor business all week.” “ My patrons liked the star and they liked the story. It certainly was a great production and shows careful preparation. Big business two days to average one.”

VICTORY (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) SPECIAL CAST (NOV. 30).......DEC. 6
“ An absorbing heavy calibre drama.”—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—“ Excellent, superb cast. Story well pictured though grewsome, nevertheless it holds interest. The grewsome part is well and delicately handled.” “ A splendid picture which was well accepted by male attendance. It was rather grewsome for the ladies but many of them enjoyed it. It has a wonderful story, well cast, good photography and splendidly directed. Big business every day for one week.” “ This is a good feature with an excellent cast which held my audience throughout. It did big business for me every day or one week.” “ Very disappointing. Big business.”

“ Best Constance Talmadge picture to date.”—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—“ Extra big business for a week. A splendid picture.”

WALK-OFFS, THE (METRO-SCREEN CLASSICS) MAY ALLISON (JAN. 25)....................FEB. 7

WATER, WATER, EVERYWHERE (GOLDWYN)........................FEB. 14
“ Will Rogers makes this picture worth while.”—M. P. News.

WEB OF CHANCE, THE (FOX) PEGGY HYLAND (DEC. 21)............DEC. 27
“ Nothing here to cause you worry.”—M. P. News.

WEB OF DECEIT, THE (CAREW-PATHE) DOLORES CASSINELLI (JAN. 18)....................JAN. 10
“ The dual role seen again.”—M. P. News.

WHAT EVERY WOMAN LEARNS (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) ENID BENNETT (NOV. 9)....................NOV. 1
“ Picturization of an average drama.”—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—“ A very good picture. Extra big business.” “ A dandy picture. Extra big to big business three days.” “ This is a little heavy for Enid Bennett, but every one enjoyed it considerably. It held up well as an average picture. Average business two days.” “ A good feature which did big business for me for one day.”

WHAT'S YOUR HUSBAND DOING (INCE-PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) MACLEAN-MAY (NOV. 23)....................NOV. 22
“ Captivating farce registers high class.”—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—“ Although only Monday this picture is sure of a clean-up on the week. Opened Sunday to nearly $300 more business than any other single day's business in the history of the house. These stars have been ‘made’ here and this one is a sure bet, with the people boosting it.”

WHEN BEARCAT WENT DRY (WORLD) SPECIAL CAST (NOV. 2)......OCT. 25
“ Should register big with majority.”—M. P. News.

“ Sure fire winner with any audience.”—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—“ The fastest, funniest picture the star ever made. Better than his last one and has more action packed into it than any other film of its size. Fairbanks at his best and that's going some. Broke all house records for business. Flood scene was a masterpiece that put them all in the shade.” “ A splendid feature which pleased my patrons. I played it for one week and it did big business for me every day.” “ Had this picture booked for three days but business took such a drop the first two days that I took it off the third. Average to poor business two days.” “ Personal opinion is that this is one of the best Fairbanks pictures released in a long time, although star is not as popular here as he should be. Picture has unsatisfactory ending and makes the whole thing seem more or less improbable. Of course anything can happen in a Fairbanks picture.”

“ Meritorious farce amusingly entertaining.”—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—“ Big business three days.” “ Pleased more patrons than any picture I have shown in a year. Extra big business three days.” “ Played this feature with the Universal feature, ‘The Big Little Person,’ featuring May Murray, to extra big business for one day.” “ Snappy, and they liked it.” “ A fine picture. This star always draws big. Extra big to big business two days.”

WILLOW TREE, THE (SCREEN CLASSIC—METRO) VIOLA DANA (JAN. 11)....................JAN. 17
“ An original and fantastic tale of Japan.”—M. P. News.

WINCHESTER WOMAN, THE (VITAGRAPH) ALICE JOYCE............NOV. 1
“ Pleasing in spite of much coincidence.”—M. P. News.

WINGS OF THE MORNING (FOX) WILLIAM FARNUM (NOV. 24)......DEC. 6
“ Farnum followers will like this one.”—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—“ The star is always good but the picture is far below the Fox standard, although it pleased. Big to average business two days.” It is my opinion that the man who passes this one up will miss the opportunity to do good business. Big business first two days to extra big business last two. We turned them away the last day.”

WOMAN IN THE SUITCASE, THE (INCE-PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) ENID BENNETT (JAN. 18)....................JAN. 24
An unusual picture from every angle.”—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—“ Good entertainment, photography and direction. The story impossible, but acceptable from entertainment point of view. Played it one week to average business.”

WOMAN OF LIES, A (WORLD) JUNE ELVIDGE (OCT. 13)..............OCT. 25
“ Presents Elvidge in an unsympathetic role.”—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—“ Good entertainment, photography and direction. The WOMAN OF PLEASURE, A (HAMPTON-PATHE) BLANCHE SWEET (OCT. 26)....................NOV. 22

"THE BLOOMING ANGEL"

(GOLDWYN)

Miss Kennedy Saves Poorly Developed Idea

It is to the credit of Madge Kennedy that "The Blooming Angel" is fairly interesting for the scenarioist has provided her with only an idea and then failed to develop it into anything which presents opportunity for any member of a competent cast except towards the very last of the feature.

This picture is neither farce, comedy nor drama. It has a farce comedy idea which should have been developed along farce comedy lines, even going the limit with "hookem." Instead it is played with an evident attempt at injecting heart interest and a rather far fetched idea of pointing a moral, not to put a "square peg in a round hole."

Miss Kennedy does much with the slender story. Pat O'Malley is a good type for the leading man role and gets all anyone could out of a part that presents little opportunity and Lois Wilson with the aid of some Harold Lloyd spectacles, makes much of a minor character. The rest of the cast is good.

The production is excellent. The photography is of the usual Goldwyn standard. The story concerns a young lady who marries her college class mate and laundry man without having much to say about it and then drags him into the manufacture of a complexion cream. When the concern is about to fail, the star gets an advertising idea that puts "The Blooming Angel" product on its feet, and wealth and happiness are added to the health the two people have hitherto enjoyed. So far as the character of "Floss" is concerned Miss Kennedy is very well cast. The trouble is that there is so little of real incident provided for her to do. The picture will amuse Miss Kennedy's admirers, but will not make her many new friends.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The combination of Wallace Irwin and Madge Kennedy is something to be reckoned with upon the screen. The former, a noted author, and the latter, a favorite personality, make "The Blooming Angel" an artistic achievement, and a subject which by no means should be missed when it comes to the ——— theatre beginning ———. The story offers the star the role of a fair co-ed, which gives her unique comedy talents ample opportunity for display. She appears as Floss Brannon who is expelled from the college because of certain mischievous antics. Her aunt endeavors to marry her off to Applethwaith, a lawyer, but the girl upsets the plan by accepting Chester Framm, a struggling young student. Realizing that they cannot live on his salary, Floss concocts a complexion cream known as Angel Bloom and the venture proves a success.

She really loves Chester despite his ambitions to become an orator and so she plans to cure his passion for declamation and boost the sale of her cream all in one shot. She rents an elephant from a circus—colors it pink to advertise her cream and gathers a large crowd at a busy corner. As planned Chester appears as the elephant "dies" but a fond admirer also appears and charges Floss with cruelty to animals. At a word from the trainer the elephant comes to life and Floss persuades Chester to make a speech advertising her cream from the back of the elephant. He fails disgracefully. But Floss saves the day and wins back Chester and her Angel Bloom is successfully launched upon the market. Mr. Irwin's story is delightfully human and humorous and is capitally interpreted by the star and her clever assistants. Mr. Schertzinger has handled the story in expert style and pilots it to a most successful conclusion.

CATCH LINES

She married a poor, struggling student and found the wolf at the door. So she concocted a complexion cream and placed it on the market. Did her scheme chase poverty away? See Madge Kennedy in "The Blooming Angel."

She was a co-ed in the college and was expelled for being unduly mischievous. Follow her adventures in "The Blooming Angel," the Goldwyn picture starring Madge Kennedy, the inimitable comedienne.

Wallace Irwin's charming story of a girl, a jar of complexion cream, and an elephant—"The Blooming Angel," will come to this theatre next ——— with Madge Kennedy. Loads of laughter? You bet! The greatest comedy in which Miss Kennedy ever appeared.

PROGRAM READER

It wasn't exactly nice to be expelled from college, but Floss was one of those girls that didn't let such trifles worry her. Her aunt was provoked by her conduct and attempted to marry her off to a certain lawyer. But Floss fooled her by marrying the man she loved, a poor, struggling student. Now they couldn't get along on his meagre salary so Floss conceived the scheme of putting a complexion cream on the market in order to keep the wolf away. And she had her troubles. Make no mistake about it. The cream needed plenty of advertising so one day Floss rented an elephant from the circus and painted it pink—the same color as the cream. How her adventure turned out—how she walked on the high road of success and maintained her husband's love are events which bring an effective climax to as fine a comedy as has reached the screen in many a day. The picture is "The Blooming Angel" by Wallace Irwin. The star is Madge Kennedy. Don't fail to see this

"SMOLDERING EMBERS"

(KEENAN-PATHE)

Character Study Is Colored by Keenan's Art and Personality

An appealing story of paternal love which scores for its character drawing and simplicity of theme is offered in "Smoldering Embers," Frank Keenan's newest expression. The dynamic star has gotten away from his concentrated studies based upon melodramatic backgrounds and comes forward here in a unique role—that of a vagabond. It is the quietest story that Mr. Keenan ever had since there is no recourse to dramatic fireworks. The subject, as is natural with his offerings, is a character study, only this time it is an exceptionally simple one.

The premise upon which the idea is founded is not at all convincing. A man taking up the life of the open road would attempt at least to keep in touch with his child, even though his wife proved unfaithful. And most men would have revealed their identity after twenty years, especially when they have smothered the love for their offspring. But the star is so successful in dominating his scenes and expressing his individuality that you accept the falsities for what they are—mere reinforcements in capitalizing his effective study.

When he finds the boy he appoints himself his guardian and guides him through temptation and romance. This over he takes to the open road again without disclosing his identity. Let it be said that he has no scruples in this direction toward his wife and the boy's stepfather. The latter character is overdrawn. A melodramatic flourish is presented in scoring the tramp's triumph over him, but the sympathetic note is strong enough to overcome any objection to it. Mr. Keenan plays the vagabond in his customary vigorous manner. He stands head and shoulders—literally and figuratively—above his assistants.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Frank Keenan, than whom there is no better character actor on the screen, will come to the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week in his newest picture, "Smoldering Embers." In this story the star essays a new role that of a vagabond. John Conroy, the character assumed by Mr. Keenan, buried his identity and became a tramp when his wife, taking their infant son, ran away with another man. Years later he learns that his son is being forced to marry a girl he does not love because his stepfather has political ambitions. The latter is also attempting to get control of the property that is the rightful inheritance of the boy.

Pretending to be nothing but a tramp seeking companionship, the father makes friends with the boy, whose path of true love is proverbially thorny. He saves the unhappy youth from many a pitfall and, when at last he is assured of his son's happiness, he goes back to the road that is open and long, leaving behind in the heart of the boy and his sweetheart a grateful memory of an old tramp with a heart of gold. It's a great, big, simple picture this "Smoldering Embers" and it is doubtful if the star ever had a more charming and sympathetic role. He gives a performance long to be remembered. Jay Belasco, Kate Van Buren, Thomas Guise are members of a capable supporting cast.

Frank Keenan, America's greatest character actor, comes to the ——— screen next ——— in the most compelling role of his long and varied career. See him as a vagabond in "Smoldering Embers."

See "Smouldering Embers," a picture of a tender-hearted, generous old tramp, who brings sunshine into the life of youthful lovers. See Frank Keenan in his greatest role.

PROGRAM READER

Here is Frank Keenan again in another compelling role. This time the eminent character actor appears as a vagabond—a knight of the open road. The picture is "Smouldering Embers," by Kate Corbaley, and it comes to this theatre very shortly. Mr. Keenan's part is full of difficulties because of its very simplicity. The story glorifies father love. As John Conroy, the star becomes a tramp because of his wife's faithlessness. She takes her infant son with her and years later, when the boy reaches maturity, the father comes into his life and saves him from danger. His work done, the vagabond exits, happy in the knowledge that his son is happy and thinks of his father (whom he believes died in Alaska) as a "regular fellow." It is a picture which reveals a charming romance and a clever characterization. The human touch is everywhere. Watch for the date.

"PICCADILLY JIM"
(SELZNICK)

Entertaining Light Comedy from Popular Story

WHILE the critical might justly contend that this adaptation of the P. G. Woodhouse story in the Saturday Evening Post is convenient and resorts to a surprising amount of coincidence, we feel quite sure that it will be accepted by audiences as a most entertaining picture, one which is a worthy running mate for the many light comedies the season has brought forth and certainly the best thing Director Wesley Ruggles has ever done.

All the unique characters of Mr. Woodhouse's yarn are brought to the screen without loss in their contrasting comedy values and the story so far as plot goes has been faithfully followed. There are additions to the incidents which befell "Piccadilly Jim" during his courtship of Ann Chester, but they are evidently only used in an effort to construct a good continuity which, however, remains somewhat episodic owing to the fact the original story did considerable "jumping about" both in London and New York. These additions, too, have been invested with some very human and pleasing touches, which excuses them from being padding.

Owen Moore as the star is satisfactory, but does no more than the rest of a fine cast of types to put the picture over. Fundamentally it is an author's and director's picture, no one character being instrumental in more than contributing to its success. Perhaps the best bit of characterization is that of Reginald Sheffield, who is a great type for the great role of "Oggie." There has not been much of an attempt to make the feature artistic. It starts in to tell its story and keeps at it to the end. Neither is it to be considered as any great dramatic achievement, the comedy angles being kept in mind at all times.—Length, 5 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

THE CAST

Piccadilly Jim	Owen Moore
Ann Chester	Zeena Keefe
Mr. Bingley Crocker	Geo. Bunny
Peter Pett	William Haze
Mrs. Peter Pett	Dora Mill Adams
Lord Wisebeach	Alfred Hickman
Ogden Pett	Reginald Sheffield
"Jerry"	"Harlem Tommy" Murphy

By P. G. Wodehouse.
Directed by Wesley Ruggles.

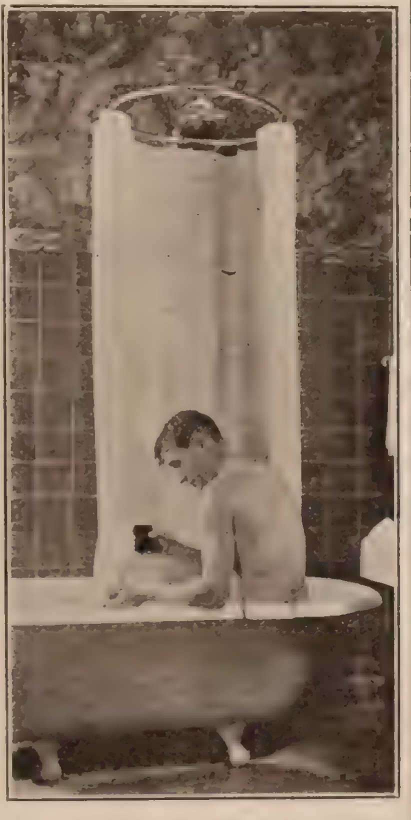
PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Owen Moore, the popular Selznick star, will appear at the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week in a picturization of P. G. Wodehouse's Saturday Evening Post story, "Piccadilly Jim." Translated upon the screen it offers Mr. Moore an ideal role. Mr. Wodehouse is widely known as a magazine author and playwright and he can usually be depended upon to write in original terms. The counterpart of the character that the star interprets here has never been seen on the screen before. As Piccadilly Jim, a newspaper man who goes to England and becomes involved in scrapes, Mr. Moore creates a character that will long be remembered by his many admirers. In punching a nobleman's nose Jim finds that the atmosphere of his home is too uncomfortable, so he decides to return to America. This course is entirely in keeping with the wishes of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Pett, his American aunt and uncle, with whose happiness and social aspirations his newspaper notoriety seriously interferes, and who have gone to London to bring him back and keep him under their watchful eye.

Jim goes to America—not with his relatives, however—not until he meets THE GIRL. Naturally, she is young and pretty, and Jim is young and impressionable—and the spark is kindled. In America a series of complications arise. Plotters, kidnappers and adventurers appear. After an assortment of funny situations Jim convinces the girl of his heart that marriage with the erstwhile pride of Piccadilly Row might not be so bad after all. The tale teems with originality and bristles with situations of an exceptionally humorous character. Mr. Moore is supported by a distinguished cast of players. Wesley Ruggles is the director.

SUGGESTIONS

Here is a picture from a Saturday Evening Post story. So exploit it as worthy entertainment. Mention the author and that he is responsible for some of the finest stories that have ever reached the screen. Bring out that it is Owen Moore's first Selznick picture. It lends itself well to exploitation not only in regard to feature stunts in the way of lobby display, but in newspaper advertising. Mention that the story reveals a colorful character—a fellow who is breezy and full of fun. Tell that the picture is a sparkling comedy. Give an English touch to your lobby through using compo board illustrated with the leading character in the correct fashion. Don't fail to mention that Owen Moore is back with his happy-go-lucky smile and that he appears in one of the finest comedies of his career. Use line ads for the newspapers.



In "Piccadilly Jim" Owen Moore has the part of a young "rounder" who later reforms. It is a Selznick picture

"Piccadilly Jim," Owen Moore's first Selznick picture, is a sparkling comedy of a newspaper man who finds notoriety in London. The picture has been taken from the Saturday Evening Post story by P. G. Wodehouse.

PROGRAM READER

Piccadilly Jim was an American newspaper man who found in London a perfect city to seek notoriety. He followed the fashions. He was spatted and no one would have guessed that he came from America unless one was familiar with his escapades. Jim got into a peck of trouble in "deah old Lunon"—so much so that he was forced to flee back to the States. But he was resourceful enough to be accompanied by the MOST BEAUTIFUL GIRL IN THE WORLD. You will like Piccadilly Jim. He is one of those dashing fellows who ingratiates himself through sheer force of personality. You will like Owen Moore as this humorous character. Remember the story? Of course you do. It appeared in the Saturday Evening Post and was written by the prolific author, P. G. Wodehouse. "Piccadilly Jim" is a picture which bristles with humor from beginning to end—the kind of picture which will send you away satisfied with the world. It appears at this theatre next ———. Don't fail to see it.

"$30,000"
(BRUNTON-HODKINSON)

Kerrigan in Typical Melodramatic Romance

ALTHOUGH this is highly improbable in several of its important sequences, introduces such old friends of the director and scenarioist as the masked ball, the gambling palace, and restaurant without much reason except to provide some big sets, clothes and such things, we are inclined to think that it will pass as average entertainment with most audiences and be a delight to the admirers of the star.

The plot is partially rather out of the ordinary, but in other places it throws all reason to the four winds. Where it registers as good is the providing of two leading women from which the hero is to pick his future spouse, the framing of an excuse for involving the players in a lot of action relative to a pearl necklace and thirty thousand dollars and the withholding of information on the outcome of the romance until the very last few feet of film. Where it is not so good is the convenient way the necklace episodes are treated and the careless manner they use thirty thousand dollars. Even an honest lawyer wouldn't place that sum behind the wires holding pictures on his office walls while he danced at a mask ball to later retire for the night.

J. Warren Kerrigan as the young lawyer is his own handsome self, which means being a bit theatric. Fritzi Brunette is the lady he chooses for his wife and Joe Dowling does a bit which permits little real opportunities in his own masterful style. The rest of the cast is adequate to the roles provided and the staging is up to standard. The continuity, however, is not so good.—Length, 5 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

THE CAST

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

J. Warren Kerrigan, the popular star, will be seen at the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week in his latest photoplay entitled "$30,000." The part of the resourceful lawyer, John Trask, is singularly fitted to the personality of the star, and he makes a likeable as well as a commanding figure in the humorous and dramatic scenes of the picture. The offering may best be defined as a drama which carries a comedy flourish at times. Throughout the action tense situations and humorous interludes give the feature an excellent balance. The idea presents a young lawyer who is selected for the task of recovering a necklace valued at $30,000. Sydney Lloyd steals it from his rich uncle and loses it to a ring of gamblers. His cousin, Christine Lloyd, undertakes to recover the jewels. The gamblers send word that they will return the necklace for $30,000, stipulating that the transaction must be made through a third party. So she enlists the services of Trask.

He gladly consents and the woman tells him that a party will visit him the next morning and exchange the jewels for the money. He hides the money in his office. The leader of the gamblers persuades Aline Norton, the daughter of a ruined old aristocrat, to act as emissary. She has no inkling of his crooked character. That night her father, in his capacity as janitor, enters Trask's office and steals the money. When Trask finds the sum missing he goes to the gamblers' rendezvous to investigate. He wins $30,000 at roulette, which he gives to Aline in exchange for the necklace. The stones are found to be false and Trask raids the den single-handed recovering the real jewels. Aline's father repents and sends her to the lawyer's office with the stolen money. With the theft straightened out, the young people continue their romance.

CATCH LINES

$30,000. Whew! That's a lot of money. The Lawyer put it behind a picture on the wall and the next morning it was gone. An exciting picture—a picture of a lawyer and a thief. See "$30,000" with J. Warren Kerrigan.

The man who stole the money was the father of the girl he loved. And the young man was a lawyer. How did he work out his problem? See "$30,000" with J. Warren Kerrigan.

PROGRAM READER

How would you like to be a lawyer and entrusted with the task of recovering a necklace valued at $30,000? Now John Trask had enough initiative to tackle most anything and he didn't flinch at turning detective for a time. The necklace was lost to a group of gamblers who stated that they would return it for $30,000. The woman from whom the jewels were stolen had the cash all right though she had to act with the gamblers through a third party. Hence the reason that Trask was selected. How he recovered the necklace is told in a series of complicated situations which are presented in tense dramatic scenes. The picture is "$30,000" and the star is J. Warren Kerrigan. The offering will be at the ——— theatre very soon. Watch for the date.

SUGGESTIONS

The name of Kerrigan looks like the best advertising bet here, inasmuch as he is one of the oldest players in point of service on the screen. He is a favorite and his pictures are usually followed with keen interest. So the best advice is play up his personality in publicity stories and photographs. Tell that he appears as a lawyer here and that his task is the recovery of a valuable necklace—a piece of jewelry which gets him into a peck of trouble. Use phrasing as colorful as possible in describing the character he impersonates. Bring out that his task is complicated because he finds romance in fulfilling it. It is a fast-moving story and a good thing of its kind. So use effective arguments telling that it will keep the spectators on the anxious seat with suspense. Use catch lines. And treat the story in a mysterious manner. Don't give away the plot. It is against picture ethics to reveal a plot that has to do with a theft.

Outside the Law

By Stuart Rivers

Character of Story: Melodrama.

Theme: Crime and romance.

Characters: Frances Tucker, a girl of Greenwich Village; Henry Ballin, attorney; Jane Ballin, his sister, leader of society and of band of crooks; Judge Crane, friend of Henry Ballin; Jack Morrison, society man; Red Larkin, a gangster; Mrs. Darrow, Crane's housekeeper; Annie, a girl of the underworld; Mother Sarah, an old woman; Laura Willis, stenographer; Tracy and Burke, chauffeurs; gangsters, police, etc.

The Plot: Frances Tucker, a girl who has been earning her living selling candy in a tea room in Greenwich Village, finds a pocketbook on the floor with one hundred dollars in it. On this she takes a vacation in the country. Returning on the train, she sees a man slip a string of pearls into the pocket of Henry Ballin. Shortly after he is arrested by a detective on the train and Frances gets him clear by telling what she has seen and pointing out Red Larkin, the real culprit. Ballin invites Frances to lunch with him and there they meet Ballin's sister, Jane. Frances sees in the restaurant several of the crooks who have been in the habit of frequenting the tea room where she formerly worked, including a woman named Sussie—who is really Jane in disguise and the leader of a gang of counterfeiters and general crooks. From this time on Frances and Ballin are pursued by the crooks, who endeavor to make away with them and very nearly succeed in a number of instances. Frances is stabbed and Ballin is arrested charged with the assault. He is cleared by Judge Crane. Crane and Frances are abducted and taken to a country house up the river. The Judge manages to reach a telephone and telephones his house just as Ballin goes there in search of information. Ballin and his chauffeur rescue them. Exciting and mysterious event in Crane's house lead to the discovery of a secret passage to the house next door, where evidence is found that the housekeeper of Crane's house has been hidden away. This is the residence of Morrison, a society man in league with the crooks. The gang, by mistake, murder a stenographer, Laura Willis, under the impression that it is Frances. Crane and Ballin give out the information that Frances has been murdered and she disguises herself as a crook from Chicago and in this character works herself into the confidence of Jane in her character of Sussie, leader of the gang. Ballin pretends also to be a crook named Burns and in disguise mingles with the members of the gang. He is suspected and trapped in a cellar. Frances is also made a prisoner, but stands off the gang with Ballin's revolver. By telephone she reaches Burke, a friend of Ballin's chauffeur and also a chauffeur. This man brings help and entices Jane and one of her confederates, Morrison, to accompany him to the den where Frances and Ballin are held. Jane, upon being discovered and realizing that the game is up, leaps through a trap door into the clutches of a death-dealing machine below the floor of the den. Morrison confesses that the gang have been after Frances because they thought her a private detective and determined to get rid of Bailin because he had discovered counterfeit plates belonging to them. He explains that Jane became involved in the affairs of the gang through doing settlement work and this same work afterward served as a shield for her real occupation.

Locale: New York.

The Strong Hours

By Maud Diver

Character of Story: Sociological novel.

Theme: Character.

Characters: Evan Blount, son of Lord Avonleigh; Derek Blount, his brother; Lord Avonleigh; Lady Avonleigh; Gabrielle de Vigne; Jack Burlton; Marion Blount; Schonberg, a naturalized German; Karl Schonberg, his son.

The Plot: Of the two sons of Lord Avonleigh, Evan of "Van" is the older and the heir. He is the favorite son of both father and mother and enough of a natural born diplomat to make events serve his turn. Evan is easy going, pleasure loving, smooth spoken and hates responsibility. Derek is a serious minded young man who is devoted to his ideals, blunt in manner and more or less diffident. He will sacrifice himself for a principle. Lord Avonleigh receives a call to act as Governor of a province in India. His wife a rather shallow person of small imagination and a great love of comfort hates the idea of leaving her home. The older son must be left in charge of the estate and the younger has made up his mind to try his luck in Australia, so Lord Avonleigh goes to India accompanied by a sister. In Australia Derek gains some experience with the world and then goes to Canada where he roughs it as a lumberman. Purely out of pity he marries a very pretty and undereducated young woman of the lumber country who has been stricken with consumption and who is in love with him. The war breaks out in Europe and he is unable to go. This galls him. The little wife learning of this endeavors to find her way to the home of some friends thinking that if she is out of the way he can go to fight. She dies from the effects of her effort. Derek returns to England and enters the army. He finds that his brother has made great friends with Schonberg, a German-Englishman, and has appointed Karl Schonberg manager of the family estates. Schonberg the elder establishes a hospital in the Hall. Derek warns his brother without avail. Evan falls into debt to Schonberg and decides to recoup his fortunes by marrying Gabrielle de Vigne. Karl is also in love with her but as his father has been responsible for the financial ruin of her father, dares not approach her. Evan gets on fairly well with his suit but when he finds she has adopted a Belgian baby he makes such a fuss that she gets a new light on his character. Evan is in a Government department. Word finally reaches Lord Avonleigh in India that things are not going well at home and that there is much scandal being talked of the hospital at his estate, owing to the public knowledge of the fact that the emoney for it was furnished by a German and that it has been a practice of the Germans to seek information of military value through putting German or supposedly neutral nurses into hospitals in enemy countries. There are rumors of a wireless established in one of the outlying houses belonging to the estate. Lord Avonleigh breaks the relations between his son and the German. Karl renounces his German name and joins the army. Derek marries Gabrielle.

Locale: England and Canada.

Picture High Lights: There is more dramatic atmosphere than dramatic opportunity in this. The book has achieved considerable vogue in England and here.

A Letter of Discredit

By Garret Smith

Character of Story: Romance.

Theme: Regeneration.

Characters: George Bradwell, an ex-convict; Amos Warren, an attorney; Bruiser, an ex-convict; J. B. Matthews; Guthrie, Sanford & Pierson, attorneys; Deacon Ward; Judge Thurston, Agnes Thurston; Yates, Vice-President of the Great Lakes Marine Insurance Company.

The Plot: George Bradwell, raised in luxury by his father and permitted to draw checks at will against his father's bank account, is left, at the death of his father, penniless. He works for a lawyer named Amos Warren and draws a check to which he signs Warren's name. This is for one thousand dollars. He is arrested and sent to prison for a year. As he is leaving he is warned by Bruiser, another ex-convict, that there is no chance for him to "go straight" since his experience will follow him wherever he goes. Bradwell does not believe this and applies to Warren for his old position. Warren refuses him this. Bradwell then goes to him and asks him for a letter of discredit—a letter stating the worst than can be said of him. This he intends to present wherever he goes so that the worst will be known at once and he will not be in fear of exposure. He then goes to Buffalo where he has some trouble landing a position but finally gets work with a lawyer named Matthews who, in discussing the case at a club has bet $100.00 that he would hire such a man. He is not well treated in this place and is finally discharged accused of stealing cigars which he knows were stolen by the office boy. He gets a position with Guthrie, Sanford & Pierson. He soon discovers that they are scuttling ships to get the insurance and they learn of his discovery. They frame up a deal to charge him with forging a check for $500.00 and threaten to send him to jail again. He bluffs them into letting him go by stating that he will tell all that he knows. He gets a job on a steamer and this is sunk in a storm. He finds that the cargo is fake. For two years he is a tramp. Then he comes to a village where he meets Judge Thurston who makes a hobby of helping men who are down and out. He gets a position with Deacon Ward. He has made the Judge promise to tell his story to everyone but the Judge does not do it, thinking to wait until George is well established. A rumor reaches the town and Ward discharges Bradwell. Bradwell starts to leave town and is followed by Agnes Thurston, daughter of the Judge, who loves him and whom he has hoped to marry. He brings her home and she and her father insist that he stay with them. Yates of the Great Lakes Marine Insurance Company comes to town looking for Bradwell and he expects that he is to be arrested for the alleged forgery in Buffalo but finds that evidence has been secured by Yates' men that the forgery was a frame-up. The insurance people are after evidence against Guthrie, Sanford & Pierson and this Bradwell is now able to furnish. On the strength of this his citizenship is restored and he is given a position with the Great Lakes Insurance Company and all ends well.

Locale: Northern New York.

Picture High Lights: Good picture material of melodramatic type but would be improved if the first forgery were not so flimsily explained.

Mermaid

By Grant M. Overton

Character of Story: Drama.

Theme: Heritage.

Characters: Captain John Smiley; Mrs. Smiley; Mermaid, their daughter; Kenturah Hand, his sister; Hoesa Hand; Richard Hand; Dick Hand, Richard's son; Guy Vanton; Captain Buel Vanton, formerly Captain King; Tommy Lupton.

The Plot: Mermaid is washed ashore from a wreck and taken to live with Captain John Smiley, in charge of the coast guard. She is without a history so far as is known. She remembers nothing before the ship on which she was when the wreck occurred. She grows up in the village of Blue Port on Long Island and plays with Tommy Lupton, Dick Hand and Guy Vanton. The latter is the son of a peculiar retired sea captain who is rich but very diffident and unsocial. Guy has spent a part of his life in Paris and is different from the other boys. They regard him more or less as a "sissy" but when forced to fight he is more than able to defend himself. All three of the boys are in love with Mermaid as she blossoms into womanhood but Guy Vanton is always her favorite. Eventually she learns the history of Captain Vanton who shoots himself. He was Captain King, once a mate on board a ship in the command of Smiley's uncle. King fell in love with Mrs. Hawkins—Kenturah Hawkins—and spoke to her in such a manner that he was trussed up by the thumbs and whipped before the ship's crew. From this time on he could think of nothing but his love for her and his desire for vengeance on her husband. He met them only once thereafter and on that occasion was beaten by Hawkins. At length, driven more or less crazy by his brooding, he conspired with Richard Hand to have a man lure away the wife of Captain Smiley, taking with her her baby daughter—the baby who afterward grew up to be Mermaid of the story. After years Mrs. Smiley was drowned and a change came over King, or Vanton as he now called himself. He felt that he must atone so far as possible for what he had done, so he came to the town of Blue Port intending to set all right in regard to the girl. Not being certain as to whether or not Guy was his own son—the mother being a woman long since dead—he tried to insure the boy against falling into his own manner of life by telling him something of his own early history. This had the effect of making Guy feel that he was in some way accursed. After the death of Vanton Mermaid married Guy in spite of his protests that he should not take such a chance with the possibility that he might be Vanton's son and grow to resemble him. After the wife has born him three children he suddenly gives way to a craving for the sea, provides for them and disappears. By this time Mermaid begins to return the love of Dick Hand and when another wreck washes in the body of Guy Vanton, she is free to reward in Dick the years of devotion which he has shown her.

Locale: A village on Long Island.

Picture High Lights: Good melodramatic situations but story needs more cheerful atmosphere and happier ending.

ASK Dad—He Knows

The teacher said to the class—"What word is it that expresses satisfaction, service and quality all in one?" And the little boy whose father is a projectionist promptly answered——

"SIMPLEX!!"

The word Simplex means to the motion picture industry what the word "Kodak" means in the photographic line.

In the "write-up" of new theatre openings the following line is invariably present—"Two Simplex projectors are part of the equipment."

PERTINENT POINTS

A star, loved the country over, in the most bewitching part of her career.

From a directorial standpoint the name of Robert Z. Leonard guarantees the artistic and mechanical perfection of the production.

Adrian Johnson, prolific writer of screen stories whose successes are legion, made the adaptation from Cynthia Stockley's famous Cosmopolitan Magazine story.

It will be backed by the greatest advertising campaign in the history of pictures.

A masque ball is hardly the place one expects to encounter serious adventure but the heroine in this story does. It leads her across the ocean into a most amazing and unexpected series of happenings where only her wit and ingenuity save her from disastrous consequences. Situation builds upon situation, each one consistently climbing to the most startling and fascinating climax ever written into a photoplay. There is romance in abundance, plenty of comedy, a dash of melodrama and a touch of pathos all so cleverly intermingled that every one of the emotions are played upon.

As a story it made a host of new friends for the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

As a picture it will increase the clientele of every exhibitor showing it.

It's the kind of a production that everybody in the country will want to see.

"You say you want good pictures"

"'THE COPPERHEAD' is one instance where you get what you want." So says Mae Tinee in the Chicago Tribune.

"Lionel Barrymore's interpretation for the screen," she adds, "is a masterpiece. May the mouthing, posturing screen heroes witness his achievement in repression and learn a lesson thereby! There are a number of reasons why you should see 'The Copperhead.' It has a good story. It has patriotic appeal. It has heart interest. It is splendidly staged. It is splendidly acted. It is to be numbered among the big photoplays of the day."

The Chicago Evening Post says: "Here is a truly great picture, one of the finest photoplays ever made. It measures up to every standard of excellence. In nobility of purpose, in fineness of acting, in simplicity and power of story, in skill and dramatic force of presentation it has seldom been equaled and never has it been surpassed. I wish that everyone might see it. It is a production which makes one proud of motion pictures. It redeems one's faith in the power of the screen."

The Chicago Journal: "'The Copperhead' is an achievement. It comes nearer creating for the screen an art like the best of the stage than anything that has gone before. Photodramas like this are lamentably few. They should be seen by everyone. Don't deprive yourself of seeing 'The Copperhead.'"

The Chicago Herald-Examiner says: "Where you and I surge after this and that new style of picture, there is nothing to do but go and go again to a photo story that deals in nothing but fine, sound sincerity, — honest, inherently American, written out of the one life that our country has given to the ages."

The Chicago Daily News: "'The Copperhead' is a great picture. In it the silent drama has an offering to which it can point with pride as a shining example of its art."

The Chicago Examiner: "The biggest Paramount-Artcraft picture to make its appearance so far this year is 'The Copperhead.' No praise is too florid in reviewing Lionel Barrymore's work. He sets a high mark for other actors to aim at in forthcoming productions."

"The Copperhead is truly great."

A PICTURE for the whole United States. North, south, east, west—its appeal is for every American with a heart and soul.

Shown at the State Confederate Home in Austin, Texas, it brought forth this message from Superintendent J. C. Leggins: "'The Copperhead' brings out the great love and faith of one man for another and is a great moral force to us of the older generation and to the youths as well. Am sure more good comment will come from this picture among the old boys than from any other modern topic of the times for many days to come. It brought back to us many incidents so realistic that some of us believed we were actually in ranks again."

And this from Superintendent S. J. Thomas of the State Confederate Women's Home in Austin, Texas: "We the members of the State Confederate Women's Home, wish to urge every citizen of the South, when the opportunity is presented, to see 'The Copperhead.' Although we of the South suffered painfully, all of us could see the heroic spirit revealed in this picture. The ideals of patriotism are sounded from start to finish."

Justice Hawkins of the Supreme Court of the State of Texas says: "'The Copperhead' is both interesting and instructive. The South, as the supreme court, will look upon it in this light."

And the mayor of this typical southern city says: "One of the best pictures I have ever seen. Don't be afraid to show it anywhere in the United States. It will go."

UNITED ARTISTS CORPORATION
ANNOUNCES

Miss Doris Keane
in "Romance"

From the Celebrated Play
by EDWARD SHELDON

Directed by Chet Withey

A Great Play is Brought to the Screen

"Romance," one of the outstanding dramatic successes of the past decade, is coming to the screen.

Its remarkable record on the stage—nearly three years in London, a year in Chicago, a phenomenal season in New York, a special engagement of eight weeks in Boston—made it the object of the keenest bidding among motion picture producers.

United Artists Corporation is fortunate, not only in having acquired the play for picture presentation, but likewise in having Miss Keane herself appear in the role that she has made one of the most vivid figures of the modern stage.

"Romance" has won its way into the hearts of drama-lovers, because it tells an unusual, remarkable story and because of the rare talent and artistry that Miss Keane brought to it.

And so the play bespeaks an unusual picture—a picture of powerful and lasting appeal.

PUBLIC NOTICE TO

Hereafter when you try to induce artists under contract with the Universal to break their contracts, I shall call you by name. I shall dangle you up before the eyes of the exhibitors of the world and show that these dishonest practices of yours are the direct cause of the frightful increase in the cost of making pictures.

Some of you are now trying to get Mr. Erich von Stroheim because his picture "Blind Husbands" proves that he is the greatest discovery in years in the matter of directors; and because you have heard that his second picture "The Devil's Passkey" is even a greater triumph. Unfortunately for you, von Stroheim comes of good old stock and your money and your wiles cannot tempt him from the path of honor.

When Mr. von Stroheim was untried and unknown as a director, why didn't you gamble on him, as the Universal did? Why didn't you have vision enough to see that he had the makings of a great director? Failing to do this, why do you now hang over him like vultures seeking to grab him by hook or crook, with the accent on the crook?

Have you no sense of decency or honor? Don't you know that any profit you might make by causing another man to violate his written word of honor is polluted profit, tainted money which is unfit to spend on your wives and your children? Don't you know that star-stealing or even attempted star-stealing is a specie of pimping which is loathsome in the eyes of civilized men and women?

I serve notice on you here and now that Erich von Stroheim is under contract with the Universal for years to come. And so is Priscilla Dean, whose great production soon to be released will make your smirking mouths water with desire to smash her contract. And so is Harry Carey. And so are Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran, Marie Walcamp, Eddie Polo, Edith Roberts, Frank Mayo, Tod Browning, Rollin Sturgeon, Jack Ford, Allen Holubar, Dorothy Phillips and Robert Andersen.

Do you imagine that by hiding behind "agents" and fake corporations you can still violate all principle and all honor and continue to get away with it unharmed?

Do you imagine that because the Universal has been long-suffering in the past and has never considered any star worth fighting for when that star developed a sense of dishonor, that we will continue to let you pick our pockets hereafter?

Let this sink into your consciousness:—The Universal has engaged counsel at both coasts to prosecute to the fullest limit of the law any one of you who hereafter befouls the moving picture business by trying to continue your rotten dealings of the past. We intend to exercise our rights at any cost and without a let-up. We will not confine ourselves to enforcing contracts with individuals but we will punish, as much as the law permits, any crooked agent or corporation who tries to induce any artist to jump a contract with us.

You, and the exhibitors who support you, are directly to blame for the present frightful costs of making pictures. Drunk with easy money you have tried to use the power of that money to corrupt or dissatisfy artist after artist who had none but honorable intentions and the best of good faith until you came along with your almost irresistible bribes.

You are not going to get away with it any longer. I am going to turn the spotlight on your activities every time those activities are crooked. I am going to frizzle you on the grill of redhot public opinion. I am going to use the one weapon that you are afraid of—The Truth!

This is my final warning. I will not write you any more polite private letters asking you to let our artists alone. As fast as I get the goods on you I will address you publicly and fight the matter out before the eyes of the exhibitors as well as before the courts.

I have tried working with you in National Associations and have found they are not worth a tinker's damn. I have tried every way I can think of to induce you to play the game with the cards on the table. But you don't know how. You used marked cards and you deal from the bottom of the deck!

Crooks of the world, which one of you will be first to take me on!

This Tells Why Realart Believes You Can Make Money With

an ALLAN DWAN Production

HERE is the reason for our faith: "The Luck of the Irish" has been put through the hardest practical box office tests we have been able to devise and has come out triumphant; in fact, has far exceeded expectations.

Every Realart Picture thus far marketed has had a pre-release test. We do not accept the opinion of any man, or group of men, that a picture is "great."

Realart recognizes but one judge of pictures—the public! What we think isn't worth a picayune to you as against what your Box Office says. We try to provide good pictures, but we are not infallible.

The Public is!

And so Realart puts its pictures up to the public before it puts them up to you.

We have done this twice in the case of "The Luck of the Irish." We first showed it for a week in Sid Grauman's million dollar Los Angeles theatre. Mr. Grauman assures us, and you, that it went over with a bang. He says it is a picture that will make money for any exhibitor.

Since then we have brought the picture to New York and have shown it for a week in the big new Capitol Theatre. And it has repeated its Los Angeles success!

"The Luck of the Irish" has been a success in two of the biggest and best motion picture theatres in America. It has satisfactorily met two very differently exacting tests. Bourgeois Broadway, in the East, and aristocratic Broadway, in the West, both have endorsed it. It is of the people and of the elect!

Realart has done its part. The tests have confirmed its judgment. It therefore now offers, not its own opinion, or Dwan's opinion, or Mayflower's opinion, but the verdict of the people, as one reason why you should book "The Luck of the Irish."

Realart Pictures Are Box Office Tested!

"THE RETURN OF TARZAN"

"THE RETURN OF TARZAN"

The latest of the Edgar Rice Burroughs' stories of the mighty ape-man has been made into screen lore by Numa Pictures Corporation.

The publishers of the books cannot keep editions in stock vast enough to meet the demand. There is no need to blaze Tarzan in electrics—that advertising has been done. Tarzan's selling worth is gold-pure-unalloyed.

The gayety of Parisian society, the dizzy whirl of that city's famous underworld, the drama of sunfrought Algerian deserts, the conflict of men of might aboard a huge ocean-liner, the savagery, mystery and thrilling romance of the African jungle, all mingled into the playground of this story.

A cast of recognized players headed by Gene Pollar includes Walter Miller, Karla Schramm, Armond Cortez, George Romain, Estelle Taylor, Donna Ramirez, Peggy Hannon, many jungle actors.

The direction by Harry Revier and supervision by George M. Merrick, combine the artistic, technical and dramatic judgment of these well-known masters of their craft.

John K. Holbrook and James C. Hutchinson, the camera-staff have contributed distinctive photographic effects as their share.

"The Return of Tarzan" by virtue of its story vogue, remarkable production, selected cast superb direction and notable photography is the greatest attraction in screen circles today.

It is the 1920 epoch.

PRISCILLA DEAN

The VIRGIN of ST

THE STAR

YOU know it as well as we—there are only a bare half-dozen real screen stars. Only a half-dozen who really reach out across the street and pull people into your theatre. Priscilla Dean, as you know, is one of these marvelous six—because of her flashing beauty, enormous personal magnetism and stirring individuality. Such an actress means more to you in net dollars and cents than you can easily estimate because her coming is a genuine event in the amusement life of your people. So—get ready now for a picture in which every bit of this talent, this personality, this bright-eyed beauty is utilized to the uttermost. Get ready for the screen's most meteoric actress in "THE VIRGIN OF STAMBOUL."

THE STORY

IT gets away from the usual plot—it gets away from the usual scenes—it lifts you out of your too-familiar surroundings—it stirs your blood—it fires your imagination. A beautiful beggar girl of Constantinople—a dashing young American soldier-of-fortune — an all-powerful Sheik of the Desert—these are your chief figures. The scenes? The Golden Horn, the howling streets of the most cosmopolitan city on earth, the shuttered harems—all the dramatic terrors and beauties of the land of the Sultan—then the great burning wastes of the Arabian desert and a rushing climax of action that lifts you out of your seat with its realism and power—that gives you a huge human drama whose pictures and emotions will live in your mind for years to come.

THE PRODUCTION

A HUGE sum of money was spent on "THE VIRGIN OF STAMBOUL"—but every cent of it shows in the production. Advertise it as the year's most costly roduction—your statement will be true. But lso advertise it as the one in which you get the nost for your money. It is not possible to show n this single advertising insert the scenes, the ets, the staging, the locations which make this ne of America's greatest pictures—we only ask ou to accept our statement that "THE VIRGIN F STAMBOUL," as a production, has been qualled by very few pictures in the history of he art. When we say it fills the eye, you will ave an idea of its sumptuousness—its marvelous letail. Get ready—as we said before—for a real vent in the picture story of your theatre.

DE LUXE

PRISCILLA DEAN

"THE VIRGIN OF STAMBOUL"

Utterly different from any other picture now on the market by reason of the striking personality of the star—the bigness and the realism of its human story—the mighty sweep and scope of its tremendous scenes. A Booklet, with the proofs on every page, will soon be in your hands—but we urge, wherever possible, the earliest pre-release screening of this remarkable picture than can be arranged. DAREDEVIL JACK

We can hear some one say "I'll admit that Dempsey is a superlative box office attraction, but is the serial itself good?"

Listen, Mr. Man; the Pathe film committee looks at so many pictures that it is "fed up", it's hardboiled. It takes a ring dinger of a picture to get a good rating from that crowd. Weeks ago the first episodes of "Daredevil Jack" were shown all together to the committee, a hard test. There were fourteen present; thirteen gave the serial the highest possible rating and the fourteenth the next highest!

If we know serial audiences they'll just eat this serial up. Dempsey as a star is there and Robert Brunton has given true feature production.

EDGAR AND THE TEACHER'S PET

First of the Edgar Stories

Two reels of breathless fun packed with the kind of comedy that tickles the universal funny-bone of humanity!

A series of delightful flashes reveals the fascinating interior of Edgar's mind --- his idea of his friends, his relatives and himself. From that point on, the picture is uproarious farce, distinguished by the warm, glowing humor that has made Booth Tarkington beloved of millions

Revenge, Despair or Love?

Which was the motive behind the bullet fired by the masked assassin? Jacob Strauss had enemies everywhere, any one of whom might have believed he was doing a good deed in ridding the world of the milk magnate.

Suspense, love interest, realistic settings and an astounding climax, combine to make this picture one of intense interest.

This Series of Features contains many startling situations, and "Tex" runs up against the whole gamut of human emotions when he seeks to unravel the mystery surrounding the shooting of Jacob Strauss in the third picture of this great detective series.

We had to show them

BACK OF THE SPECIAL PICTURES CORPORATION is the Aronson Co., controlled by the Hellman group of bankers—men who are in the front rank of finance in Western America.

THESE MEN LIVE in the very capital of the film world. They can't afford to guess. They know! They know—as few men do—the factors that count for success in the production and marketing of motion pictures.

SO BEFORE WE could even hope to interest them in our plan of concentration on the producing and marketing of short subjects we had to show them.

WE SHOWED THEM that the big idea back of these films is essentially practical.

WE SHOWED THEM the peculiar genius of our producing heads.

WE SHOWED THEM that, despite the great amount of footage being turned out today, there is an overwhelming demand on the part of film fans for just such comedy-features.

WE SHOWED THEM that no other film on the market could hope to compete with these releases.

AND, WE PROVED our case so thoroughly that their money is back of us today. That in itself is significant. It means that we're bound to win. For their record shows that they have not picked one loser in the past five years. They've investigated for a year and now they're back of Special Pictures Corporation from the tap of the gong.

HERE'S THE IDEA—

NO LONGER WILL the particular exhibitor—the real showman—have to buy five or six short subjects in order to make up 2000 feet of speed and action. He will not have to buy a thousand foot scenic in order to get the four hundred feet he wants, nor will he have to buy a topical picture to secure a snappy little, educational, or what-not. We are giving him, in this two thousand feet all he desires. This two reeler with a feature production will give that finesse and smoothness that is now only obtainable in the better first run houses.

A Significant Announcement

WITH the current (March) issue Photoplay Magazine presents Mr. Burns Mantle to its readers as head of its department of criticism and review known as The Shadow Stage. His soundness of judgment, brilliancy of style, and clarity of expression have earned for him an enviable and distinctive place in the ranks of American dramatic critics, and his opinions and comments on matters theatrical have made him not only a metropolitan but a national figure.

To the screen, in addition to his vast lore of theatrical knowledge, he brings a broad vision of the possibilities of the photoplay; its mission as America's greatest recreation; its responsibilities and potentialities as the supreme moulder of public opinion; and withal a sympathetic understanding of the difficulties which beset producers in their effort toward perfection in a still adolescent art form.

Mr. Mantle's reviews and those of his associates in his department, editors of Photoplay Magazine, are written for the guidance of the intelligent devotees of the screen and constitute a real service to millions in conserving their motion picture time and money.

While making no effort to review pictures from a strictly exhibitor viewpoint, exhibitors who realize that after all it is the public that renders the ultimate verdict of success or failure, might follow his department with profit.

James R. Quirk
Editor

OF the March issue 554,000 copies of Photoplay were distributed throughout the country, in every city and hamlet, going right into the homes where it is regarded as the authoritative voice of the silent drama, moulding the opinions of millions, and acting as their guide and friendly counsellor in the selection of pictures.

DRURY LANE
Melodrama

Adaptation by Lucien Hubbard Directed by GEORGE TERWILLIGER

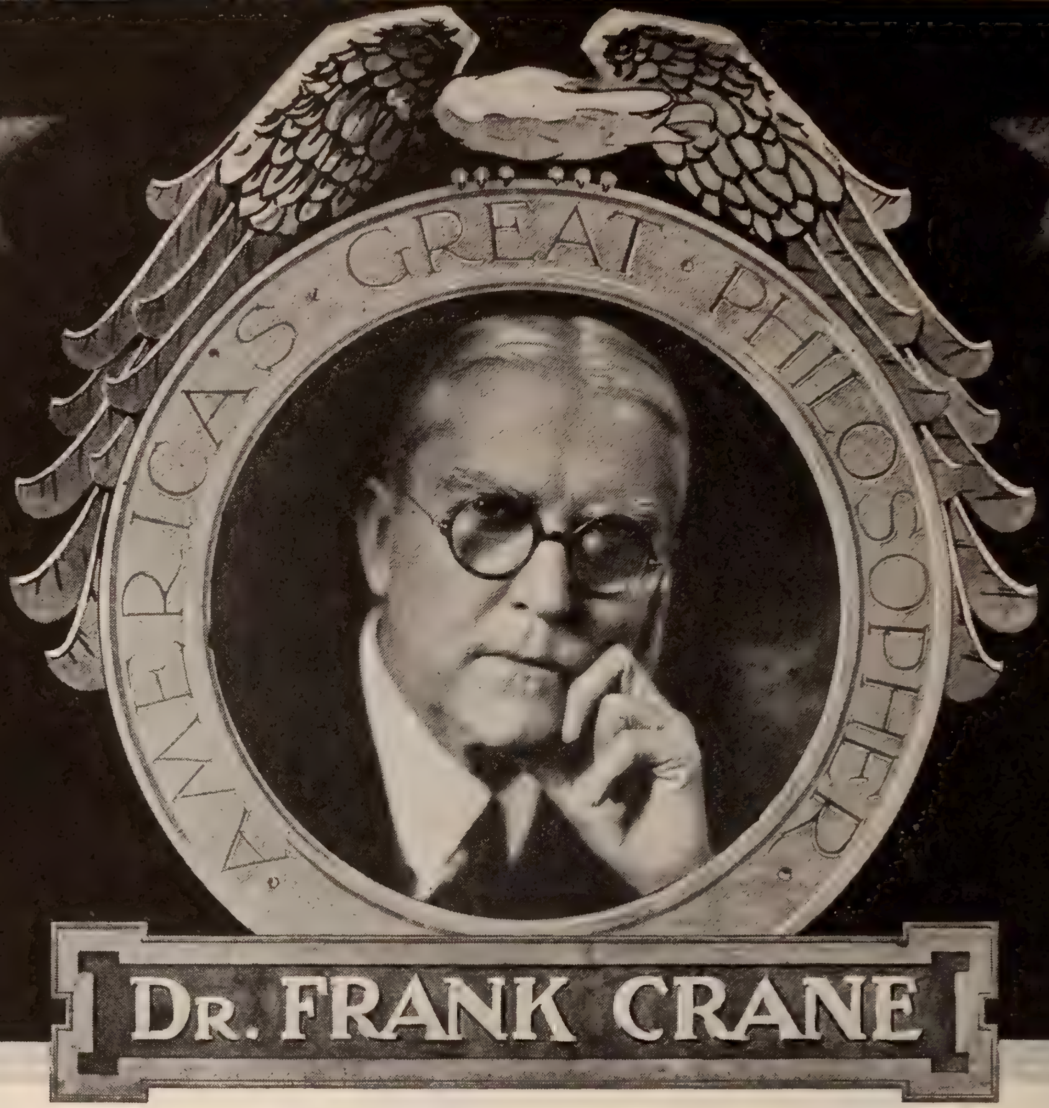
Beautiful manor-houses, archery fields, training quarters, luxurious salons and picturesque drives furnish the background for this story of stories.

So long as audiences are made up of human beings, this type of picture cannot but hold a depth of appeal. The interest is kept at fever heat until the end of the great climax—the Derby.

"The Sporting Duchess" sets a new standard in picture production.



The producers of

have the privilege to announce that they have contracted with one of the most distinguished literary men of the world to write a big feature picture of timely and universal interest. The man with whom the engagement has been made is perhaps the most read writer in America. His daily editorials and gentle philosophical treatises are followed religiously by over Twenty Million Readers in the foremost cities of the country. Those who know him virtually worship him. Hence it is a distinguished privilege to announce that the producers of "Empty Arms" have made arrangements with DR. FRANK CRANE in collaboration with CHARLES D. ISAACSON, Dr. Crane's colleague on the "New York Globe," for the famous philosopher and teacher to tell in story form his grand conception of

"DEMOCRACY"

A Super Feature will result. We have already read the script of the story, and we are able to announce at this time that it is one of the most extraordinary dramatic tales ever conceived for motion picture development!

"DEMOCRACY" will unquestionably be the biggest Feature Picture made since the "Birth of a Nation" and "Cabiria."

No expense will be spared in the filming of the story. The foremost actors and actresses are engaged, and the picture will be made with the co-operation of Dr. Frank Crane, by FRANK REICHER.

Options on "DEMOCRACY" for territorial rights may be secured at once. Preference will be shown, naturally, to buyers of "EMPTY ARMS."

Death and Failure are Unpleasant Words—But There is This Difference Between Them—the First is Inevitable—the Second is Not!

IT is therefore a worthwhile service to point out to anyone how failure may be avoided and success attained. Our constant effort has been to show the exhibitor how he can attain the maximum of success through the display of posters that will fill his auditorium with patrons—and his box-office with the price of their admissions.

The one type of poster that will do that is the RITCHEY poster. It is designed and executed with just that purpose in view, for the RITCHEY organization is composed of practically every great motion picture poster genius in America—no matter what his specialty—artist—printer—or advertising psychologist.

The result is an organization competent to turn out the greatest motion picture posters possible to produce—an organization that cannot possibly produce any other kind of poster!

To the exhibitor it is the one absolute essential to business success!

The Film Story of the Future

¶ Of all the phases of production in Los Angeles today, the matter of the story for the picture is of deepest significance.

Said a man prominent and experienced in picture entertainment: "We won't make many mistakes in production this year. Our pictures will vary in strength according to their themes."

And another put the same thought this way: "It is the story, today, that determines the box-office receipts."

While a third producer, when I called to his attention the many big, new theatres and the heavy demand they will make upon pictures, said: "Where will we get the story material?"

The story situation is developing rapidly.

Much progress has been made during the past two years in the story created expressly for the screen.

On the other hand, the supply of books and plays has been combed, and spirited bidding has raised prices to a point where such a picture starts with a heavy cost handicap.

Already there are two well-defined classes of producers here: those who create their stories for the screen and those who buy and adapt the stage and book or magazine story success.

Thomas H. Ince has practically confined his production to screen stories. Cecil DeMille has scored most of his notable successes with screen-created stories. Lois Weber has done excellent work. Allen Holubar's two recent pictures, both outstanding successes, were made from original scripts. Fairbanks and Hart create expressly for the screen, and, moreover, believe ardently in this type of vehicle. Chaplin, of course, is a distinctive figure in this respect; so is Sennett. The list is a long one. We only mention these names as they quickly occur to us.

On the other hand, practically all the big producing companies go in heavily for the adapted book and play. Neilan, Dwan, Tucker have confined their work to this kind of vehicle; so have Pickford, Stewart, Young and other prominent stars. Ray announces a list of book and stage successes.

Goldwyn is bridging the gap and developing a new and most important phase of the situation in having a group of best-seller authors create directly for the picture.

Out of the whole situation it is quite evident that the screen-made story, the story originated solely and directly for the technique of the picture, will develop until eventually it predominates.

The picture was never meant to borrow from other modes of expression. It has had to borrow, and will continue to borrow.

Just the same, the picture must have—and can have—its own story.

We know that, because the best-seller incapable of adaptation makes a poor picture. And we know that the screen-made story, minus the well-known author or author's work, minus a star or any other such advertising advantage, may make a good picture and a big success.

We have got to, and we will, take the picture and its possibilities more seriously.

It should present its own themes—and it will.

But it demands the very best themes.

On the one hand, no author or playwright today is great enough to create successfully for the picture unless he first—and thoroughly—knows the technique of the picture. And, furthermore, this same creator of the theme will have to, also, make his own adaptation; in other words, write his own continuity.

On the other hand, the producer of pictures will have to realize that the theme is supreme, that no mere "movie" theme will do, that he, with his picture, will have to compete successfully with the best themes created and adapted to the stage and the printed word.

Our new theatres are going to demand this sort of photoplay.

Preparing for the Utica Conventio

While Primarily a Function for Exhibitors of the State of New York, Other Phases of the Industry Are to Be Represented Also

PLANS for the assembling of the New York State Exhibitors' Convention at Utica next month are going forward rapidly, according to the reports received. Important legislation at present under consideration; regulations already in force that may merit modification; and measures, especially of a censorship nature, whose agitation in the near future is anticipated by prominent exhibitors—all will be submitted for the judgment and action of the assembled forces in convention. Pleasure, while coming after business, is not to be wholly neglected, according to the recent advices received. The special feature of the entertainment program being arranged for the event, is the monster ball which will be held on Wednesday evening, March 10th. Many well-known stars and directors are expected to participate in the Convention's activities.

Topics to Be Considered

When the exhibitors assemble for their State Convention at the Hotel Utica on March 9th and 10th, they will be invited to give their views on some of the most important motion-picture bills ever proposed in the legislature.

The one subject which will enlist the attention of every exhibitor and on which definite action will be taken before the Convention adjourns, is the "Children's Bill" (as it is called). This bill repeals that section of the Penal Code which makes it a misdemeanor to admit minors, actually or apparently under the age of 16, into a motion-picture theatre. The phraseology of the law "actually or apparently" under 16 years of age, has been a source of harrassing experiences to motion picture theatre owners throughout the State and especially in the City of New York, where it is enforced with drastic severity. The committee which has charge of the subject expects to be able to make a satisfactory report to the Convention. This hope is based on an effort of the committee to use ideas expressed by the late Justice Gaynor in a decision in which that jurist defines the word "guardian" in a more liberal sense than the strictly legal one, when applied to the man or woman who accompanies a minor into a theatre. It is said that the Gerry Society is not averse to a substantial modification of the present law.

In addition to the "Children's Bill" action will be taken on hostile legislation now pending or about to be introduced. One of these bills, said to be advocated by a very conspicuous reformer, provides for intermissions of one hour each between every performance in the motion picture theatre. These questions will provide ample material for serious consideration and action of the Convention, but they do not by any means constitute the entire program. Plans to defeat any censorship legislation will also be discussed.

It will interest every exhibitor to know that the big film men and exchange officials will be at Utica, assurances to that effect having been received both by President Cohen and Treasurer Linton. The idea is to have exhibitors meet these men personally and get acquainted, with a view to the establishment of more friendly relations. A good many annoying wrinkles will be ironed out in this way on the 9th and 10th of March in Utica.

The exchangemen propose to establish a large headquarters in the Hotel Utica, each producer to be represented separately by booths and boxes of their own. The F. I. L. M. Club is going to be represented in a body. They are taking a very gratifying interest in this feature of the convention and are confident that mutual good will result.

As to the lighter side of the Convention, there is talk that the Utica newspapers will arrange a popular contest and that the young man and young woman heading the poll will be assured of enacting a scene from a popular play under the direction of a well known director, the picture thus made to be flashed on the screen the night of the movie ball after some interesting initial ceremonies. Various news weeklies have displayed considerable interest in the Convention and arrangements are being made to have motion pictures taken of all important events of the Convention and of the exhibitors who will attend.

Mr. Linton, the state treasurer, who is on the ground, his home being in the Convention City, reports an extraordinary interest in the coming Convention and says that his circularization campaign promises to produce the most gratifying results.

MARCUS LOEW BUYS BIG TRACT FOR METRO

JOE ENGLE and Marcus Loew have purchased for Metro a fifty-six acre tract in the foothills of North Hollywood for exterior location work. Metro has also purchased five acres adjoining its studio property, thus enlarging its plant to three complete blocks. The exterior tract just purchased can be reached within ten minutes from the studio.

THE CAPITOL HAS NOT BEEN SOLD, NOR IS IT ON THE MARKET

A REPORT, given publication recently, that one of the large film manufacturing corporations had secured control, through purchase, of the Capitol theatre, following in the wake of persistent rumors that have kept Broadway on tip-toe for the last month, has brought from the Capitol theatre management an absolute and categorical denial. The Capitol theatre has not been sold; nor is the Capitol theatre on the market.

Messmore Kendall, the president of the Moredall Reality Corporation, owners and operators of the Capitol theatre, is responsible for the unequivocal statement.

"The report that the Capitol theatre has been sold is absolutely untrue," said Mr. Kendall. "Not one particular interest, but many, have sought to buy the property, both before and during the sixteen weeks that the Capitol theatre has been in operation, but no offer has been considered. This, for the simple reason that the Capitol theatre was not built for speculative purposes, but with a definite purpose in view. It has not been for sale at any time. It is not for sale now."

First Nat'l Engages Ruffne

Well-known Exploitation Manager of Northwest Joins Publicity Forces

RALPH "RUFF STUFF" RUFFNER, known to exhibitors throughout the country for his advertising and exploitation campaigns as manager of several of representative theatres in the Pacific Northwest, has accepted a position in the publicity and advertising department of First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

Mr. Ruffner took up his new work this week. As a theatre manager with ideas which lifted his efforts above the ordinary and made his copy and "stunts" the subjects of duplication by many exhibitors, Mr. Ruffner has written many trade journal articles on various phases of theatre operation and exploitation. A prepared autobiography written in characteristic style, sets forth his own recollection of events which led him to New York:

"Entered the motion picture exhibiting field from the railroad service via the piano stool route in the summer of 1909. Substituted for a player who was ill, and never returned to railroad work. Tail clicks wouldn't harmonize. Assumed the management of a two hundred and forty seat house in Vancouver, Washington, in 1911; fought a trust for the town supremacy, winning out hands down only to have momentary ambitions to become a magnate wrecked—last lingering phase of R. R. days—on the rocks of finance, via uncharted shoals of superior competition by a big new theatre which swept all possible revenue away via the free ticket route.

"Managed the American Theatre, Butte, Mont., Liberty Theatre, Spokane, Wash., wrote advertising and publicity for Jensen and Van Herberg's Liberty and Columbia Theatres in Portland, and managed the Columbia. Was transferred to Butte, Mont., as manager of the Rialto, succeeding Mr. C. S. Jensen, who moved to Portland. Resigned that position because the climate did not agree with Mrs. Ruffner, and went to San Francisco and from there to New York. Habits—composer, ad writer, publicity. Features, trained in every d partment of theatre work from cu to back wall. Record, fifty-fifty b tween Columbia and Victor. Speci decorations, use of midnight matine for motion pictures as early as 19 and 1915. Scientific accomplishmen the inauguration of audience sing without 'plants.'"

Thomas Ince to Lectur to College Students

Thos. H. Ince, who arrives in Ne York February 21, has been invited b the faculty of Columbia University t address the Photoplay Class next Mor day evening.

It is expected that its advantages t students of photoplay technique will b of the greatest value, as they will hea every angle of the scenario questio discussed by a veteran producer. Th subject of Mr. Ince's talk will be th Great Opportunity Confronting Scree Authors.

Mr. Ince purposes to tell precisel what the writer must furnish to pleas the public, and wherein the origina story, if it answers the requirement of the producer, answers more satis factorily the question of what the pub lic wants than the picturization of novel or stage play. He will stress th difficulty of obtaining original storie and will submit facts—and figures—t encourage the students to strive fo the larger rewards eventually due th screen writer.

Lecturer Uses Special Screen in Capitol

In the lecture of Lowell Thomas or Monday at Washington, D. C., a Surbrite Crystal Cinematograph screer was especially installed at Shubert's Garrick theatre for the occasion. Mr. Thomas spoke on "With Allenby in Palestine." His lectures were illustrated with many scenes, and the new screen was used in order that they might be shown to best advantage.

Exhibitors Form New Organization

New Association, Which Embraces Exhibitors of the New York Exchange District, Protest the Percentage Booking Plan on "Pollyanna"

A STRONG exhibitors' organization has been formed in New York under the title of Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce. Its membership at present is composed of exhibitors booking from the New York Exchange district. The official headquarters of the new organization at present is at the Astor Hotel, where meetings are held every Tuesday, but a club house is expected to displace this as soon as practicable.

The organization has at present only temporary officers, the offices being filled temporarily so as to give both new and old members an opportunity to vote on their candidates. It is said that each member upon entering the combine was required to pay $100.00 for each theatre he owned and to be sponsored by a member. Then his candidacy was voted on.

Present List of Officers

The temporary officers are: William Brandt, Chairman; Samuel Kramer, Secretary; Samuel Bock, Treasurer; Adolph Stockhammer, Sgt. at Arms.

The board of directors were elected for a term of one year. They are A. H. Swartz, David Picker, Louis Blumenthal, Samuel Bock, Rudolph Sanders, John Manheimer, H. Anderson, and William Brandt.

The most important action taken by the new organization so far is to condemn percentage booking. It is said all members stood for action against percentage system of distribution.

"'Pollyanna,'" said one of the officers, speaking for the organization, "came in for a special amount of criticism because of the booking methods it was released under. It was looked upon by many of our members as a production which was being used as an entering wedge for the furtherance of percentage distribution. All our members who had not as yet booked the feature declared they would not do so, and those who had already booked it sought to cancel, but were refused. Most of the members believe that the next United Artists picture, which is released on that basis, will find almost every exhibitor in the country refusing to book it."

The organization sent the following wire to Mary Pickford:

"Miss Mary Pickford,
"Hollywood, Cal.

"Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, representing 300 booking days in Greater New York, in executive session, respectfully bring to your notice the following facts: By reason of the present percentage distribution of 'Pollyanna', the exhibitor is deprived of presenting same to public without entering into decidedly unreasonable and inequitable contract. We regret after all these years of constantly featuring you that your managers have seen fit to adopt this unreasonable method. We are desirous of knowing your personal attitude in this matter and would appreciate a reply before our meeting next Tuesday.

(Signed) Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce."

Miss Pickford's attorney, Dennis F.

" WIRE BRIEFS " FROM THE COAST

ROTHACKER has recently purchased two and one-half acres in Los Angeles, for a laboratory, and will begin construction on the new building on March 1. The plant will have a capacity of 900,000 feet negative and one million feet positive weekly and will cost $150,000. Mr. Rothacker will leave for the east on Wednesday to complete negotiations for a new laboratory in Long Island City which he will build there at once. Technical expert A. P. Miller, of the Rothacker organization, will supervise the plans.

Grauman's theatre of Los Angeles has increased its prices of admission from fifteen, twenty-five and thirty cents to thirty-six and forty-five cents. This makes the admission for evenings forty and fifty cents, including war-tax. Matinee prices under the new scale will be twenty and forty cents, including war-tax. Other theatres are considering an increase to take effect on Monday. The attendance at Grauman's has not been affected by the rise in prices.

Meeting Discusses Posters

Both Sides of Pertinent Problem Are Presented; Committee to Act on Issue

A MEETING of motion-picture exhibitors in Greater New York was ld on Friday, February 13th, in ooms A, B, C, of the Hotel Astor. little more than 200 motion picture eatre owners representing every orough of the Greater City were esent. The discussion centered rgely around the refusal of certain xchanges to sell unmounted paper to poster companies from which exbitors are now renting mounted sters.

Charles L. O'Reilly stated that he uld not understand the big minds presented in the National Association othering themselves with such petty tails as 6 sheets and 1 sheets, etc. he mounted poster was an absolute cessity for the small exhibitor who idn't have the time to mount the paper nself and therefore had come to depend on the men who made a business of mounting posters. The exchanges having declined to furnish posters to the men, who had heretofore mounted and sold them, the exhibitor was in a serious predicament. It meant really the discouragement of proper and necessary advertising.

Mr. Raynor of the F. I. L. M. Club replied that under present conditions the poster departments are losing money because the men who bought paper for mounting purposes naturally decreased the quantity of sales from the exchange to the exhibitor.

When the discussion had ended a committee was appointed to meet later at the office of the Pathe Exchange to consider this question. Full power was conferred on the committee to act for the exhibitors.

Exposition Will Use Screen

Films Will Take Message of American Manufacturers to South American Cities

MOTION pictures will be an important part of the Industrial Exosition of United States Manufacturrs in Buenos Aires next November. merican manufacturers will not stop exhibiting their products at the exition. They will supplement their play of wares upon South America's unter with films showing where and ust how those products were made.

The Rothacker Film Manufacturing mpany has just been appointed offi inematographers of the exposion Some firms will be able to use ms which the Rothacker Company as made in the past; other manufacurers will have new pictures produced.

Watterson R. Rothacker, president f the film company, expects to send ameramen to shoot the exposition at Buenos Aires and also a similar exosition which will be held in Rio de Janeiro in the spring of 1921. These ictures will be for two purposes: to how the people here at home what Uncle Sam's commercial missionaries re accomplishing in South America, and for use in South American cities other than Rio Janeiro and Buenos Aires.

"American manufacturers are awakening to the possibilities of using motion pictures to open the way for the United States Merchant Marine," said Mr. Rothacker. "British manufacturers this spring are starting a collection of industrial pictures on a tour of the world. These pictures will show buyers in other lands what England's industries have to offer.

"The decisive battle for the South American trade probably will be fought within the next two years—maybe sooner. The year 1922 will unquestionably see some nation the acknowledged victor in that sector of the 'war after the war.' Leading manufacturers of this country are determined that American shall be the victor. The right kind of industrial films can accomplish a great deal toward turning the decision in Uncle Sam's favor. The Rothacker Company is at the disposal of American manufacturers."

COVERING THE FIELD

FOLLOWING is a letter received from Geo. W. Rankin of College City, Cal.:

" You certainly deserve all the money you are asking for the NEWS and more too, and any time my subscription is due please notify me and I shall send you a check by return mail for two or three years, if it is necessary, as I would not be without the NEWS for twice the amount you are asking for it.

" As far as me making any suggestions, or trying to, would be a very foolish piece of business, as you certainly have a staff of men in your employ that would be hard to duplicate, as everything in the NEWS is perfect and right to the minute, and there is not a page in the book but what is a study. I have a stack of your books almost six feet high and would not let one go out under any consideration."

Wm. A. Johnston Guest of Honor at Dinner

The annual jinx dinner of members of the Los Angeles Film Exchange Board of Trade was given Thursday evening, February 5th, at one of the leading down town cafes where private dining room and dancing afforded the members and their friends relaxation. The dinner was attended by about 100, and William A. Johnston of Motion Picture News was the guest of honor. President Morris Wolfe presided as toast master and Henry Massey of Realart was master of ceremonies.

Industrial Lecture Aided by Film

Before more than 300 members and guests of the Connecticut Valley Club of Printing House Craftsmen at Cooley's Hotel, Springfield, Mass., Feb. 14, F. C. Clarke, of the American Writing Paper Company, lectured on "Research in Paper Making," illustrating it with a film taken at the factory of the corporation and showing all phases of the manufacture of paper

Northcliffe Representative's Missio

A CONSIDERABLE number of those who go to make up filmdom in New York including several of the big men of the industry, were guests of Arthur Levey, film exporter and importer, at a luncheon held at the Hotel Astor Tuesday, February 17, in honor of M. G. Faulkner, personal representative of the British editor, Lord Northcliffe. Mr. Faulkner is here on a mission whose aim is the effecting a closer relationship between the two great English speaking nations.

Melville E. Stone, head of the Associated Press, presided as toastmaster, and introduced the several speakers, who claimed the attention of the guests after the repast.

Mr. Faulkner was the first speaker. He read a letter from Lord Northcliffe which explained fully the reason for sending a representative to America and expressed the belief that from such a mission was to come a great deal of good that would have a lasting effect on both the film industry and the public of the two nations. After reading this letter Mr. Faulkner spoke at some length, explaining more fully his mission and giving out some rather interesting facts concerning the motion picture industry in England. His statement that 90 per cent. of the films shown in Great Britain were American-made, for instance, was rather a surprise to even those intimately connected with the business. Mr. Faulkner lauded a number of American made productions, among which was Mr. Griffith's "Birth of a Nation," and the current Selznick release, "The Land of Opportunity."

He also gave out interesting information relative to what the English press is doing in the way of publishing film news. According to Mr. Falkner, London papers devote on an average of thirty thousand words weekly to the pictures current and coming at London theatres. This is in a way a revelation to America, where not as yet do the newspapers view the motion picture as entitled to so much except in the way of publicity.

Mr. Faulkner was followed by William A. Brady who assured the distinguished visitor the good will of America, and expressed the belief that his mission would be a satisfactory one from every angle. The speaker was Louis T. Tracy, an lishman himself and author of well known novels as "The Win the Morning" and others.

Walter W. Irwin followed Tracy. Mr. Irwin's words a other things contained a prophec that he predicted that one of the events in the opportunity of the to solidify a universal peace woul the production of a picture w would be backed by and produced the League of Nations.

Several men who were schedule be present were unable to attend telegraphed regrets. Among t were D. W. Griffith, Frank Vand and Herbert Kaufman.

Exhibitors Organize

"Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce,

"Astor Hotel, New York, N. Y.

"Miss Pickford believes that you will find Mr. Abrams progressively fair in his negotiations with you regarding contracts for 'Pollyanna.' Last year she decided to market her pictures individually because of constant complaints on part of exhibitors that they were obliged to make contracts for less desirable pictures in order to get her pictures. It seems to me that because you can't conclude contracts for 'Pollyanna' as you wish that you have combined to defeat the very principles of individual dealing that formerly exhibitors were seeking, and that your efforts in combining are unfair and inequitable.

"Theatrical business has been built up, grown and prospered on percentage basis, and to her way of thinking it is the only fair basis providing the amount of percentage is equitable for the exhibitor to get his fair share of receipts and the producer to get his fair share of receipts, which the attraction and not the exhibitor produces. Please understand that Miss Pickford thinks the exhibitor is very essential, but she doesn't agree with your telegram that you have consistently featured her except that because you knew that by so doing your receipts would be increased.

"She is against any combination or combined effort on the part of any faction in the motion picture business because she believes such combined efforts will only trend to hurt business, and the public will go to see attractions of merit no matter where that attraction is exhibited. Miss Pickford has the fullest confidence in Mr. Abrams and leaves this matter with him. Kindly convey Miss Pickford's good wishes to the members of your organization.

"Dennis F. O'Brien,
"Attorney for Miss Pickford."

Forms New Exchange System

Educational Films Says Organizing of New Offices is Progressing Rapidly

VICE-PRESIDENT E. W. Hammons of the Educational Films Corporation of America, announces that the plans for the organization of the new system of "Educational" exchanges are going forward rapidly and that the end of the week is to see a good start made towards the establishment of the chain of twenty offices that will be in operation by mid-summer.

Joseph Lee, whom Mr. Hammons has selected to open the new offices, left Saturday for New Orleans, and is to make a three-weeks' tour of the exchange cities of the south and west before returning to New York. Mr. Lee is the department head directly responsible for the operation of the new offices and he is picking his men carefully, with the idea of securing the best type of exchange manager and salesman. Future "Educational" subjects, now in preparation, are to have something new in the line of exploitation,' and an organization is being built up to handle this novel development.

Henry Ginsberg, also of the "Educational" staff, and assistant to Mr. Hammons, is in Kansas City and St. Louis this week, visiting the offices in those cities, and making arrangements that will lead to the completion of the new general plan. Both Mr. Lee and Mr. Ginsberg will be engaged in the inauguration of new offices, and re-organization in cities where "Educational" has been represented, for several months to come.

Mr. Hammons leaves next Monday for Chicago and the West, also on business connected with the distributing policy, and expects to be out of town for a week or more.

Abundant Exploitation Possibilities Are Claimed for "Who's Your Servant?"

THAT the servant problem is one of the most dangerous confronting the American public at the present time is the opinion of one of the best known police officials in the United States today, according to Robertson-Cole.

This man who knows the underworld like a book, after viewing "Who's Your Servant?" the Robertson-Cole special written by Julian Johnson, is said to have declared the production to be true to life and to expose the evil condition that exists in the hiring of servants.

That there is no end to the hundreds of advertising possibilities of this big special is the assertion of the Robertson-Cole Company. Booklets telling in detail how to handle the servant problem have been sent broadcast, and in every city in the United States, the servant problem can be linked with the coming of the Robertson-Cole special.

In speaking of proposed exploitation "stunts," Robertson-Cole states: "Millions of paper bags to be used in the grocery stores throughout the country will be distributed. On these bags "Who's Your Servant?" will be printed in red ink, and exhibitors who have learned of the plan declare it to be a sure box office winner.

Producers' Association Elects Officers

Abraham Lehr, President; W. S. Smith, 1st Vice President; T. H. Ince, 2nd Vice President; C. H. Christie, 3rd Vice President; Frank A. Garbutt, Treasurer; W. J. Reynolds, Secretary.

Frank A. Garbutt has been treasurer of the organization since it came into being, almost three years ago.

To Print "Who's W in Motion Pictures'

If plans recently outlined by I edict M. Greene before the Associ Motion Picture Advertisers are summated the Fifth Industry is to dignified by the publication of an nual "Who's Who In Motion tures." In outlining his plan Greene, who is managing editor of International Press, Ltd., said it his belief that the motion picture dustry is of all industries the one m dependent on its personalities, and that belief it is intended to base proposed volume on accurate, fi hand information, from promin characters and personalities in the tion picture field.

Capitol to Show Fo Artcraft Pictures

Managing Director Bowes, of Capitol Theatre, New York, has book Paramount Artcraft pictures solid four successive weeks, starti March 7.

Leading off the Paramount Artcr month is Dorothy Dalton in h Thomas H. Ince production, "Bla Is White," which was directed Charles Giblyn, and is based on a sto by George Barr McCutcheon. T week of March 14 Ethel Clayton "Young Mrs. Winthrop" will be t attraction. This is an adaptation the play by Bronson Howard, T Maurice Tourneur production, "M Lady's Garter," based upon the famo novel by Jacques Futrelle, and the Co mopolitan Production, "April Foll with Marion Davies, will be present during the two succeeding weeks.

To Plan Distribution c Associated Producers

Thomas H. Ince, Mack Sennett, Parker Reid, Jr., his personal repr sentative, and Alan Dwan planned t leave for New York last week on short business trip which is suppose to be relative to the distribution pla of the Associated Producers, but owin to Mr. Ince becoming ill, the trip ha been postponed.

Survey of Film Industry in England

ARRANGEMENTS ARE GOING FORWARD FOR M. P. D. A. BALL, MARCH 20TH

A GRAND BALL, under the auspices of the Motion Picture Directors' Association, will be held at the Hotel Biltmore, on March 20th.

In 1918 the first ball given by the New York Lodge of M. P. D. A. was the most brilliant affair of the season. It would have been established as an annual function, but in 1919, on account of the many members in and directly connected with Government service, it was suspended for that year.

Double enthusiasm, therefore, is now being evidenced in connection with the coming event, and expense is said to be no object. Two orchestras, supplied by Orlando, profuse floral decorations, and an elaborate supper have been arranged for, and the entertainment committee is said to be planning a number of unique surprises to occur alternately between groups of dances.

Each day marks the increasing demand for invitations and the committee handling the lists of applications are the busiest men about the Lodge just at this time.

The Motion Picture Directors' Association Ball for 1920 is anticipated with great pleasure and predicted to bring together for the first time in two years the famous stars, producers and directors identified with the motion picture industry in a social engagement which will reflect the extreme importance of this organization. Each member has pledged himself to do his utmost to make the affair the most enjoyable ever given, both for their friends and associates, as well as themselves.

Depreciation in Exchange May Lead to Barter Methods; No New Theatres Are Being Built, and Film Supply Exceeds the Demand

COL. H. A. BROWNE, Chairman of the Walturdaw Company, Ltd., London, the English supply house for many years distributors of Power's Projectors in the United Kingdom, is in New York and has furnished information about trade and general conditions in his country. Col. Browne has been Chairman of the Walturdaw Company, Ltd., since 1910, and as this position corresponds with the presidency of an American corporation, his comments are particularly interesting. Col. Browne stated that his firm has been in business for over twenty-two years and was the pioneer in certain important departments of the film industry.

Col. Browne spoke of the natural bond of brotherhood that existed between the two great English-speaking nations and expressed the hope that strong commercial relations might be established which would be of lasting benefit to both nations, without doing injustice to any of the other great countries.

Exchange Problem Is Grave

Just at the present time the depreciation in exchange is seriously interfering with export trade, and if not soon controlled may temporarily halt purchases of all American goods except those which were vitally necessary. Col. Browne referred to the possibility of commercial relations between the United States and European countries becoming a matter of actual barter. Put in an American way, this would be a matter of swapping goods for goods, but such a condition could not last long if the various countries interested use energetic measures to correct the present unfortunate conditions.

Regarding the sale of American films in England, Col. Browne says that the market is glutted at the present time, and then he explained the reasons for this condition. No new cinemas have been built for over five years and none can be built for two years more, as they are classified as "luxury buildings." The shortage of homes is worse in England than in the United States, and in a practical effort to overcome this serious condition all construction not regarded as vitally important is forbidden by law until the necessary number of dwellings have been erected. There are less than four thousand cinemas in England as against something like sixteen thousand in the United States. Every week there are between twenty-five and thirty films released in England comprising films made in England, Italy, France, Denmark and the United States. It is obvious that all these productions cannot prove profitable under the circumstances. Good films are successful and bring fair prices, but of course competition is very keen.

Continuing Col Browne said, "Although no new cinemas are being constructed, one of my objects in coming to the United States is to arrange for an increased supply of projectors, and the order actually placed is, I believe, one of the largest ever given to a manufacturer of projectors. Power's machines have a splendid reputation in

Trailers Ready for Drive

Hon. Franklin K. Lane Prepares Trailers for Americanization Movement

Hon. Franklin K. Lane, Secretary the Interior and Chairman of the nericanization Committee of the Mo- n Picture Industry, has just com- eted the writing of the trailers that e to be used in connection with the mpaign against Bolshevism.

The trailers are all quotations from ncoln and Secretary Lane asks that e exhibitors of the country use them their screen immediately.

The trailers that are being made will furnished to the various exchange nters and will be attached to feature ctures. Harry M. Crandall, Chair- an of the Exhibitors' Branch of the neral Committee, says: "There is reason why a large majority of the hibitors cannot begin immediately e using of these Lincoln's quotations. ides can be made without much uble and should be shown immediately. In all of these slides it is suggested that we use a fac simile of Lincoln's handwriting. This can be found in any Abraham Lincoln book. He usually signed his name 'A. Lincoln.' It is very essential that each individual exhibitor take upon himself the responsibility of using these quotations either as trailers or as slides.

"They have been selected after much study by Secretary Lane, and we owe it to our Government to get behind this great movement and to make it a success. We have had a good start and the eyes of the whole country are watching us. We cannot fall down at this time if every exhibitor will do his share."

Secretary Lane declared that he was much pleased at the manner in which the campaign opened on Lincoln's Birthday.

Chicago Film Exchanges Seek New Quarters

After months of rumors as to where the Chicago film exchanges were to be located after May 1, when the Chicago fire ordnances require their removal from the "Loop" district, the first definite step has been taken, the First National, Metro, Robertson-Cole, Select, Republic, and National exchanges have practically completed arrangements for space in the building at Eighth street and Wabash avenue. This leaves room for one more exchange in the building and the chances are that either Celebrated, Vitagraph, Pathe, or Universal, will sign up. Exchanges in the Malleris and Consumers buildings have received notice to vacate by May 1, but Film Exchange Building tenants may be allowed to remain. The film interests have taken option on the building between Ninth and Tenth streets on Wabash avenue and several exchanges are expected to obtain quarters there.

English Conditions

England, and I believe I am safe in stating that fifty per cent. of the cinemas in the United Kingdom have installed Power's machines.

"The popularity of films has increased in England four or five hundred per cent. during the past few years, and the houses operating will have to replace much of their equipment. As in America, motion pictures are no longer looked upon as a cheap diversion for the masses and are patronized by members of the royal family and leaders in every branch of the social and industrial world in England.

During the war, Power's machines were used by the British Army and Navy, the Air Force, the Y. M. C. A., and Red Cross. On every front, India, Palestine, Mesopotania, Salonica, Egypt and France, Power's machines were with the troops and gave splendid results under trying conditions We are the oldest and largest cinema supply house in England, and we look upon our connection with the Nicholas Power Company with great satisfaction. It is just this kind of confidence and loyal business relations that can be established in England at the present time, and American and British firms who are able to overcome the existing abnormal conditions will have won a mutual good will that money cannot purchase when the financial ship again rides on an even keel.

In regard to English films, they are as yet perhaps technically inferior to American films, but possess certain natural qualities of their own, and some day I hope to see them more popular in the United States. The film industry in England was shut down during the period of the war, and in those four years American films made such strides that they undoubtedly have captured the film market. Apart from their technical merit, American films are extremely popular in England because they so frequently depict scenes which have a life and vigor that make a strong appeal to English people, especially of the younger generation. In view of the fact, however, that English romances have been so popular in the United States, it seems to me that these plays enacted in their natural surroundings possess an atmosphere which cannot be duplicated by mere technique or stage craft

Creswell to Represent Lasky in Chicago

Fred F. Creswell has been appointed Special Representative of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation for the 5th district with headquarters in Chicago. This district comprises the states of Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota, also part of Iowa with exchange at Chicago, Minneapolis and Indianapolis. The Indianapolis exchange is new and will be opened immediately.

At the death of John W. Allen, special representative in charge of the fifth district, the natural choice of the company was Mr. Creswell. The new representative started with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation a little over four years ago as a salesman in Atlanta, Georgia. He is popular among the exhibitors and his selection meets with the general approval.

Maeterlinck Greeted Royally

Trans-Continental Trip of Belgian Poet Marked by Ovations Everywhere

WELCOMED by reception committees comprising the city officials and other leading citizens of the cities visited, the guest of honor at banquets and luncheons arranged wherever the itinerary of the trip permits, Maurice Maeterlinck is being given a royal ovation on his journey from New York to the Goldwyn Studios at Culver City where he is going to study the technique of photoplay construction preparatory to writing one original story a year for production by Goldwyn.

The Maeterlinck party which includes Mme. Maeterlinck, Henry Russell and Mrs. Russell and others closely associated with the Belgian poet and philosopher, is travelling in the private car, "The Mayflower".

The last report was dated Kansas City where the Maeterlinck program covered the entire day, starting with the greetings of the reception committee headed by the mayor.

M. Maeterlinck was entertained at luncheon at the Woman's City Club at 12.30 o'clock and at 1.30 went to the Men's City Club where he was received by Governor Gardner, Irvin Cobb, Dr. Burris Jenkins and other celebrities.

In Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit and stress is laid upon the exterior scenes, other cities visited, the welcome accorded the famous Belgian was no less cordial. The first stop of "The Mayflower" after leaving New York was Rochester, N. Y., where the Mayor of Rochester and a delegation of Camp Fire Girls and Boy Scouts were at the station. All of the Rochester newspapers devoted considerable front page space to the distinguished visitors.

Cosmopolitan Aids Exhibitor

In Report Just Issued Cosmopolitan Points Out Ad Services It Renders

COSMOPOLITAN Productions, which is making features for release as Paramount-Artcraft Pictures, is one producing unit which its sponsors maintain, believes that its interest does not cease with the selling of its pictures to the exhibitor, but rather that it just about begins there.

Commenting on this phase of its activities, Cosmopolitan Productions says: "A concrete example of Cosmopolitan's co-operation with its exhibitors is the daily advertisement it runs in ten newspapers in eight key cities tying up the advertising of the picture with the exhibitor showing it. Every exhibitor in these eight key cities has his name and address and the date of showing run in this advertisement several days before the showing. In this way he comes in for a great deal of valuable advertising without the cost of a penny to him.

"Cosmopolitan's idea of co-operation has received the commendation of exhibitors everywhere. In addition to the exhibitors' own extensive advertising, it gives him additional space of great benefit to him. It has also proven of considerable assistance to the fans who upon turning to the amusement pages of these key newspapers found without any trouble the nearest theatre which showed 'The Dark Star,' 'The Miracle of Love,' or 'The Cinema Murder.' Cosmopolitan's first three productions."

"Baby Doll" Lead Is Passing

Universal Director Says Public Now Demand Brains as Well as Good Looks

ACCORDING to Harry Franklin, the Universal director, who is soon to produce a new photodrama for Edith Roberts, the tastes of the motion picture audiences are undergoing a decided change, and in no direction is this more apparent than in the gradual passing of the "baby doll" type of screen leading woman.

"The public has come to demand more than mere good looks from an actress on the screen," says Mr. Franklin. "They now demand a real woman instead of a baby doll. Age has nothing to do with the distinction between the two. A girl of seventeen, with the right sort of brains and mentality, may answer the description of a real woman, while some women of thirty, with nothing to recommend them but blonde curls and pretty features, remain baby dolls so long as the camera fails to reveal their years.

"The change I have noticed, I believe, is due to the fact that the backbone of the motion picture audience is comprised of married women and men old enough to know that the baby doll can have no idea of life as she depicts it on the screen, under the actual guidance of a director.

"But gradually the baby dolls are being eliminated from the leading roles and the stellar ranks, and in their place are young women who possess good looks, but also the talent to act, and with brains to back up their titles to screen supremacy."

Teachers' Pay Increase Featured by Pathe

The Literary Digest, through its screen version, "Topics of the Day," released by Pathe, has hit upon a novel scheme for promoting public interest in its fight for better pay for school teachers.

A weekly prize of $50 will be offered each week to the school teacher sending in the best fifty word reason why school teachers' pay should be increased. The winning item will be given wide publicity in the columns of The Literary Digest, in over three hundred newspapers and will also be shown in connection with "Topics of the Day" in 2,500 theatres in the United States.

BUFFALO

The theatre building boom goes merrily in Buffalo. Plans are completed for the w Shea Metropolitan, work on which will gin May 1; the new Loew house will be der way on about the same date; the apitol is expected to open early in the ring in the South Park district. On pril 1, the Rivoli will open its doors to e residents in the vicinity of the Broadway arket. Now comes the news of two more cal houses and another big one at Niagara alls.

Construction will be started May 1 of a otion-picture palace on Broadway, between etroit and Townsend streets, by Jacob osing and Sons. The ground floor of the w house, according to the plans, will have seating capacity of 2,500. The house will st upwards of $250,000, according to an nouncement by Jacob Rosing. Henry F. pann, of this city, is the architect. A glass me, 50 feet in diameter, will be a feature the interior decorations.

There is a report current that Famous layers-Lasky will build a new house here. he Buffalo Express published a story Sun- ay, Feb. 1, that H. B. Kelly, of the F. P.- corporation, has been in Buffalo in con- ultation with the company's local attorney n the progress of the project.

Plans for the construction of a mammoth theatre and business block in Niagara Falls on the site of the Prospect Park Hotel, between the Cataract theatre building and Croy's drug store, have been accepted by A. C. Hayman and Joseph A. Schuchert, of the Cataract Theatre Company. The whole theatre and business block enterprise will cost more than $500,000. The plans call for the erection of a four-story business block in Falls street, and the construction of a theatre with a seating capacity of 2,600. The entrance to the theatre will be from Falls street.

The interior of the new house will be beautiful in design. Auto loges, the latest thing in seating, will take the place of the boxes. They will be located at the sides and rear of the house. The theatre will have the latest heating, ventilating and refrigerating system, and will be cooled by the ammonia cooling system. A mezzanine floor will occupy the space between the lower floor and the balcony.

The stage will be equipped with an electric controlled scenic dock, which will handle all scenery automatically. The Cataract policy will be vaudeville and exclusive high class pictures. The Cataract Theatre Company, it is announced, has signed up with the Associated Exhibitors.

NEW ORLEANS

Louis Collier, who for some time has been manager of the American Film Company in the New Orleans territory, has resigned to become head salesman for the Robertson-Cole Company in the same territory. The American Film Company releases through the Pathe exchange.

J. J. Shimkowitz, proprietor of the Trymore theatre in Mobile, has bought the Queen theatre on Tulane avenue, in New Orleans, and is remodeling it. It is reported he also acquired the lot adjoining the Queen building and later will put up a large suburban house.

The Sugar theatre in Monroe, which was recently closed by city and state authorities on account of its unsafe condition, has been purchased by a New Orleans amusement firm which, instead of making only such repairs as will meet the official demands, will spend $75,000 in enlarging and improving it.

Guy Empey is filming a number of exteriors for his special production, "Oil," in the newly developed oil fields around Shreveport, La.

Motion pictures seem to be a popular form of entertainment among the lumbermen of Beaumont, Texas. The old generation of lumbermen is disappearing and is succeeded by a class of workmen who demand more entertainment; it seems that the movies are in the greatest demand.

D. L. Hapgood, independent exhibitor of Pensacola, Fla., has sold his two theatres, Liberty and Pastime. The name of the buyer has not been divulged.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Rialto during the week of Feb. 2 put on an all comedy programme which included "The Walk-offs," "Three Black Eyes" and the Sunshine comedy, "Sheriff Nell's Comeback." The press agent dwelt in every advertisement on the fact that it was an all-comedy bill, and in so doing made no mistake, as the box office receipts showed at the end of the week.

The Keith interests in this city are planning to make extensive alterations on the Bijou theatre in Pawtucket. The nature in the change on the moving picture house has not yet been announced.

Managers of moving picture theatres here are chuckling at having not been obliged to raise pay of firemen in their theatres. A law passed last year jumping the men $1 a day has been found unconstitutional. Firemen receive $2 per day and what extra they pick up by overtime work. Most of them are retired firemen or policemen who are receiving half pay from the city.

The bill now being considered by the State Legislature permitting moving picture shows on Sunday provides that the license fee for such entertainments shall not be more than $100 for any single performance. Should the license fee be placed at $100, many moving picture exhibitors in the State say that about all the surplus profit will go into the treasury of the cities or towns, as it specifies the fee shall cover each individual show. The performances may start after 2 p. m., according to the bill, and continue the rest of the day. The bill is meeting with considerable opposition, and moving picture men are lining up their forces for the final fight at a hearing to occur soon.

"Broken Blossoms" played the Modern theatre the week of Feb. 2, and capacity audiences were the results. Manager Braunig used a special series of advertising for the picture, during the week of the showing and a few days previous to the opening.

"Give children what they want, not what someone, who has forgotten he was ever young, thinks they ought to have," said Orrin G. Cox, of New York, in an address upon "Moving Pictures for Children," here on February 2.

Touching upon the wonderful appeal of the "movies," Mr. Cox quoted statistics showing that in Hartford one-sixth of the entire population attended every day; and in New York one-seventh; adding, "thus, in the course of a week, a mass of people equal to the entire population of that great city visits the moving pictures. There must be something worth while or it would not go."

He claimed that plays with "something going on all the time," vital, live stories, staged outside, had rarely in them anything harmful to children; some things to which adults might object they would fail to detect, being absorbed with the thrill movement and action.

CANADA

Plans are proceeding for the opening of the brand new Allen theatre in Vancouver, B. C. It is expected that the big house will be ready for use in May and building operations are proceeding steadily, because the mild weather of the Pacific Coast does not hinder the work. Announcement is made that Will M. Elliott, formerly of the Regent theatre, Toronto, will take charge of the Vancouver house.

The highly important announcement has been made at Toronto, Ontario, that the order-in-council passed by the new Ontario Government to provide for the censorship of all moving picture advertising in newspapers and otherwise will not be enforced for the present.

A number of exhibitors have been officially advised that no further action will be taken in the way of censuring newspaper copy, but it is believed that the subject will come before the Provincial Legislature in the spring. It is anticipated that newspaper advertising will be exempted from the provisions of the new bill that may be brought before the Legislature at that time.

The offices of the various moving picture exchanges in Vancouver, B. C., were entered on a recent Sunday and sums of money varying from forty cents to $13 were taken by the intruder. All of the local exchanges are located in one large building and the thief apparently found it comparatively easy to gain access to the various branches. No clue was discovered.

Canada has a lady film exchange manager. The person in question is Miss Trixie Svenciski of Vancouver, B. C., who was placed in charge of the local branch of the Exhibitors' Distributing Corporation following the resignation of Mr. Ben Soskin. The latter has become associated with the Sterling Films, Limited, of Toronto, and he will be the manager of the new branch of that company to be opened in Vancouver.

J. E. Archer, formerly in charge of the First National exchange at Vancouver, has accepted the position of manager of the Vancouver office of Regal Films, Limited, which was made vacant by the resignation of Mr. C. I. Nathanson.

The announcement was made at Toronto, Ontario, a few days ago that Mrs. Lucy Macgregor, president of the Women's Labor League, had been elected by the league as a member of the Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors. This news came from league sources and the intimation is that two women will now serve as moving picture censors for Ontario in addition to the male examiners now engaged in the work.

The first run in Ontario of the Dempsey-Willard fight pictures took place in Loew's theatre, Toronto, during the first half of the week of February 9, when the scrap views were presented at special midnight performances under the auspices of the local war veterans. Prices up to $1 were charged for the performances. The views are also scheduled to be presented at Loew's theatre, Hamilton, Ontario, and will be shown in other large centres throughout the province for the benefit of returned soldiers and the dependents of the fallen.

The Ontario Government issued a special sanction for the presentation of the heavyweight fight views in the Province providing the proceeds were turned over for the benefit of the veterans and dependents. Permission has also been given for the public presentation of the Beckett-Carpentier pictures in Ontario under the same conditions. The owners of the prints readily agreed to the arrangement, it is declared, because there was no chance to show them otherwise.

Canadian moving pictures were received with enthusiasm at an entertainment of the Community Club of Britannia, a suburb of Ottawa, Ontario, when the films presented consisted of a number of Canadian Government scenics and educationals which have been produced by the Exhibits and Publicity Branch of the Department of Trade and Commerce.

What was considered one of the best programs ever presented at the Imperial theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, was that seen during the week of February 9. This consisted of ten reels of pictures, including a Paramount-Artcraft feature, "The Invisible Bond," starring Mrs. Irene Castle a Mack Sennett comedy, "Salome vs. Shenando"; Pathe Review; a Universal comedy, "Bungling Bungalows," starring Lyons and Moran, and the Gaumont Weekly. The program made up a happy combination and one which brought out big crowds.

Kingston, Ontario, is due to have two large new theatres, the combined cost of which is $750,000, it is announced. One of the houses will be erected by the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, while the other will be erected by Jule and J. J. Allen of Toronto. Both of these interests have many moving picture theatres across the Dominion.

James T. Moxley, manager of the Regent and Russell theatres, Ottawa, Ontario, provided six of the twelve prizes for a fancy dress carnival which was held at the Ottawa East rink on February 10, with an attendance of upwards of 700 people.

Several exhibitors of Ottawa, Ontario, have fallen in line with the suggestion that they arrange various features that will harmonize with "Automobile Week," which is to be conducted by local automobile dealers during the first week in March.

ST. LOUIS

It is rumored that the Koplar circuit of theatres have been taken over by the Paramount Film Company. The rumor was not confirmed.

Famous Players Lasky took an option on a $1,250,000 site for a $2,500,000 building. The erection of a new combination moving picture theatre and office-building at the northwest corner of Seventh and Locust streets by the Famous Players Lasky Co. was closed with the First National Bank. A cash payment of $10,000 was made for the option, the agreed purchase price being $1,250,000.

F. L. Cornwell, local counsel for the Famous Players Co., said it was the present plan of the company to erect a building 15 to 18 stories high, at a cost of $2,500,000. The ground floor would be given over to one of the largest and finest moving picture theatres in the United States, while the remainder of the building would be of the office type building.

John Winston, Paramount exploitation man, will be connected with the local Paramount office.

The "King" and "Pershing" theatres are being completely remodeled and decorated. Large orchestras of 25 men will be installed over the present arrangement. The prices will also be increased to 35 and 55c. All Paramount special productions will be shown exclusively at these theatres. Super-special productions of merit will also be run produced by other film companies.

Elmer Briant, the manager of the West End and Lyric has been sick for over a week with the "flu."

Theatres, running continuous performances, were closed for a half-hour each day by orders of the Board of Health on account of the "flu."

George McKeon, the local Fox Manager, is doing a good business for his company, it is stated.

Barney Fagan has joined the ranks of the local newspaper department. His work will consist of educational topics.

Fred Keller, Cole Robertson representative, has been confined to his home with a disease of the eye.

Bill Goldman visited the Newman theatre in Kansas City. He is planning many new innovations for his chain of theatres.

Robertson-Cole's Export Trade

Plans to Double the Output During the Present Year

"ROBERTSON-COLE productions are now playing in every country in the world today." This announcement was made by the foreign department of Robertson-Cole, after statistics were compiled showing the export of films during the year 1919. Although this record is a good one, plans are being made to double the output of Robertson-Cole films in foreign lands during the present year.

As an added incentive for foreign buyers to purchase Robertson-Cole films, the foreign department this week announces that plans are being arranged to conduct a world wide advertising publicity and exploitation campaign in conjunction with the releasing of Robertson-Cole features throughout the universe. It is believed that this plan will be the largest ever attempted by a motion picture concern in foreign territory. A staff of specially trained advertising writers versed in the conditions of the various countries are now planning this campaign.

Robertson-Cole has inaugurated a policy by which foreign buyers of merit who handle their films will continue to do so indefinitely. The home office will not attempt to arrange exchanges outside of the United States. In this manner it is contended that the foreign purchaser, who makes good with Robertson-Cole will, in the future, reap the benefits of his trade.

The special campaign for Robertson-Cole productions has been arranged for Japan, India, Dutch East Indies, Australia, Mexico, Africa, Spain, Germany, Argentine, West Indies, Scandinavia, France, Chile, Italy and Brazil. The various trade journals dealing with foreign purchases will be used in advertising exploitation and publicity. It is the aim of Robertson-Cole to have their trade mark as well known as any manufacturer sending the necessities of life to various parts of the world.

"The popularity of Robertson-Cole productions is best exemplified by the manner in which every country in the world has received them," said the head of Robertson-Cole's export department. "It is a known fact that the world looks to the United States for present-day film, and it has been the good fortune of Robertson-Cole to have productions that please every nation and race under the heavens.

"In spite of the rush for American productions, buyers for foreign countries are indeed very particular as to the quality of productions sent broadcast. Prior to the war, foreign motion picture fans were educated to accept any kind of film as long as it was amusing. Now they have turned with the tide and want only the best."

"Guerin System" Will Eliminate Ushers

Elimination of ushers in non-reserved seat theatres is one of the advantages claimed for an invention of W. L. Guerin, 1303 North Rampart street, New Orleans. The Guerin System, as he calls it, consists of a board showing with small lights the position of every seat in the house, placed in the lobby and connected with every seat by electric wires. Each seat is equipped with a spring which raises it when not occupied, and when in a raised position electrical connection is made and the light on the board in the lobby is lighted.

Mr. Guerin claims from $7,000 to $10,000 a year can be saved by each theatre using his system. This is in addition to time and labor. He figures this way: In large theatres approximately 12 ushers are employed. They receive an average of $12 a week, an annual total of about $7,500. The system eliminates these ushers.

Pathe Review Booked by Riesenfeld

After what is described as a spirited competition among the leading Broadway exhibitors, Hugo Riesenfeld, managing director of the Rivoli and Rialto theatres, was successful in booking the Pathe Review for an indefinite period. Mr. Riesenfeld was most anxious to obtain the Pathe Review, because of the wide variety of subjects it contains weekly, it is said.

Plans First Showing of "The Confession"

Preparations are being made in Los Angeles for the first showing in that city of "The Confession," the National Film Corporation of America feature, starring Henry Walthall. "The Confession" will be shown at the Kinema theatre, first run house of the First National Exhibitors circuit.

Latest photograph of Mildred Harris Chaplin, whose new picture, "The Inferior Sex," will be distributed by First National Press Book for "The Kentucky Colonel"

"How to Put It Over" is the title of a new idea press and exploitation manual, now being prepared by the National Film Corporation of America for "The Kentucky Colonel," the National's first 1920 feature, which will be ready for the market a few days prior to March first.

Waxman Becomes "Legit" Publicity Agent

A. P. Waxman has left Passaic after having placed his charge, The Rialto, on a flourishing basis. Mr. Waxman has returned to the "legit" and is at present engaged as publicity representative for Kitty Gordon in her new musical comedy, "Lady Kitty Inc."

Chicago and the Mid-West

By L. H. Mason

Manager Eschman of Pathe, is great- pleased with the results already obined by his recently organized squad- on of salesmen who specialize in spe- als. "Other Men's Shoes," the first the Pathe features to be handled by is group of expert salesmen is going rong and was booked for the week pening February 15th at the Alcazar the Chicago loop and by the Play- ouse for the week opening February 2nd. The Woodlawn and Pantheon so have been signed for the big pro- uction as well as the entire Lubliner Trinz circuit. Among the theatres nearby key cities which already have ooked their production are the Jeffer- n. Fort Wayne, Indiana; Liberty atre, Davenport, Iowa; Colonial eatre, Rockford, Illinois; La Salle, South Bend, Ind.; and Avoy The- tre at Moline, Illinois.

A. G. Spencer, formerly with Metro, d who recently sold his interest in e Playhouse, the popular Michigan oulevard Theatre, to H. M. Smith, is e latest recruit to Manager Esch- man's group of special feature sales- men.

Moving pictures are to play an im- ortant part in Mayor Thompson's illion-dollar-a-year advertising cam- aign to make Chicago the best known ity in the world, which was launched n February 12th at a meeting of 400 Chicago business men in the city council chamber. The plan in brief is to aise by subscription one million dol- ars a year for four years, to be spent n advertising Chicago in moving pic- ures, magazines, newspapers, and in very way that the city's advantages an be put before the country and the orld. At the close of the organiza- ion meeting, it was anounced that two undred thousand dollars of the 1920 uota had already been subscribed for. William D. McJunkin has been selected o handle the nation-wide publicity nd advertising campaign and will be ssisted by a board of twelve Chicago dvertising men.

E. A. Klar, well known Chicago ex- loitation and picture salesman, has oined the sales staff of United and ill cover an important territory reach- ng from Iowa through the central part f Illinois to Indiana.

Nat Deverich, director for the Dodge ilm Company, who is cutting the egative of "Witch's Gold" at the othacker Chicago laboratory, offers his idea to exhibitors for what it is orth:

"I see in the London Bioscope that nglish exhibitors are debating wheth- r to apply for liquor licenses so as to un bars in connection with their movie heatres. I believe bars run in connec- on with the American theatres would ake in lots of money. Yep! I believe he receipts of the side attraction would almost equal the box offices' returns."

Bars? We have heard there used to be such things.

The Beehive Exchanges, Chicago, Milwaukee and Indianapolis are meeting with pronounced success with the Charlie Chaplin pictures, the "Champion," "Work," "The Jitney Elopement" and "By the Sea." Their feature picture, "The Red Viper," which carries the endorsement of the American Legion, is bringing in daily, according to reports from Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin exhibitors, big business.

R. C. Cropper, president of the Cropper Distributing Corporation, reports that "Pointed Paragraphs" are going big from coast to coast. Reports received daily from selling forces in the field, indicate pleased audiences gratifying to the exhibitor.

The coming of Vitagraph's great special production, "The Courage of Marge O'Doone," Chicago and surrounding territory will be heralded, according to Manager Fred Aiken, by the biggest 30-day billboard advertising campaign ever attempted in this district. In Chicago itself, "24 sheets" posted on 126 regular boards and 30 special boards will proclaim the news that movie fans will have the opportunity of seeing James Oliver Curwood's powerful story of the northwest, on the screens of their theatres. In the territory immediately adjacent to Chicago, 232 more billboards will be used and Milwaukee will be informed that "The Courage of Marge O'Doone" is to be seen there, by 100 billboards.

Manager Graumont of Metro, has added two men to his sales staff during the past week. They are James Guest, formerly with Triangle, and S. R. Moses, recently with Hallmark. Both will cover Chicago city territory.

The appointment of Al Skates, formerly with the World Film Corporation, as his assistant, is announced by Manager O'Toole of the United Picture Theatres, Inc.

An exhibitors' showing of the "Corsican Brothers," featuring Dustin Farnum, was given at the Playhouse last week with full orchestral accompaniment by the Playhouse orchestra. The Michigan Boulevard theatre was well filled, and judging by the praise bestowed upon the picture by showmen in the audience, it will have heavy booking in the Chicago territory. "The Corsican Brothers" is assured of unusual good exploitation by the tie-up with the 400 United Cigar Stores of Chicago, which, beginning February 23, will display in their windows and salesrooms, a 12 x 19" poster, showing Farnum as he appears in the six-part super feature. The first showing of "The Corsican Brothers" will be at the Rose, the week of the 22nd. Another United picture, "Between Men" will be shown in the loop during that week on the Castle screen.

The Princess theatre at Monticello, Illinois, will be redecorated and operated as a moving picture house.

A Springfield syndicate is planning on the erection of a vaudeville and picture house at Havana, Illinois, and already have obtained an option on a site for the proposed theatre.

Work of remodeling the Princess theatre at Springfield, Illinois, is to start shortly and the seating capacity of the house will be enlarged to approximately 1,300.

"The Right of Way," with Bert Lyttel as star, which made a decided hit on its showing at the Orpheum theatre, in the loop, will be released to Chicago suburban houses on February 22, and heavy bookings are reported.

An event of unusual interest to Chicago moving picture showmen will be the opening of a school for salesmen in the Chicago Exchange of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation by special representative Fred F. Cresswell, preparatory to making effective the ambitous sales plans of his organization.

The Chicago territory has been divided into twenty zones by Mr. Cresswell, and his idea is to have a salesman for each zone who will be responsible for, not only the sale of the picture, but its success as a drawing card to the public. With this end in view, he will select twenty young men, preferably those who have had no film experience, but who are salesmen desirous of entering the film business. The men selected will be given a two weeks' course, not only in salesmanship, but in exploitation of pictures, advertising and publicity methods, thus making them not only salesmen but exploitation men capable of being of real assistance to the exhibitor from the time the picture is sold to him up to the time of showing.

Bloomington, Illinois, is making a fight for Sunday moving picture shows. 2,481 votes are needed to put the proposition over and petitions containing names of 4,090 voters who have pledged their support to the proposition have been secured, which makes it look as though there will be Sunday shows in Bloomington soon.

Carl J. Mueller, owner of the Colonial Theatre and Spencer Square at Rock Island, the Harper Hotel, and a dozen other interests in that city, has been ordered by his physician to take a complete rest in the south and will go to Hot Springs shortly.

B. A. Warmold of the Marquette Theatre, La Salle, Illinois, announces that their theatre will be enlarged to accommodate a thousand more spectators. The designs for the new house are modeled on the new Irwin Theatre in Bloomington and the State-Lake Theatre in Chicago.

J. W. Edwards of the Edwards Theatre, Edwardsville, Illinois, has given up his lease on that theatre and announces that he will erect a new house in Edwardsville.

February 4th was a red-letter day in th life of R. C. Meeker, who is on the sales staff of the Atlas Educational Film Company, Chicago, in the Commercial Department. Mr. Meeker, who recently returned from France to take a position with the Atlas Company, landed his first contract, which by the way was a big one, and a few hours later his wife presented him with a bouncing baby boy. Meeker can thank the war for securing his Parisian wife, for he met her in France and brought her back to this country with him. To assure the new baby a good start, Meeker's associates in the Atlas office presented him with a substantial bank account.

C. Eddy Eckels, the popular general manager of the Capital Film Company, was forced to go to the hospital last Saturday and undergo a minor operation and his friends are all cheered up by the report that he is rapidly recovering and expects to be back at his desk in a few days.

T. W. Weiss, who for 15 years has been selling organs and has been connected with the leading musical concerns of the United States, has joined the sales force of the Bartola Musical Instrument Company and is selling the new 18-carat Barton Pipe Organ and Bartolas. Sales Manager Abrams left this week for a trip through Ohio and Pennsylvania in the interest of the Company.

Balaban & Katz have brought Lawson Reid, an eminent eastern organist who has been featured as a soloist in many of the large theatres of New York and adjacent states, to Chicago to play the new Barton pipe organ at the Central Park Theatre.

Joe Swartz of the Koscieusko Theatre, Milwaukee, has recently leased the Liberty Theatre and is making extensive alterations to that house which will make it one of the finest theatres on Milwaukee's north side.

Joe Baban, owner of the Washington Theatre, Monroe, Wisconsin, is adding 40 feet to the building and making many alterations, redecorating, etc., so that the Washington soon will be a first-class photoplay house in every respect.

Maurice Fleckels, vice-president of Universal, stopped off in Chicago last week for a few days on his way to New York from the Coast, after spending six months at Universal City as Mr. Laemmle's personal representative. Mr. Fleckels reports that the west coast studios never were busier in their history and are turning out some wonderful pictures. "The Virgin of Stamboul," Universal's first great feature starring Priscilla Dean, according to Fleckels, is the most elaborate and costly production in the history of the organization, $515,000 having been expended already and before "The Virgin of Stamboul" appears on the first moving picture theatre screen, it will represent an outlay of $625,000 including exploitation and advertising.

Harry Rice is back in Chicago and has taken up his duties at the Universal office from where he will direct the publicity for the territory from Cleveland west. Although offered strong inducements to stay in New York where he was general director of publicity for Universal, Harry just couldn't stay away from Chicago and is very happy at returning to the home town. He is wasting no time in getting down to business and already has arranged some big exploitation stunts for "The Great Air Robbery," the picture featuring Lieut. Locklear. He has engaged a squadron of aeroplanes to bomb Chicago with free tickets for the Band Box where "The Great Air Robbery" is to open and arranged for the planes to carry Mayor Thompson and several of the feature writers on the Chicago newspapers over the city during their bombing trips. One of the interesting features of this exploitation campaign is that the film will be delivered to theatres in the nearby towns, such as Aurora, Wheaton, Hammond and Gary and many others, by planes. The boy scouts, school pupils and youngsters in general also are to be given a chance to compete in aeroplane model contests and the results of their work will be displayed in schools, stores, theatre lobbies, etc.

Banks Winter, who has been sitting in as publicity man at the Universal Chicago office, has been assigned to a southern territory with Charlotte, North Carolina as his headquarters and departed Sunday to take over his new duties. Chicago moving picture and theatrical circles regretted the departure of this veteran actor and publicity man as he had hundreds of friends here and during his connection with Universal made many more.

Lee Herz has purchased the rights to "Human Passions" for the states of Illinois and Indiana. This is in line with his new policy for having the Silee Film Exchange release two big features a month.

E. Edwards and Sam Keeley, representing the Edwards Amusement Company in this territory have taken offices on the sixth floor of the Film Exchange building and are putting out a feature which is causing considerable interest, showing how the movies used to be about ten years ago. The novelty includes a reel showing one of Mary Pickford's first pictures, some of the old fashioned illustrated songs, a lecture, some old slides and an early day slap bang comedy.

M. J. Mintz has joined the staff of the Chicago office of Hallmark Pictures Corporation as manager of serials.

The California Motion Picture Enterprises is the latest exchange to join the independent ranks in Chicago and has opened an office in the Consumers Building. "Alma Where Do You Live?" is being handled by the new exchange and the office is in charge of Ernest G. Gagnon, who will exploit the picture in the states of Illinois, Indiana and Michigan.

Samuel A. Block has joined the Fox Film Corporation, Chicago office, to organize a non-theatrical department to promote the sale of films to churches, schools and for institutional work. Mr. Block recently resigned from the Chicago censorship board.

Phil Solomon again is on the staff of George Kleine after being connected with other moving picture organizations for several years.

H. A. Spanuth, president of Commonwealth Pictures Corporation is now directing the Billy Whiskers pictures himself and claims he can make Billy, who by the way is a goat, do everything but talk.

A merry party of film folks gathered at Ben Beadell's home Saturday night, February 7th, to pay a Birthday homage to the genial manager of the Chicago Select Office. To say they had the time of their lives, would be putting it mildly.

And then — Oh Boy! A luncheon was served. It thrilled the eyes—it electrified the most jaded appetite—in fact, some of the boys still get that far away look in their eyes when someone says, "Let's go to lunch". And then, when all the doors were locked, and the blinds pulled down, the cellar reserves were brought in. What damage was done to the cellar, only Mr. Beadell knows.

It was 5:30 A. M. when the taxi's drew up at the door to take the merrymakers to their homes, and everybody has marked the date of Mr. Beadell's next birthday in their note books.

Among those present were: Eddie Silverman, Paul Bush, Al Gallas, Julius Alcock, Lee Woodyatt, Percy Barr, L. R. Nelson, Ed Barbour, Art Schwartz, Louis Schutt and Joe Zilligan.

While on the Coast in February Watterson R. Rothacker planned to run up to Frisco to personally say "Thanks!" to N. S. Brower, of the Turner & Dahnken Film Exchange. The concluding paragraph of a recent letter from Mr. Brower to Mr. Rothacker follows:

"Considering the amount of work that you do and the numerous prints that you make for First National we think that it is truly remarkable that the quality of your work remains the same at all times. You also give the smallest replacement order the same careful attention that you would give for an order of a hundred prints. You can put us down for a Rothacker booster at all times."

"WHY CHANGE YOUR WIFE"

Reviewed at Cleveland by Elsie Loeb

"WHY change your Wife" is a comedy of every day lif with one tense scene. The charm of the play is that might apply to almost everybody who sees it; and a everyone likes to inject himself into an entertainmen it is certain of success.

Robert Gordon, wealthy New Yorker, likes the froth of lif including jazz music, daring gowns, bull dogs and cigars. Mr Gordon's tastes are of an opposite character. His wife's refus to wear a wardrobe of ultra-modern design to a Follies show lead to his departure for the function alone. Complications arise, an divorce follows.

In course of time, Bob marries again; this time Sally Clark the pretty mannequin who had sold him the wardrobe, become his wife. Bob soon finds out that his new wife has the same dis likes as the first, and regret follows. A trip to a nearby resor brings all the parties concerned together again. Events happe "fast and furious," and in the end Bob and his first love ar happily reunited in wedlock—only this time masculine proclivi ties for jazz music, bull dogs and black cigars are given complet toleration.

Men will enjoy the production; women will learn a lot o pointers on how to keep their husbands in love with them.

Another View of Percentage

TOM SAXE, exhibitor and distributor, is right!

The producer, whose claw-like left hand reaches out for percentages while his right is pocketing his rental profits, whining at the same time that "Percentages Mean Equity" and "that percentages give the producer a square deal," is—to use Mr. Saxe's own words—"killing the goose that lays the golden egg."

How any set of men could summon up the monumental nerve, could for one minute conceive that exhibitors as a class are so devoid of ordinary intelligence as to swallow the bunk that they have been handed, is more than we can understand.

How do they expect us to believe that they are not getting a fair return on their films, when we daily read of the dividends declared? How one big picture released only about three months has already netted over a million in rentals.

Good pictures will always get enough money in rentals to show a big profit. The bad ones probably will, too, as long as producers can manage to sandwich them in with the good.

Percentages will never come—we hate to be disagreeable. There may be a few weak exhibitors that will fall for this propaganda, but not many. Percentages will not come for the reason that there are not as many "hicks" and "easy marks" in this business as some people think.

For once the producers of motion pictures have found something good about the legitimate show. They have found in it a good example to hold up before exhibitors in the matter of percentage bookings, that is, it is a good argument to peddle out to those who know nothing of the "legit."

The purpose of the manager of the "legit" show in ninety cases out of one hundred is this: to provide a house for the attraction to play, have the stage crew ready, conduct the seat sale and provide the orchestra. For this service he gets from 20 to 30 per cent. of the "take."

The advertising, exploitation, and house policy during any particular engagement is handled by the attraction's representative. This is the way the combination house is operated and has always been operated. result is that the "Manager" of houses in every town from 2 down has some other business w occupies his time.

He takes no trade papers in w to learn how to better his busines up to the agents to do that. Opera House is his "side line." other words, the attraction is ev thing—the theatre, to all intents purposes, nothing.

Now let us look at the motion ture business. It has develope class of business men who are exp in exploitation. There are thous scattered throughout the U States They have made it their c business. Ninety per cent. of the atre managers give their theatres personal attention. Thousands trade journals and advance expl tion ideas are shipped them we and are eagerly read so that new i can be secured. They are a clas men who join Rotary Clubs, Bo of Commerce, Retailers Associati and other civic associations. have made the picture a business

These men, in the great majorit instances, if on a salary, would worth $75.00 to $300.00 a week to theatre. But the producers wan put them in the class of the "legit" men and give them a 20 cent. or 25 per cent. split on a b ness which they have worked year establish, with their own persona

No, percentage will not come. the first place, the wide awake hibitor will not let another "put o his show for him, he wants the pl ure of doing that himself. In the ond place, he will not give away profits to a concern who had no h in establishing his theatre—who the presumption to ask him for a tal and then a percentage on top that—a concern that takes no risk the presentation whatsoever, stands to lose nothing and to gain

Further than this, if the exhibi allow the producers to get away their percentage game, it will dest the business.

The Press Book by the Men Who Use Them

A Series of Articles Secured by C. L. Yearsley, Director of Publicity and Advertising for the First National Exhibitors Circuit

DOWN at Atlanta, Georgia, there lives a red headed young chap by the name of C. A. Carroll, whose job is motion picture editor of the Atlanta-Georgian American. He is the contributor this week to our series of articles on the press books. He asks four questions. Four very ent questions. Three of these questions a lot of people, exhibitors, reviewers, publicity men, etc., ve been asking themselves without arriving at a conclusion. All of which hasn't a great deal to do h this special article, but will serve to editorially introduce the writer in what we call one of the t stories yet to be published on the subject of what the men who use the press book think of them.

C. A. Carroll, motion picture editor of the Atlanta Georgian "American"

By C. A. CARROLL

Picture Editor, Atlanta-Georgian American

HAVE been looking for a long, long time for the uy who edits the average press sheet of the ion picture producers. There are several crows ant to pick with him.

There are a few questions I want to put to him. , to wit, as follows:

For what purpose do you write a press sheet?

For whom do you write it?

Why all the decorations and scare heads?

Did you ever hear that there are motion picture uses in small towns, or that large cities run a ture for more than two days?

If so, what provision have you made for them?

And if he answered these satisfactorily, I would oot a few more at him in kind and not very ndly.

A real press agent—and that, in sum, is what a ss book is supposed to be to the average exitor—is the fellow who writes first for the city ditor, second for the men who employs him, and ird for the subject under discussion.

A man may write the finest story in the world, ull of pep, snap and sales arguments; a story, in ne, that would make five thousand people fall ver one another's neck on Monday to get the first ok at the show; but if this story fails to get by e gink on the desk who wields the blue pencil, is not worth half a stick written by the cub porter who has just been sent out on his first signment.

First and foremost, then, the editor must be considered. The man in front of a typewriter should ver take his eye off the gent with the ugly copy radicator. He must write to him.

What does the editor want? First, if he is itally interested in motion pictures and in the welare of the exhibitors of his city (and he is a oor movie editor if he isn't), he wants a story hat gives an excuse for being printed. He wants t to stimulate real news as much as possible. He vants all personal advertising left out. He hates, n fact, to cut stuff. It makes him sore as the nischief to get a piece of copy that is trying to 'put something over" every second line.

He also wants the facts of the picture, including he plot, the stars, the theatre, brought out clearly nd concisely. He wants his readers to be able to rasp easily and quickly what they may expect to ee when they pay down their two bits for a punk eat. He does NOT want the name of the camera nan, nor the office boy, nor the copy chaser, nor a description of the furniture in the lobby of the producer's office building, nor any of the cheap junk that is thrown in to get the name of the producer's organization before the public as many times as possible.

If he is editing a paper that gives readers on the basis of paid advertising, he wants to find in the press sheet a story that will fit any size ad. If there is a three inch ad being run, and the basis of reader to ad is 50-100, he wants to be able to clip a paragraph that sums up completely the high spots of the production. If there is a fifty inch ad, he wants a newsy article in special feature style that will not omit clear, condensed statements of the main points somewhere near the beginning. If there are six daily three-inch ads, he wants six shorts, all different, to fit in.

The place for personal stuff is in the movie magazines. Every movie fan that is interested in personalities takes these magazines. There is little room in a newspaper, if the theatre is to secure its proper share of publicity, for long stories about the wonderful scenery that the star encountered when she set sail on a mountain burro for the land of the clouds. It doesn't help the exhibitor in the slightest.

And here we come to the second consideration. The press agent must have the best interests of the exhibitor in mind next to the editor. He has sold his services to the exhibitor every time he gets out a press book, no matter from whom his pay check comes every Saturday. A press book that is not written for the exhibitor had better be chucked in the waste basket before it gets into type.

I have a press sheet in mind, sent out by one of the big corporations that does a fine display advertising in the trade journals as is being done by any concern. This press sheet is made up of a long harangue on how to play the picture—two columns—the synopsis of the plot, at full length—one column; a series of teaser ads that never vary; a history of the infancy of the principal star; and two short stories about the scenery in the neighborhood of the location where the picture was filmed. In all the time I have been looking for something to clip from this particular sheet, I have never been able to paste up a paragraph.

The best interests of the exhibitor are served by telling the story of the picture in such a way that the people who read will want to see the film. It is not necessary to tickle the vanity of the manager by beginning: "Manager ——— of the ——— Theatre is delighted to announce that he has, by paying thousands of dollars been able to procure for the picture public of ———." That don't get anywhere. The average manager is not selling himself, he's interested only in getting the picture over.

Individual house advertising must be left to the local exhibitor for inclusion, but the story must not advertise the producer rather than the film.

One of the most delightful press sheets I ever handled was that on "Daddy Long Legs." This picture had a first, second and third run in my city, and each time the circumstances of its presentation were a little different. But on each of the three occasions, I found plenty of the right dope to clip for the right place.

Of especial commendation were the advertising layouts. These were in line drawings—as most layouts should be. They were in many sizes and a variety of appeals. When the leading theatre of the city played it first run, one of the layouts was carried bodily into the fine advertising of this exhibitor, who always has his ads specially drawn by an expert artist. On the next occasion, still another layout was available; and when it got down to the cheap third run house—which, by the way, ran the picture for a week on a daily change program—still another layout was ready to appeal exactly to the patronage of this house.

Any city newspaper these days prefers to reproduce a line drawing in zinc to botching up its columns with mats or the average plate that is furnished by the service department of the exchanges. And line drawings, after all, are best calculated to hit the public in the eye.

Having got this much off my chest, I am going to resume my search for the guy who edits the average press sheet. There are several more crows I want to pick with him—for he certainly is an onery cuss.

Novel Exploitation Gets Big Business and Makes Entertaining Story

ANIMATING a novel incident in a special feature attraction as the basic thought for an exploitation campaign, C. E. Jeffress, manager of the Old Mill theatre at Dallas, Texas, has given exhibitors a new line of procedure in mapping out promotion campaigns.

"The Mule and the Girl" is a phrase that became little short of a trade-mark in the exploitation campaign launched by Mr. Jeffress. The opportunity was featured by the scene in which Mary Pickford leaves for the lowlands astride a donkey in "Heart of the Hills."

By using the picture of Miss Pickford astride the donkey in newspaper display advertising, in the lobby and all exploitation material, Mr. Jeffress was able to accomplish his purpose. Utilizing the newspaper display—with "the mule and the girl trade-mark" as a blind, Mr. Jeffress prepared an expensive lobby of the same design, i. e., that of Miss Pickford riding the mule, with shot-gun, blanket and lantern dangling from the burro. The lobby cut-out measured seven feet across the base and reached a height of eight feet at its top point.

To further exploit the idea of "The Mule and the Girl," the Old Mill advertised through the columns of the daily papers that a young lady was wanted to ride a donkey around the business section of the city. It was, at first, thought highly improbable that any girl would take the position. But one Miss Ruth Yelton, 17, proudly applied, purchased a wig and a gingham apron and mounted the burro in front of the Old Mill theatre at 2 p. m. Sunday, the first day of the picture's showing. With utter disregard to traffic ordinances, parking laws and traffic officers, the sleepy mule would cross streets in the middle of the block, park on the car-tracks, and balk in the most inopportune places and at the special inconvenience of traffic officers.

A special reporter for each of the five daily papers trailed after the donkey day after day, waiting for it to be hit by a street car. No such event happened, however. The worst that occurred was a disagreement between the mule and his rider. Diplomatic relations were severed and the mule—not used to be bossed—stepped upon the curb, dethroned his passenger and walked democratically along the sidewalk for nearly half a block. Nearby policemen, hearing the noise and bustle of pedestrians at being thus annoyed, awoke from their beats and scurried to the scene of action, whence the hot-headed mule was pushed from the sidewalk with a great amount of physical exertion on the part of the officers, and to the accompaniment of taunts and jeers from the crowd.

Feature writers of the newspapers left their typewriters to get a glance at the spectacle and turned in jazzy feature stories on the novel method of exploitation used by Jeffress.

A farmer from Waxahachie, Texas, a town 35 miles from Dallas, who had by some means or other gotten hold of the newspaper advertisement in which Jeffress stated that a mule was wanted, came into town with a choice variety of yellow, red, brown and black mules. One of the more tame members of the stock was selected and rented for a week in place of the wild-eyed burro who had run away with "Mary."

In speaking of his scheme and its results, Mr. Jeffress said:

"It's the steady flow of business that counts in the motion picture game. Of course, we would probably have done fair business with 'Heart of the Hills' for two or three days without any special exploitation. But the idea is to hit the people when they're in the mood for it. You can't tell them anything. The most you can do is to suggest it. You can't make a man believe anything until he already knows it.

"It's the same way with the exhibitor. A certain percentage of theatregoers would have seen the picture whether we pulled the stunt or not. But we would not have rolled up the big success. Our scheme only stimulated the already-good business and kept the thing fresh, which should be the aim of all well-directed exploitation campaigns."

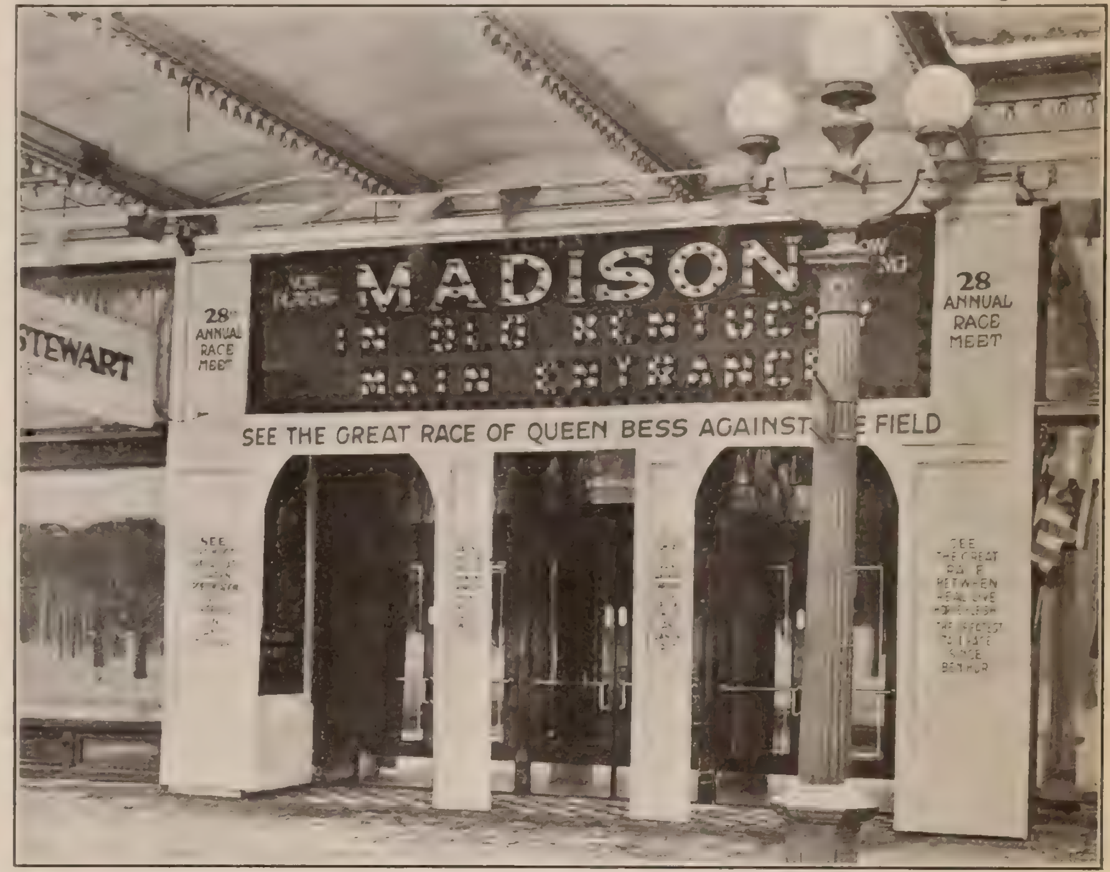
Stages Bona Fide Horse Race as Interlude

Madison Theatre, Detroit, Gives "In Old Kentucky" Exploitation That Breaks All Records for Automobile City



The lobby display which the Madison theatre used for its showing of Anita Stewart's "In Old Kentucky"

MARKED by the cornering of every inch of available billboard space, the importing of y mechanical equipment from New York, the ging of a troup of artists for a prologue and sive advance and consistent publicity efforts, Madison theatre, Detroit, has just completed xploitation campaign that resulted in surpass- ny theatrical event in the history of the city. hough perhaps no more effective in the grand al of success than a number of other novelties luced in the promotion of "In Old Kentucky," flesh-and-blood horse race that took place on stage just at the time it was shown in the pic- e probably drew more attention and generated re word-of-mouth advertising than anything e used in the campaign.

To accomplish this horse race, George W. endle, manager of the Madison, was put to the nse of importing an expensive treatdmill New York. A decision to introduce the horse race ever seen on a Detroit stage per- accounts for the last-minute attempt to in- the success of the presentation by getting rained horses and jockeys from New York. At that moment in "In Old Kentucky," when the "they're off," is shouted, the orchestra switched a 6-8 agitato movement. As the race pro- sed the tempo of the music increased. And st as Anita Stewart astride Queen Bess was seen forge to the front and thunder neck-and-neck ngside the leading contestant.

At this moment, like a flash the screen was isted and two horses could be seen apparently nning across the stage. By the means of a mov- g panorama it seemed that the horses were really aring across the stage. By means of the tread- ill, the horses' legs were going at the rate of 60 iles per hour, while the horse was not gaining an ch. At the proper time the screen was suddenly opped and the picture was resumed.

A novel idea in the building of a lobby display nsformed the front of the Madison theatre to resemblance of a miniature grand-stand, paddock d betting booths. By means of blackboards laced naturally in the upper lobby panels the fect of the slates seen about a race track was ined. A picket fence running through the lobby ve the effect of the paddock.

The exterior effect was gained by using poster- ard in shapes to represent the outside of the grand-stand. On various columns of the immitation grand-stand were printed statements such as: "See the Most Spectacular Screen Presentation Ever Offered In Any Theatre." "See For the First Time Real Live Plunging Horses In An Actual Race on the Stage." "See a Company of Trained Vaudeville Artists in a Special Singing and Dancing Act." "See the Great Race Between Real Live Horse Flesh and the Greatest Stage Race Since 'Ben Hur'!" This lobby was conceived and designed by Howard O. Pierce, director of publicity for the John H. Kunsky Enterprises which own the Madison and house manager Moule.

Mr. Moule used only a news weekly, and a prologue as the accompanying entertainment for "In Old Kentucky." However, the prologue was in itself a gem for wit and melody. A quartet of negro singers and dancers placed the audience into a most receptive mood for the attraction by the old

Exhibitor's Daughter Advertises "The Brat" from Aeroplane

WHAT sets them talking in a big town may not always do it in the small city and vice versa. But when hundreds of circulars headed "The Brat Is Up Today and Will Be Down at the Crown theatre," fluttered down from a whirling airplane upon the town of Biloxi, Miss., the natives were more than aroused. An airplane is none too common a vehicle in that city and is downright spectacular when "The Brat" is riding in it.

"The Brat" in this instance was Miss Inez Bourdon, daughter of A. O. Bourdon, manager of the Crown and Gaiety theatres, part of the Saenger Amusement Company's circuit. She was dressed as Nazimova costumed as "The Brat." She let fly over 3,000 of the circulars, which had a paragraph reading:

"To the lucky person catching and bringing to the box-office of the Crown theatre a circular with the following sentence in red letters: will be presented with two tickets for this attraction."

This exploitation stunt was the first of its kind pulled in the New Orleans territory, but last week was followed by a French opera singer who advertised a benefit in which he was to sing. He didn't wear a costume or make-up and probably fewer people knew of his "stunt" in New Orleans than there are in New Orleans who know of the stunt Mr. Bourdon over-filled his theatre with in a town a hundred miles from New Orleans.

MANAGER D. S. MARKOWITZ, of the Ver theatre, San Francisco, put over the fi episode of James J. Corbett's new serial "The Mi night Man," at his theatre by giving the pictu on the day of its first showing, the whole of lobby display. In addition to this advertising in t lobby, Mr. Markowitz conducted a teaser campai and used one spread in an Italian paper. On t whole the advertising cost him a little less than $ and as a result he is now assured of profits for t eighteen weeks that the Corbett feature will shown.

The Verdi is in San Francisco's famous La quarter and 90 per cent of the patrons are Italia but Manager Markowitz figured that regardless birth or creed everyone would want to see J Corbett if his picture was sufficiently brought their attention. Hence, the hundred per cent Co bett lobby.

The lobby campaign was a progressive one.
first he displayed a one-sheet which was follow the next day by a three sheet. As the date of t showing grew nearer the poster display was creased, until three days before the actual sho ing the lobby display contained one 24-sheet stru across the wall of the lobby, 6 sheets on either si framed colored stills, a three-sheet cutter in center, and a cut-out clock over the box-office w the hands pointing to midnight.

This display was intended to attract the att tion of the passer-by. The regular patrons of theatre were informed of the coming aerial by a of attractive slides flashed during the perfor ances. On the day before the opening an attract spread was used in an Italian newspaper.

At ten in the morning, one hour before the op with patrons. All day long the house did a business.

Stages Circus for "Her Elephant Man"

St. Louis Exhibitor Borrows Municipal Elephant and Transformed Lobby Into the "Big Top"

WHEN Walter Shafer went to St Louis to take over the management of the Liberty heatre of that city, he carried along with him a esolve to show even the old timers in the show ame how to put over pictures. To what extent he has been successful is illustrated by an account what he did in the way of exploitation of Shirey Mason's "Her Elephant Man," which has just losed an engagement at the Liberty.

A week before the opening date for the picture, Shafer hired a clown and after dressing up in a audy costume and providing him with a toy elehant mounted on wheels started his employee out n the job of parading St. Louis streets.

On the elephant was a sign which read: "Shirley Mason in Her Elephant Man." At the same time Mr Shafer got busy with his publicity. The St. Louis papers fell for a story which said that the Liberty theatre's "clown," Sylvanus Story, by ame, was formerly a school teacher at a small own in Illinois and that having grown tired of ying to teach Young America how to shoot for ty dollars a month had gone clowning at the rate $120 per month. No name was attached to the tory to identify it as advertising, although the ticle did say that Story was working for a downwn theatre. Then one of the papers printed an terview with Story that could not have failed to widely read. The following is an extract:

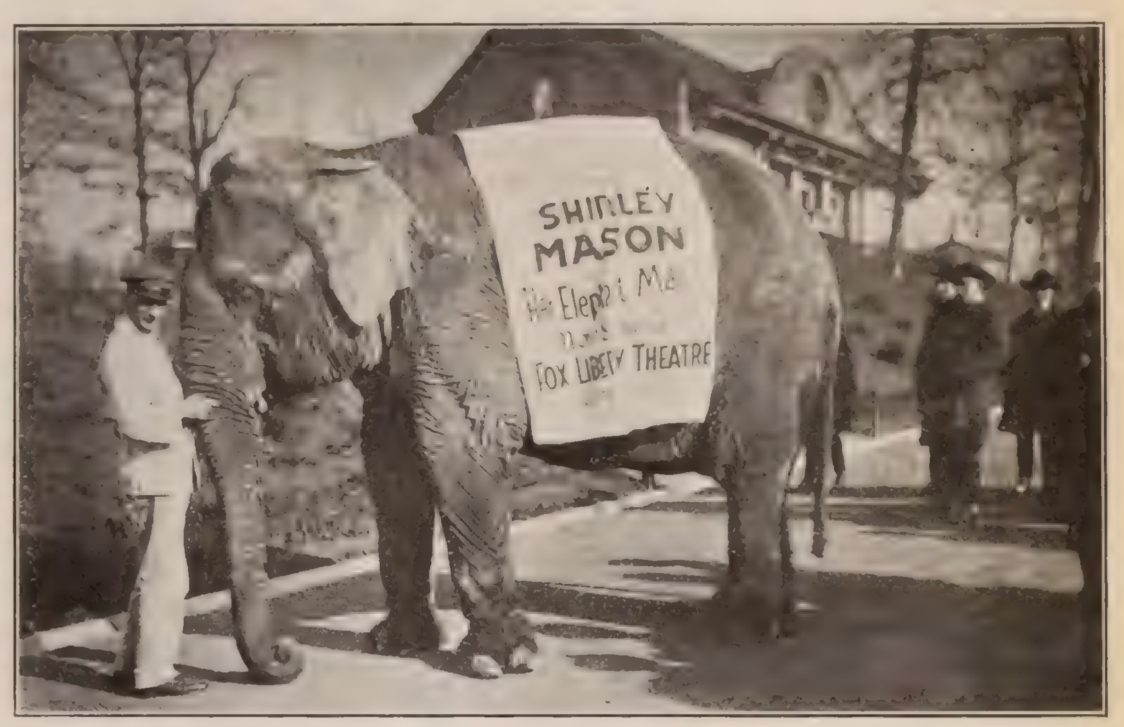
"Story said he 'likes clowning fine' because all he has to do is walk nonchalantly down the street nd look at people and they laugh, whereas when e taught school he had to contend with naughty oys and was forced to spend several hours a day istening to the country children drone their lessons in the schoolroom.

"I find it is much easier to make friends of naughty boys on the streets while I am clowning," Story said. "When they come near me I just do a ittle jig or grimace at them, and they are my friends for life. They trail me around faithfully.

"I don't know what people will think when they nd out I am now clowning and I don't care so ong as I like the job and am paid more. It has made me arrive at the conclusion that anything ays better than teaching school.

"Story said he had decided several months ago that he would never again teach school. He said everal offers of schools in the country had been made him, but all paid so poorly he could not aford to take them.

"He came to St. Louis several days ago and answered an advertisement for a man to wear a own suit, inserted in newspapers by Walter D. Shafer, manager of the theatre. Shafer said Story is developing rapidly as a clown and that he had turned down several professional clowns who applied for the job since Story has gone to work, in favor of the former school teacher."



"Jim" and his keeper ready to start advertising for "Her Elephant Man"

Teaser ads were run in newspapers and then the announcement of a circus coming to St. Louis in February when the chill breezes are yet blowing, aroused much comment. Then "Jim," the "papa" elephant of the St. Louis municipal zoo, was thought of as an addition to Shafer's exploitation campaign. Through some wire pulling in which the keeper of the zoo, Martin Angermeyer figured, "Jim" took a leading role in the publicity stunts pulled for the picture. With "Jim's" big leather sides covered with a sign telling all about the picture attraction at the Liberty, a parade was staged about St. Louis's streets.

All the youngsters who were within hearing distance of "Jim" from the time he started his tour until it was completed were soon tagging along behind the elephant and his keeper. Like a snow ball the farther the procession proceeded the larger it became and between "kids" and elephant Shafer's circus parade was a huge success. This stunt also was put over as a news item and again St. Louis heard about "Her Elephant Man" and the theatre at which it was showing.

Not content with a street parade, Shafer made up his mind to carry the circus atmosphere still farther. The Liberty theatre, to use the words of a writer of a morning paper, resembled a three-ring circus.

The lobby was transformed into a vestibule of a sawdust arena. There was a big spread of canvas, pennants were flying and even the peanuts and red lemonade were provided. A brass band which could make just as much noise and more music than a circus organization was engaged. Nothing was left undone and by the time the first show was on crowds were gathering in the lobby in sizes which would have done justice to a real three-ring show.

In conjunction with the film presentation a clown act of twelve minutes, in which three clowns, formerly of the Wallace Hagenbeck shows, provided the circus mirth, was given. Hochman's Augmented Orchestra played circus music that kept the crowd's feet tapping the floor.

A circus drop provided an elephant for the stage and a cutout of Miss Mason was perched upon the elephant's head.

During the afternoons, toy balloons were released from the roof of the theatre and admission cards were attached to them. Just how successful the experiment proved was shown when, two hours after the first balloon went up, two small boys appeared with a muddy, bedraggled pass.

They said they had shot the balloon out of a tree in which it fell, about a mile north of the theatre.

"Had a heck of a time gettin' the pass after the balloon fell out of the tree," the boys said. "'Bout six other kids wuz there an' we had to scramble for it. That's why the pass is tore a little."

Another effective exploitation stunt was the tieing up with a book store located at a prominent street car transfer point for a window display in which not only the current attraction was given advertising space, but also the next bill, "A Tale of Two Cities," was given good billing along with the book version of the story.

Lobby Display Invading Even the Small Towns

THE lobby display as a medium for exploitation is invading the smaller towns and proving its worth there as in the cities.

The accompanying photograph will give you an idea of the "front" devised by the Liberty theatre of Wenatchee, Washington, for Dorothy Phillips' "Paid in Advance."

Manager W. W. Kofeldt of the Liberty designed the display and was one of the principals in carrying out the decorations, the results of which he says exceeded all expectations.

An ironic little touch which Mr. Kofeldt added to the scenic artist part of the display was the "grave" of "Jim Blood, the Cur."

This served as a curiosity arouser and caused a lot of talk in the little city of Wenatchee.

Mr. Kofeldt reports that the expense of this display was not large and that he is firmly convinced that it is one of the best forms of exploitation to be devised even when playing a picture for a day or two, as is the policy at the Liberty.

Stages Bonifide Race As Interlude

southern songs they sang in addition to "In Old Kentucky." As the strains of an old-time southern air died out, the lights faded into the opening scenes of "In Old Kentucky."

The gaily bedecked Madison was easily seen for blocks away during the showing. Brightly-colored pennants with appropriate word matter fluttered on a wire one block in length and which was strung from the theatre front to Woodward avenue.

A week before the initial showing of the production a girl dressed as a jockey was stationed in the lobby of the Madison distributing heralds telling of the interesting spots in the feature. Also, two singers were engaged to sing "In Old Kentucky" at every performance the week in advance of the showing.

In addition to arranging for the use of every available billboard in Detroit, and this is quite a tremendous undertaking in a city the size of Detroit, Mr. Pierce arranged an assortment of newspaper press copy that has never been equalled in the history of his city. It is conservatively estimated that four times the usual amount of paper was used to further the interests of the attraction and the amount of display advertising space was also greatly increased. Half page, quarter page and other smaller ads were planned with infinite care in order to bring out every possible feature that could induce the sales of tickets. Special window cards and posters for local street cars were also designed by Mr. Pierce.

All local music stores co-operated in the plugging of the song "In Old Kentucky." Every 5-10 cent store in the city provided a window display that announced the picture and its place of showing. As an instance of the popularity of "In Old Kentucky," one music store reported the sale of approximately 1,200 copies of the song in one day.

Laugh If You Want to, But This Is Good Logic

NATHAN SCHAFFNER, of the First National Exhibitors' Exchange for Kentucky and Tennessee, had an unusual request recently.

A customer in a small town said to him:

"Whenever you sell me a picture at a big price send it C. O. D."

"Why so?" asked Schaffner.

"Why, you see, the people at the post office get to talking about the big price it cost and I get a lot of good advertising for giving the public expensive pictures."

When Ignorance Was Bliss It W
Folly for Wendland to Be Too
Wise

IGNORANCE is bliss says an old proverb, an was especially true during the recent publi campaign carried on by Harry J. Wendland, g eral manager of Byrd's Strand theatre, Fre
California, for the first showing on the Pa
Coast of "Soldiers of Fortune."

Mr. Wendland unwittingly violated a federal and a municipal ordinance when he sent over telegrams over the mails and placarded the city
Fresno to advertise the picture. He was re manded by the postmaster and the mayor, but ing the week that the picture was shown at Strand packed houses were in order. It was on those instances when ignorance triumphed sagacity.

Mr. Wendland experimented with sev original and unique stunts during the engagem of "Soldiers of Fortune." One of them was issuing of a daily newspaper with reports of tendances at the showing of the picture all the United States and the total attendance at Strand for the preceding day. The newspaper distributed in the restaurants, hotels and reside of Fresno, and so popular did it become that it a circulation of 5,000 copies. Notwithtanding this, Mr. Wendland kept up a continuous bomb ment of advertising and reading matter in the d papers. He had printed round placards descri the picture and invited prominent citizens to p them in the space occupied by their spare tire the rear of their automobiles.

He devised illustrative tie-ups for several of Fresno bookstores. Special rates were allowe school children. In doing this he recognized of the greatest sources of publicity in the Un States at present. The children became so in ested in the picture that they gleefully discusse with everyone, and, particularly, their relatives.
that way they became more valuable to him several one-page advertisements.

Inside the theatre preparations were made precedent was started in that city, when Wendland engaged an orchestra to render

Sugar Envelopes Advertise for Exhibitor

Pittsburgh Showman Takes Advantage of Sugar Shortage and Obtains Some Inexpensive Publicity

THE sugar shortage may be a matter of concern for most people, but for Pete Antonopo-ps, manager of the Olympic theatre in Pittsburgh, was productive of an advertising idea that helped pack his house for a week.

He had about 15,000 small envelopes, just large nough to hold an individual portion of sugar, rinted and distributed to the leading downtown estaurants. The owners were pleased to use the ervice and the small cost of the venture to An-nopolos was more than returned by a record eek at the box office.

The envelopes used were of manila about two by ree and a half inch in size, and on one side the llowing was printed:

After Your Meal
See
"Soldiers of Fortune"
Richard Harding Davis' Masterpiece
At The Olympic Theatre
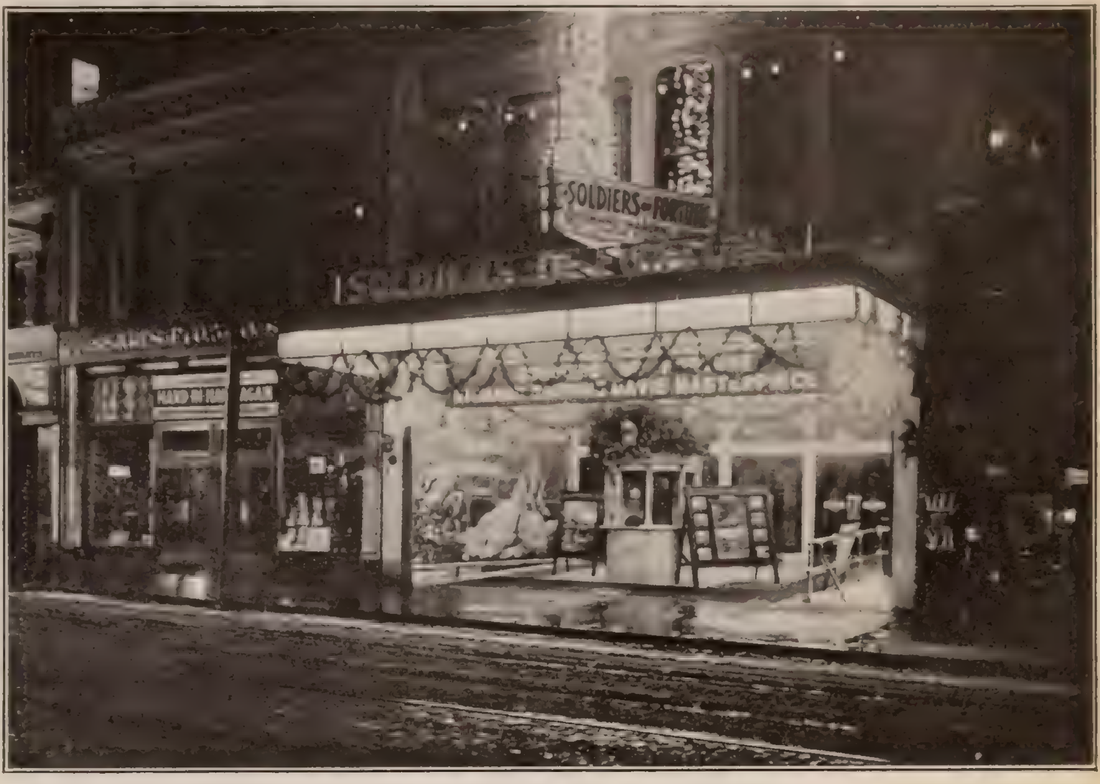
Week Commencing January 5th

The real pinch of the sugar famine had passed y the time this novelty was used, but the price f sugar was so high that restaurant owners de-red to encourage conservation by their guests.

The Olympic theatre is situated on Fifth avenue, e principal thoroughfare of Pittsburgh. It has rong competition from several large downtown ouses. The Olympic seats 1,000 persons, all on e main floor, and as an indication of how the gar envelope idea pulled, it is cited that more an 1,800 persons were admitted to the theatre up 5 o'clock on the first afternoon of showing.

In addition to the sugar envelope stunt, Mr. An-nopolos arranged an attractive display for the llan Dwan production in his lobby. As Fifth enue in Pittsburgh with the possible exception State and Madison in Chicago, is the greatest nain drag" of any city in the country, the dis-ay had great advertising value.

It consisted of an ingenious composition of two the twenty-four sheets so that there was a wealth pictorial effect to catch the eye. The lobby was trimmed with wreaths and a large electric sign across the front announcing "Soldiers of Fortune," Richard Harding Davis' Masterpiece."

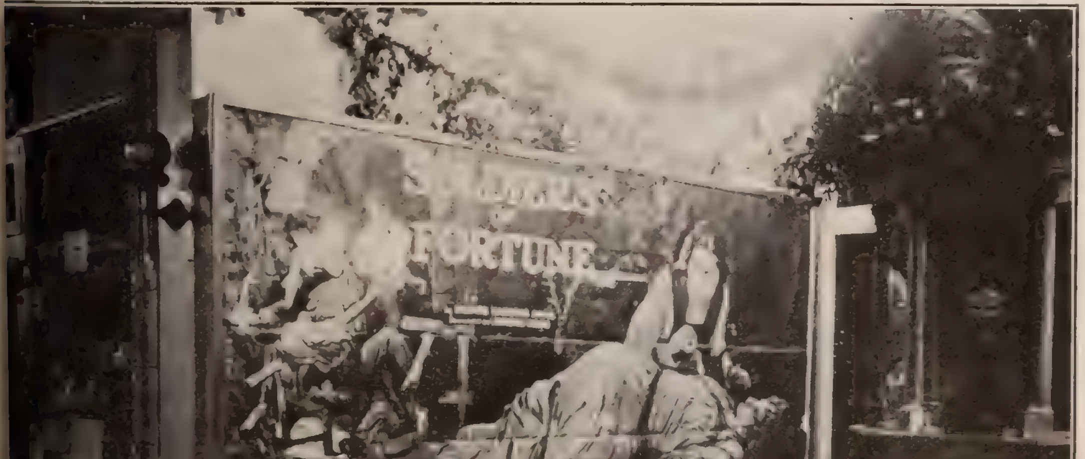


"Soldiers of Fortune" lobby display at the Olympia theatre, Pittsburgh

Several special newspaper advertisements were prepared by an artist for the management, and short feature stories were placed in the Pittsburgh Dispatch and the Press. Considerable space was obtained in the news columns and picture layouts in all the Sunday editions.

Tie-ups were also effected with merchants on the novel by Davis from which the Allan Dwan production was made. Kaufman's department store placed a sign in its book department and gave a reference to the production showing at the Olympic theatre.

The same tie-up was effected with Jones' bookstore. Volkwein's music store placed a sign in its window reading: "Out Soon—Soldiers of Fortune March by Arthur Pryor, Bandmaster of the Capitol in New York. See the photoplay and hear the march at the Olympic theatre."



The Olympia of Pittsburgh used a twenty-four-sheet in the lobby for the "Soldiers of Fortune" showing

We Really Think This One Is New

WHEN you can tie the title of a picture up with an exploitation stunt the effectiveness of exploitation is doubled. Therefore this account of the idea originated by Manager Ely of the Hippodrome theatre, Portland, Ore., comes in for double commendation.

Besides an unusual amount of the more orthodox advertising for "The World Aflame" the Frank Keenan labor problem picture, Mr. Ely on the opening night by using "stage flares" from many places about the theatre roof succeeding in creating the appearance of the building being in flames.

The unusual sight attracted a great many people to the scene, and many came thinking that the theatre was really on fire. Crowds worked their way toward the house to witness the firemen's efforts to put out the blaze but remained to view the presentation of the picture.

Of course Mr. Ely had some preliminary work to do before he was at liberty to start "The World Aflame" idea. First he received permission to from the city officials to burn his red fire on the roof of the building. Next was to make sure that he did not endanger the property by starting a real blaze. Then came the procuring of the flame pots which, however, was not so hard, theatrical supply houses carrying them in stock. The expense of the proposition was not large considering the amount of attention it attracted, and in consequence throughout the entire run "The World Aflame" did a business which to Mr. Ely's mind was in a great measure due to his exploitation idea of "burning up the theatre."

Kansas Exhibitor His Own Artist MakesSuccess with Exploitation Stunts

THE average exhibitor finds little or no time to spend outside his office in these days of keen competition, but it's always the exception that proves the rule. So the exception among successful exploitation exhibitors is to be found in the person of Herbert J. Thacher, Manager of the Strand theatre, of Salina, Kansas, who not only manages his house to the contentment of the great majority of his townsfolk, but is besides many other things, his own scenic artist, the workmanship of which studio, is always the one big attractive feature of the showing of his big productions.

"Broken Blossoms" was the last big production that afforded Manager Thacher an opportunity to extend himself, and the consensus of opinion in his community is that he presented a hundred per cent. performance. He personally painted a wonderfully artistic Japanese setting with unusual colorings and lighted it in a manner that would cause a Belasco to become envious.

But the setting wasn't all. He presented a monologue-prologue called "The Yellow Man" whose message was based on the theme, "Do not give blows for blows, the great Buddha says; what thou dost not want others to do to thee, do thou not to others." The Yellow Man spoke a glorious message of peace to his "barbarous" Anglo-Saxon friends, the sons of turmoil and strife.

For two weeks prior to the opening of the production Mr. Thacher did much exterior exploitation work in connection with the newspapers, department stores and local organizations. He covered his community with an extended bill-board campaign and the whole repaid him bountifully in large box-office returns.

The lower cut shows a picture of a stage setting used by Mr. Thatcher for "In Old Kentucky." Attention is called to the practical cabin with the flowers growing over the sides and the stage props furnished to set off the beauty of the scenic part of the work.

As a part of the program during "The Old Kentucky" showing a colored quartet rendering several selections from the good old darky melodies before the screening of the picture and a soloist appeared at the end of the picture in some songs which were somewhat more classical.

In a letter to the News concerning the success the Strand is having with the prologue and stage setting Mr. Thatcher states that it is his belief that no greater boon to the exhibitor in an advertising way has ever been devised than that which can be gained through the use of the prologue. He says that when he first thought of putting on such a number his associates scoffed at him for trying to emulate the big city's big theatres and preached that he was wasting his time and money. Mr. Thatcher himself was none too sure that the expenditure in time and effort and the expense involved would be justified, but determined to try the idea out. With his very first prologue staged, he became convinced that he was on the right track and went after other productions along the same lines. Soon he began to notice a new class of people coming in to the house, people he had never been able to get before. He listened to the remarks of the audience as they went out of the theatre and found that his innovation was the talk of the town. He finds that he has created a new patronage to be added to his list of steady patrons and in this has an added incentive to keep on building stage settings and staging prologues. He also promises us more photographs of his handiwork.

Mr. Bourdon is more than a wide-awake picture theatre manager. He holds the record for catching the largest tarpon, the "locomotive of the deep," ever caught in Southern waters. The contest was identifying the portraits of

Stages Special Prologue for "The Copperhead" Presentation

JUST to get out of the beaten track Phil Gleichman, manager of the Broadway Strand theatre in Detroit, succeeded in staging a new form of prelude when he presented "The Copperhead" last week. Preludes heretofore, at least locally, have consisted wholly of big orchestrations, style shows, songs, dances and things of that nature. Mr. Gleichman, on the other hand, decided to give a taste of drama.

The Broadway Strand stage is so arranged that in the place occupied by the screen, above the heads of the orchestra on the regular stage, there is a second platform or stage. Here an interior setting was built and painted and furnished with chairs, table, lamp, phonograph and other objects familiar in every home. A local writer penned a sketch in keeping with the subject, with patriotism as its keynote, two actors were engaged, and when the curtains parted the audience found a Civil War veteran sitting in a rocking chair while on the other side, a boy in a modern army uniform was playing a phonograph.

Heroism and bravery was the subject of the playlet. The veteran of the Civil War first protested against a Johnny Reb tune. The boy protested that such ideas had been forgotten, that Southern boys have proved their valor in the world war and shown exceptional bravery. The old soldier declared that it might be brave to creep forward in a hurricane of lead, but real heroism was only displayed by such men at Milt Shanks (Lionel Barrymore's character in the play), who suffered being called a Copperhead to aid the union. In the finale the patriotism was the subject of the final speech.

The entire program also was in keeping with the feature photoplay. In fact Mr. Gleichman introduced a series of musical and vocal effects as well as his drama. A soloist, in hoopskirts, sang two medleys of old Southern airs. Through the picture the music was particularly appropriate. And at the close, when the old soldier dies, "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" was played and sung. The song was offered on a phonograph record, with Miss Granesch, the soloist, and the orchestra accompanying the same. The audience could not tell a phonograph was employed

Exploitation Men's Minute Book

Gives Away a Ten Weeks Old "Baby"

TO use the current agitations or events as described in the newspapers is an old method of exploiting a stage or screen production, but to the public it is ever new and besides it rarely fails. The proof of this statement is shown in the manner in which a screen production was put over in Toledo, Ohio, recently, when the entire town was ripe for a stunt that in some way had to do with the giving away of a baby. The local newspapers had published several stories about mothers who were offering their babes for sale or giving them away in order that they could exist. The stories had been played up by the Toledo newspapers and when C. E. Carrier, Selznick-Select exploitation representative, arrived in Toledo to put over the "Greater Than Fame" production, he immediately took advantage of the most timely topic.

A week before the opening of the picture at the Temple theatre an ad was run in the Toledo papers announcing a contest on "What Is Greater Than Fame"? The winner of the contest was to receive a ten-week old baby. Tie-ups with the furniture stores of the town were made by having them display baby clothes and furniture along with an announcement of the contest.

The newspaper ad was repeated on Tuesday and by Wednesday the citizens of Toledo began to wonder what had happened to the management of the Temple theatre. The Children's Welfare League, the Catholic organizations, the humane officers and the clergy of the city all entered protests and the telephone in the box-office was busy answering calls inquiring as to the nature of the contest. Meanwhile the newspapers continued to carry the publicity gained and the theatre manager, Eddie Zorn, issued a statement that despite the protests he would go through with the contest and present the baby. By Saturday all Toledo was more than interested—in fact it seemed the intention of the entire population of the town to see "Greater Than Fame" and the award of the prize.

In addition to the newspaper publicity a truck drawn by four beautiful white horses was sent around the town. On the sides of the truck a banner was carried announcing the picture and the name of the theatre.

Sunday opened to a good business and on Monday the award was made. Police and humane officers were in the theatre ready to execute warrants, but when the winner was asked to step up on the stage and receive the baby, a squealing baby pig—not only the entire audience but all Toledo laughed.

"Greater Than Fame" then began to break attendance records.

Two Papers in Same Town Print Special Sections for "Everywoman"

IN the exploitation of "Everywoman" in Dallas, Texas, Leslie F. Whelan, exploitation representative for Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, attached to the S. A. Lynch Enterprises in Texas, decided to make his biggest play through the medium of newspaper publicity. So Mr. Whelan got in touch immediately with the editors and advertising managers of the Dallas Journal, Times-Herald and Despatch. As the feature of the Journal a six page section entirely devoted to the production and its various features, was put over. The front page carried an artistic layout of scenes from the picture, combined with art work by J. E. Leecroft, staff artist of the Journal. The rest of the page was devoted to special stories concerning the characters of "Everywoman," origin of the play, etc.

"EXPLOITATION MEN'S MINUTE BOOK—"

GIVING Credit Where Credit Is Due. The text of the pages under this heading is devoted exclusively to the achievements of the Exchange Exploitation Men.

It places at the disposal of the exhibitor all the exploitation ideas these experts originate, renders their services practically universal and gives credit where credit is due.

The inside pages carried advertisements of local firms, each advertisement featuring the title and carrying the words relative to the characteristics of "Everywoman," namely: "Beauty," "Youth," "Modesty." The back page was left for additional reading matter of human interest. The edition made such a sensation with Journal readers that it was sold out completely for that day. It was the first time in its history that the Dallas Journal had turned over its pages for any special publicity for entertainment.

A similar section, consisting of ten pages, led off by an eight column caption "Everywoman Everywhere Should Read This Interesting Section," was arranged in the Dallas Times-Herald. More than forty merchants in Dallas contributed special advertisements for the occasion which, incidentally, increased the circulation of the Times-Herald.

The stunt worked on the Dallas Dispatch was in the nature of a "character adaptability" contest. The Dispatch requested photographs of the young women in Dallas whose characteristics commended them to play the parts of "Youth," "Beauty," and "Modesty." More than one hundred photographs of the fairest of the fair in Texas were received, and, as a result, the judges, comprising three of the city's well known personages, had consider difficulty in selecting the winners. After the se tions had been made the honored ones were ta on a shopping tour throughout the city, Dispatch devoting two pages to this particular i dent, using advertisements of announcements just what merchants the young women had visi Brand new just-out-of-the-show-window auto biles were obtained from the local agencies to c vey the young women on their tour. The con ran for nine days, the Dispatch devoting its page to the announcement, conditions, photogra of the winners, and other material.

New Exploitation Idea for "E of Youth"

AN idea for exploitation of Clara Kim Young's "Eyes of Youth," which regis with us as sure-fire, was originated by T. J. Spadden, manager of the West and Colonial atres, Galesburg, Ill.

Mr. McSpadden called in a local photogra who possesses a motion picture camera and t rounded up ten pretty and well-known girls of city and had photographs taken of their eyes. Sl were made from the negatives of the girls "ey and the McSpadden theatres are using the slide connection with a guessing contest as to the o ers. The idea is getting the attention of Galesb and is not only creating a lot of interest in forthcoming engagement of "Eyes of Youth," is also pulling business before the showing, pe coming in to see if they can figure out who "eyes" belong to.

A substantial prize is being offered to the ners, which is in itself a business getter.

Mr. McSpadden suggests that the same could be used with cuts in the newspapers, bu only using the slides.

he Best Exploitation Stunt of the Week

ALITERAL "knockout" as an exploitation, so inexpensive that it is well within the means f any exhibitor, despite location or size of thetre, and which is without precedent in local news alue so great that advertising costs are reduced a very small amount, has just been tested with ord results by the Saenger Amusement Comny of New Orleans. The campaign resulted in—

Two column, front page stories every day for weeks, written by a star reporter assigned by New Orleans Item to "cover" the news phases what was originally planned by the Saenger usement Company as an advertising campaign.

Front page cartoons, by a staff artist, putting a mi-humorous phase on the exploitation.

A "no limit on space" order from the editors stories by Tom Dabney, the Item's star rerter, despite the pressure of columns of sensaonal news every day on the most hotly contested bernatorial race that Louisiana has ever known.

Applications from fifteen hundred men and omen who wanted to win one of the prizes for eeping all night alone, chained to a tombstone, a graveyard.

The selection of a young man and woman and gro who went through the ordeal with varying sequences, which made additional front page s stories in the Item, with two and three mn cartoon illustrations.

A local news value so great it made paid adver- unnecessary after the first two announceents of the prize offer.

The use of police reserves afternoon and night seven days, despite the heaviest and most se- rain storm of the winter, which continued out letup throughout the week, to control the wds that stormed the Strand theatre to see The Greatest Question," D. W. Griffith's feature traction released through First National Extors' Circuit.

Such sensational straight news publicity in the em that the daily stories by Tom Dabney were published by newspapers in practically every her city and town in the territory, which brought ndreds of letters of inquiry to the Item from t of town.

The campaign was conceived, originally, by C. Yearsley, director of publicity and advertising r First National, and incorporated by him in the ess sheet for "The Greatest Question." James yant, manager of the Circuit's exchange in New leans, Foster Olroyd, manager of the Strand eatre, L. H. Grandjean, chief of the Saenger nusement Company's publicity department, and on Harsh, Saenger Company press representae and ad man, voluntarily credited the entire ploitation to the First National press sheet.

In volume of space obtained as publicity, in terorial interest, and in effect on New Orleans theegoers, the campaign is without equal, according the men who made it a local success.

'It was nothing short of a sensation," reads a tement from Mr. Bryant, Mr. Olroyd, Mr. andjean and Mr. Harsh. "The expense was riulously small in comparison to the results. It a stunt that is an absolutely certain success in y community, and it can be directed by an exitor, alone and without material assistance, alst as well as it can be done with an experienced blicity department. It added hundreds of dols to the week's receipts at the Strand, despite tinuous rain and a heavy wind storm. It is a ly remarkable evidence of what showmanship accomplish, when real news value is injected o exploitation.

'The real secret of its publicity value is in the t that in each city or town it involves people o are known locally, and in some thing that is idedly unique and far away from the ordinary. has the added merit of being simple and direct, hout any involved features which make for del and unceasing effect. Once it is launched with a preliminary announcement ad, the public will provide the action until its conclusion.

Edna May Smith, who slept all night in a cemetery for "The Greatest Question" exploitation stunt pulled by the Saenger Amusement Company for the Strand showing

"Our first step was an advertisement in the Saengerette, the program for our leading New Orleans theatres. This has an exceptional weekly circulation. The ad invited application from people who had the courage to spend a night alone in a graveyard, chained to a tombstone, 'in the interests of science.' We promised that the selected applicants would be furnished with cots and blankets. The consideration was $25 for a white man, $50 for a negro, $75 for a white woman and $100 for a negress. That one ad brought several hundred applications within forty-eight hours.

"A similar ad was published in the Item the day after the week's issue of the Saengerette was distributed. Immediately news reporters were after our publicity department for a story. Then applications began to pour in by letter, telephone, personal calls and telegrams. The Item assigned Tom Dabney, its star reporter, to the story, and he obtained wonderfully interesting human interest statements from scores of the applicants. He dubbed the stunt 'the graveyard sleeping contest.' An Item cartoonist illustrated these stories, carrying out Mr. Dabney's very practical thought of treating the proposition in a serious way. This removed the stigma of the tragic or sacrilegeous, and made the matter as a half-comical experiment in the courage of human nature to face the unknown and the mysterious.

"The political fight over the election of a governor was at its height, but this had no limiting effect on the amount of space allowed Mr. Dabney by the Item.

"For the first week no effort was made to connect the offer with 'The Greatest Question.' A two column ad was used to tell the public that it would be impossible to supply every applicant with accommodations, but that if any person had any particular questions to ask the spirits, the questions would be given to the applicants finally selected, who would be asked to present them to any shadowy nocturnal visitors, should any appear. This ad was headed, 'What to you is the greatest question? What would you ask a spirit?' and was the first reference to the production. Single column teaser ads, containing the sentence, 'What to you is the greatest question?' were used on different pages of the Item a day later.

"Three persons were finally selected from the fifteen hundred applicants. They were a young white man, a young white woman and a negro. The risk of having a colored woman essay the feat was deemed too great. Then arrangements were made for the use of three different graveyards. The experiment was set for a Friday night, and in its afternoon edition for that day the Item carried a three column story with photographs of the successful applicants. The tremendous public interest aroused in the affair was shown by the fact that although there are a number of graveyards in New Orleans, and that the names of the three chosen for the exploitation were kept secret, hundreds of persons visited the various cemeteries during the early evening, while the slumberers were being properly chained and equipped. The rain storm began just before dark, but the applicants insisted that there be no postponement, so army pup tents, just big enough to provide a moderate covering for each cot, were obtained as protection from the storm.

"The following day Mr. Dabney wrote his greatest story of the campaign—the experiences of the three vigilists. The young white man had been given permission to keep a lighted lantern at the foot of his cot, where it was completely protected from the rain and wind. He reported that he fell into a doze about midnight, and awoke before one o'clock to find the lantern dark. He relighted it, and after another doze he discovered it had been put out, or gone out, again. This, he said, happened five times during the night, and he was certain that the wind could not have reached it, because it remained lighted so long as he was awake.

"The colored man declared that he saw something, he didn't know what, and that it remained at the foot of his pup tent, swaying back and forth in the wind, for more than an hour. It is safe to say that but for the chains he would not have won the money.

"The young white woman saw nothing and heard nothing but the eerie noise of the wind and rain in the trees, and the spattering of drops on the marble white tombstone to which she was fastened by one wrist, and she fell asleep about two o'clock. When she awoke at dawn there was a bouquet of flowers at the foot of her cot, water soaked and bearing evidence of having been removed from some newly decorated grave. We are certain that no one in our organization was responsible, and the watchmen at the various gates to the cemetery swore that no one had entered, and that they had not left their posts.

"These facts made a remarkably interesting story, and for that day the gubernatorial campaign was relegated to second place, instead of equal honors with the 'graveyard sleeping contest,' in the day's news.

"In the same edition of the Item which carried this big story by Mr. Dabney we published a display ad, definitely associating the stunt with 'The Greatest Question,' which was announced to open at the Strand the next day, Sunday.

"From every angle it was a huge success, and it is going to be repeated in practically every city and town in the territory coincident with the showing of the Griffith attraction. It costs very little as an exhibitor expense, and the returns in receipts at the box-office are the greatest, in proportion to ad cost, of any exploitation in the history of motion pictures in this territory."

In these final scenes, just before the close, there is considerable action in the Milt Shanks home, while outside a parade is going by, a parade of veterans. To coordinate the two it was arranged that the strings would play the same music during the interior scenes and the brass and drums the parade. It permitted the volume of music to rise and fall as the action required.

Plays to Hundred Per Cent of Hi Audience

PLAYING to a total of eight hundred people i a town, the total population of which is b 836, is a record recently established by I. H. Tre cott, manager of the Pictureland theatre at Livoni N. Y.

"Intensive advertising" is the name he applie to the method he employed, which is one that it i possible for any exhibitor to use anywhere if h is in close touch with the field from which h patronage comes.

Mr. Trescott is known to practically everyone i Livonia. He has studied their tastes in picture and books every one of the larger features that h knows will appeal to his townsfolk. In establis ing the record of getting everyone out to the the tre except thirty-six inhabitants, he declares h acquired enough courage so that price will nev again be a reason for not showing a production the Pictureland.

Mary Pickford in "The Hoodlum" is the pi ture which caused him to hang up the record. H saw it in Buffalo, but when told of the rental h would have to pay to show it in Livonia for tw days, he declares he was frankly doubtful as whether he could make a profit on it.

"I decided it was good enough to give to m people as a treat if enough of them didn't tur out to make it a financial success," said Mr. Tre cott, "but once I had booked it I resolved that n one in town would have the chance of saying th didn't know I was showing it."

TO have a striking photo of the star who is appearing at your theatre adorn the front page of a widely circulated local magazine is a somewhat unusual bit of publicity, but Manager E. O. Weinberg of the Strand theatre, Buffalo, has made an arrangement whereby he is able to put over a photo on the cover page of "Truth," Buffalo illustrated weekly, not for one week but for every week, and all he gives in return is to pay the cost of the cut and to run a slide on the screen calling attention to the fact that Truth is publishing the photo of Eugene O'Brien, Elaine Hammerstein or William Russell on its front page, that the photo is a new one and well worth framing. Truth in return decorates the local news stands with large cards reproducing the cover page, with readers calling attention to the coming of the star to the Strand. The cover itself also carries a box cut line under the photo, giving the name of the star, the attraction and the date of showing.

The stunt has attracted much attention in Buffalo, primarily because of its originality. To date Mr. Weinberg has had published photos of Elaine Hammerstein, Eric von Stroheim, Eugene O'Brien and William Russell, and is preparing a striking photo of Mary Pickford in "Pollyanna" for a front page display. It is an easy matter to get photos of stars on the inside of magazines and newspapers, but it is a rather difficult matter to get them on page one, an few exhibitors would hope in their wildes dreams that they would be able to repeat th stunt every week. However, that is just what i being done in Buffalo, and the illustrations here with show some of the front pages reproduce by Truth for the Strand.

The magazine, when placed on the variou news stands throughout the city, also proves valuable bit of advertising for the Strand, reall taking the place of window cards in many in stances. It is also well worth while for th Strand, where the downtown newsboys made special display of the magazine on the day th publication comes out, which is done in severa instances. Mr. Weinberg has found the stun to be a very valuable one.

Advertising Which Specializes to Arouse the Public's Curiosity

AN insight into the latest and most constructively different exploitation campaign, S. Barret McCormick, managing director of the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, Ind., has launched in the last eight months enables exhibitors to sow the seeds of exploitation in uncultivated fields.

Technically, Mr. McCormick hinged his exploitation on the basic idea of the writers of "Two Weeks," that the great percenage of the general public is instinctively curious as to the routine and non-routine events in the life of a chorus girl.

The showman that made Indianapolis famous wasn't a bit reluctant about airing the personal affairs of an average show-girl. The exploitation campaign started several days before the first showing of the attraction when a new sort of McCormick ad good-naturedly piqued interest in the picture.

A four-column by sixteen inch ad was built on a fifty-fifty arangement. Half, the upper half, was devoted to an odd drawing that showed the figure of a girl attired in negligee and holding a candle in her hand. A light from somewhere outlined her figure against a fetching filmy nightie. Whether the girl was Constance Talmadge or someone else is unknown. It is established that she was pretty.

"Saucy Lillums," read the word matter. Then in smaller type more explanation followed: "She's a chorus girl, carries her bathing suit in a vanity case, is one of the principal reasons why they repealed the daylight saving law, naughty just so far —then zip, and on go the weed chains." This wasn't the end of the paragraph. But the interested reader probably took a look at the figure above and continued again:—

"Not a single Rolls-Royce to her name, yet the Maitre de Hotel bows low when she enters the Lobster Palace—but she washes out her own lace hose and hangs them on the radiator to dry—so now, suspicious reader, you know just what kind of a girl 'Saucy Lillums' is—nearly."

In type neither gaudy nor smashing but large enough to stand out sharply in contrast to the other type, "CONSTANCE TALMADGE in 'TWO WEEKS'" was displayed. And below the title of the play, was written:—

"—That's the title of the play which concerns the above described young lady and three women-hating bachelors who find themselves in the embarassing position of being caught unchaperoned with her for two whole weeks, fourteen days, 336 hours, 20,016 minutes—but why continue? She could only marry one of them—at a time."

On the opening Sunday of the attraction Mr. McCormick arranged for a two color display ad. On a light green background, the figure of Constance Talmadge was printed. She seemed to be resting on an assortment of pills and velvet coverings. She was not burdened with clothes. It was a photograph that might hang in any art gallery. Word matter practically the same as the announcement acompanied the advertisement.

During the week of the showing, ads ranging from a column by two inches to two columns by four inches were used. A cartoon of Miss Talmadge was supplemented by a brief reference as to what might be expected to happen when a chorus girl is "stranded for two whole weeks at the country estate of three bachelors."

Probably the most characteristic play in the campaign was made on the human interest that naturally surrounds the showgirl. No chance was omitted for stating that Lillums was a Broadway chorus girl. The idea of patronizing high-priced cafes and wringing out her own stockings and such thoughts that make novels about chorus girls interesting were capitalized for all they were worth by Mr. McCormick.

From the standpoint of exhibitor benefit, Mr. McCormick's campaign is unquestionably the most noteworthy. Just as he stressed a point of interest that appeals to eighty-five per cent of all theatre patrons this same idea can be used to good effect. Doubtless, the personal life of a chorus girl holds as much or more charm as the life of any person. But it is further likely that the life of a shopgirl, shoe-salesman, telephone operator or any other person featured can be gracefully exploited in a campaign for a feature attraction.

Perhaps the "O. Henry" touch which Mr. McCormick applied to his explanation of the spicy events in the lives of showgirls accounted to a great extent for the popularity of "Two Weeks." The manner in which an idea is carried out is of course a great factor in that idea's success.

Another Mechanical Window Display Story

SOMETIME ago we published a story of a canny Scotchman who, in a town of some 600 used mechanical window displays of his own invention. Fortunately for us we didn't claim it was new, having had some experience in chronicling this "first to pull it stuff" nor did we claim for Mr. MacKenzie that he had any copyright on the idea which is just as well, since our good friend A. C. Raleigh, with the Jensen and Von Herberg people out at the Columbia theatre, Portland, and one of our own advisory board comes through with ample proof that he pulled the same stuff when he was located at the Rialto, Butte, Montana. Instead of using a cut-out from a twenty-four sheet however, Raleigh enlarged the design on upson board and blocked in the colors in shades and shadows. For power, Mr. Raleigh used a variable speed motor and a set of gears connected with arms of wood transfering it to the various parts of the contraption devised for the particular display which was being used. Mr. Raleigh sends in some photographs to prove that the West Coast is two years ahead of Missouri, perhaps having in mind that the Atlanta (Missouri) exhibitor may have some of the characteristics generally ascribed to one of the race his name suggests, and also those which his state implies, in having to be shown.

We are using one of these photos for a cut with the explanation of how the invention worked, not that we think any exhibitor will again play this picture now history so far as films are concerned, but with the idea that it may be used for some other picture having the sea as the locale of its plot, like "The Shark" or "Behind the Door."

The center "wave" you will see in the illustration moved up and down, while the "ship" had a staggering motion which closely imitated the roll of a vessel on a stormy sea. We sort of imagine that our friend Raleigh only wanted to warn us never to go on record as calling anything "new" in his letter, explaining how he worked the mechanical device and others of a similar nature, since his letter was largely personal and perhaps did not see there was an exploitation story in it from several angles. First, the stunts he pulled with his mechanical "toys" were instrumental in attracting a lot of extra business just as Mr. McKenzie's did. Second, it will remind exhibitors again that here is a novel exploitation idea that is a sure fire business getter. Third, the particular stunt we have described in a general way one of four Mr. Raleigh pulled, is just as good on other pictures as it was on "The Sea Master."

To forestall any more comebacks we will say that Raleigh himself doesn't claim that he is the only man who ever pulled this stunt, although like Mr. MacKenzie he did originate his particular machine, which is the same thing.

We might add that if there is any other exhibitor who can come through with a "mechanical window display we will be glad to give space to the story of his "invention."

Following the Trail of Brown's Whang Doodle Band

NOT so long ago we told the NEWS readers about the "Whangdoodle band" which Phil Brown, an old "trouper," had gathered together for a tour of the Indiana cities in connection with the showing of "In Old Kentucky." The "Whangdoodle" outfit is now entour, and from being just a band that could play some music and make more noise it has grown to almost a full fledged minstrel show.

The band operated as a sort of black-face comedy combination. The daily street parade took place at 2 p.m. through the main streets in whatever city the picture was showing. Realizing the full drawing power and publicity value of a negro brass band, which can always make three times as much noise and was known as the "Kentucky ballyhoo," Brown provided for the band to line up in front of the theatre between performances and play such well-known typical airs as "Swanee River," "Dixie," "On the Henry Clay" and "The Memphis Blues." The ballyhoo turned out to be as great a success as had been the street parade and was from that day on a part of the Whangdoodle band's daily routine.

Determined to keep the colored musicians busy and out of trouble, Mr. Brown was not satisfied in allowing them merely to make a street parade and four or five ballyhoos a day. His theatrical training led him to produce a black-face act, lasting about fifteen minutes, in which dancing, music, singing and comedy chatter was introduced. The turn, which was used during the intermission of every performance during the day, was known as "A Day in Dixie," and succeeded in drawing more and more showgoers to the ticket windows.

To give the minstrel act, "A Day in Dixie," a more professional appearance—a thing which Mr. Brown realized was essential to the success of the performance—the musicians are provided with costumes depicting the old negro cotton-picker, mostly consisting of overalls, gingham shirts, tattered hats and shoes. A banjo, played by one of the Whangdoodle members who can fortunately "Double," is used to great effect during the act in giving the affair the required local color of the old plantation.

After a four-day showing at the Star theatre in Muncie, the film production accompanied by the band traveled to Anderson, Ind., for the remainder of the week, where they found themselves enveloped in another blinding snow storm. Thoughts of record-breaking crowds vanished as the snow continued to fall. But, much to the surprise of the management of the Grand Opera House at Anderson, where the picture was showing, records proved that the film had broken box-office records for the theatre, due to the interest caused by the unlooked for Whangdoodle band as well as "A Day in Dixie."

Illustrating What a "Feature Really Is

AN illustration of how times change and it the methods of advertising pictures what constitutes the "feature" is contained glance at the accompanying photograph of lobby display used by the Liberty theatre of C cil Bluffs, Iowa, for Harold Lloyd's "Bun into Broadway."

The Liberty played up the comedy portio the bill in every bit of advertising used fo whole program during the period "Bun Into Broadway" was playing. One of the effective parts of this campaign was the lobby play. To build it, the Liberty did not hav draw heavily on the bank account. All that required was some compo board, a few strip wood, three cut-outs from one sheets, four h and a sign painter's time for perhaps an Probably the whole cost did not exceed ten dc but what was the result? People who w otherwise pass the Liberty theatre with nev glance to see what pictures were being shown attracted by the unusual sight and noted that old Lloyd in a certain comedy was advertised attracting the attention of the public is first to selling them tickets for your show.

There may be those who argue that billi two-reel comedy above the so-called featu poor showmanship. On that point we will argue since it is our province here to tell what others do but for these doubters we ap the opinion of manager Ben Harding who st "I have come to the conclusion that the fe on a bill is that which the most of my pa consider worth seeing. It might be a one-reel might be strip from a news weekly, it mig something else but whatever it is I am goin advertise it. I thought the Lloyd Comedy w more interest to my public than the five-reel ture so I played it up and I have no reason the result to change my mind."

"The Fortune Hunter"

Work is pleasure if love fills the heart of the worker, according to Earle Williams. In "The Fortune Hunter" he puts into practice his ideas of making work a pleasure. He is assisted to a marked degree by Jean Paige, who smiles into his eyes while the youth dispenses soda. Who wouldn't like to be a soda clerk? You'll die laughing when you see "Blinky" down the "plain" soda. It is one of the knockout scenes in the superfeature made from the stage play of the same name that had us roaring a few years ago.

Live News from the Producers

Announces Katherine MacDonald Series

Announcement is made this week by Attractions Distributing Corporation of the stories that will be screened as starring vehicles for Katherine MacDonald as the second series of three releases through National Exhibitors' Circuit.

The first of the new series, following "The Turning Point," third of the first series, will be an adaptation of "The Guests of Hercules," by Mrs. A. M. Williamson, who, in collaboration with C. N. Williamson, her husband, has long been in the forefront of American literary ranks.

The second production will be an adaptation of "Curtain," a dramatic story of domestic life written by Rita Weiman and published in a recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post. Miss Weiman will go from New York to the Katherine MacDonald studios in Los Angeles to write the continuity.

The third release in the second series will be a screen version of "The Notorious Miss Lisle," from the book by Mrs. Bailey Reynolds. The continuity for this is now being written by the members of the scenarios department at the MacDonald studios. It is a drama of mystery and adventure.

Hodkinson Announces Promotions

Rudolph Berger, Hodkinson manager in Washington, has been promoted to the management of the Philadelphia Hodkinson office. J. J. Milstein, manager of the Hodkinson interests in Omaha, has been promoted to the management of the Hodkinson Washington, D. C. interests. G. H. Quigley has been made Hodkinson manager in Buffalo.

George K. Rolands, president and general manager of Titan Attractions, Inc.

To Present "The Fortune Teller"

"THE Fortune Teller,", the A. H. Woods dramatic production which played a record run in New York City will shortly be given to the screen world by Robertson-Cole as an "extra special." This elaborate film production directed by Albert Capellani was obtained by Robertson-Cole this week.

Marjorie Rambeau acts the leading role in this film masterpiece and is supported by a cast of stage and screen artists. The acting of this star in "The Fortune Teller" is considered by Robertson-Cole as the greatest ever accomplished by any actress.

"'The Fortune Teller' is without doubt the most elaborate and best staged film ever secured by Robertson-Cole" said A. S. Kirkpatrick, vice-president and general manager of the Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation. "The picture is a dramatic setting of a play of the same name which had a continued run not only in New York City but in every large city in the United States.

"In this production de luxe, Albert Capellani outdid himself. It is true, he had a marvelous story to work with and a star who has been proven as one of the best drawing cards, both on the legitimate stage and on the silver sheet, but on the other hand, his artistic touches together with the elaborate scenes and dramatic settings, has stamped this as the best production ever given to the motion picture world.

Albert Capellani, veteran director, whose latest production is "The Fortune Teller" staring Marjorie Rambeau and a Robertson-Cole Special.

"When we say that it is the greatest picture Robertson-Cole has ever been fortunate enough to release, we are not boasting—we want th

Metro Plans Expansion in Ea

Important Announcement Follows the Return of Metro Chief

EXPANSION plans of great magnitude, involving among other things the immediate construction of new studios in the East and enlargement of its plant on the West coast, are announced by Metro Pictures Corporation with the return of its president, Richard A. Rowland, from California to New York.

Additions and improvements to the Metro studios in Hollywood, already under way, will call for the expenditure of a quarter of a million dollars. The proposed erection of a complete production plant in the neighborhood of New York will, of course, run to a figure far in excess of the amount spent in the West, it is stated.

Metro further announces that its scenario department is to be trebled in size and made more imposing in personnel by the acquisition of several playwrights of national reputation. Moreover, the company is about to add a number of successful stage plays and noteworthy novels to the material it has acquired for screen production.

New stars also are to be added to Metro's galaxy in the very near future; so that viewed from every angle, the recent western trip of the organization's president, in company with Marcus Loew, head of Loew's Inc., has been fruitful of large results and is fraught with promise of big events to come.

Returning from Los Angeles with Mr. Rowland was Maxwell Karger, Director General for Metro and Screen Classics, Inc. Mr. Karger, who for more than a year had been in sole charge of all production activities on the West Coast, is now permanently located in New York. He will reopen Metro's present New York studios, in Sixty-first street just off Columbus Circle, within the ensuing fortnight as supervisor of several important screen productions.

Three or four sites are now under consideration for the new studios to be erected near New York. Selection of one has not as yet been definitely decided upon. The choice arrived at will be made public as soon as full title is acquired, and building work will start immediately thereafter. Metro officials make it known, however, that parcels of land on Long Island and also in New York State, along the Hudson, have been looked over and are being compared with a view to greater accessibility an roundings. Metro's new easte
dios, it is announced, will be th

Realart to Get Miller Productions

CHARLES MILLER'S productions have been acquired by Realart. Mr. Miller is to make a series of out-of-doors pictures based on the works of Robert W. Service. The news of the deal, concluded with Mayflower Photoplay Corporation by President Morris Kohn, of Realart, was announced last week. Mr. Miller is already at work, near the Canadian border in New York State, on his first Mayflower production, further announcement of which will soon be forthcoming.

In concluding negotiations with Mayflower for the release of these out-of-door photoplays, President Kohn declared that Director Miller will bring to the screen a product, every detail of which, even the Robert W. Service stories themselves, will be of his own choosing.

"The new contracts entered into by Charles Miller with Mayflower Photoplay Corporation, mark the approach to an ideal in the motion picture industry," said Mr. Kohn in a statement concerning the new Realart acquisition. "The creation of a picture play is the business of an artist, and with complete freedom to follow his own inspirations, unhampered by any considerations whatsoever, Mr. Miller is achieving a dream that has been the aim of a lifetime devoted to raising the standard of this art. He brings to Realart the experience of many years as a director of motion pictures, as an actor and stage manager and as a student of film technique in all its branches.

"We all know Mr. Miller can make pictures which have big box-office value. 'The Flame of the Yukon,' not only proves this, but establishes him as the foremost interpreter of dreams of the great out-of-doors. Exhibitors will recall 'The Ghost of Yesterday,' 'By Right of Purchase' and 'The Sawdust Ring' as among other successful Miller productions—and these are only a few titles which come to mind at the moment.

Anna Q. Millson, who has the feminine leading role in Allan Dwan's Realart picture, "The Luck of the Irish"

"Big things may be expected from Mr. Miller. He has a wealth of splendid picture ideas. Realart is gratified to be in a position to offer them to the public. As the names of Cohan and Belasco assure the worth of a stage play, so, too, do the signature to a film of such directors as Charles Miller mean definite quality and definite box-office revenue."

In a statement recently issued, Mr. Miller declared:

"I thought of photoplays based upon well-conceived, probable stories, the plot motivated by character-drawing of real people, and rich with romance, settings and suspense. At Inceville I realized how the fate of a picture depended on its director. As an artist's success depends upon the thorough technical knowledge of his art, plus imagination, so depends the success of a motion picture director upon the same qualifications.

"From the day I directed my first picture, that conception of my new profession has emphasized itself more and more to me. Friends say that in the creation of my picture I have also created 'stars'—four of them women, two men—artists whose names are now a by-word with motion picture audiences. I have directed productions based on all sorts of stories, from delicate comedies to grim red-blood tales of the North. To-day I have my own company; the chance to realize my ambition is here.

"I am interested in producing pictures which credit the audience with intelligence. Conveyance of the thought of the situation of the story to the mind of the audience by a look instead of the spoken word is the secret for making motion pictures that will be remembered. To succeed in the motion pictures it is as anything else. You cannot make a success without effort. There is no easy road. As you acquired knowledge of your work so do you earn."

New Serial Announced by Pathe

"Trailed by Three" to Star Stuart Holmes and Frankie Mann

PATHE announces that "Trailed by Three," the fifteen episode serial produced by Arthur F. Beck, in which Stuart Holmes and Frankie Mann are co-starred, has been chosen to follow "The Adventures of Ruth" on the program of Pathe Serial offerings, and will be released April 4.

The story and scenario are by Charles Turner Dazey, author of the famous stage success, "In Old Kentucky," and numerous screen successes, among them "Wolf Lowry," starring William S. Hart; and the Douglas Fairbanks feature, "Manhattan Madness."

The main line of action developing through the fifteen chapters of "Trailed by Three," centres about a priceless rope of pearls which represents the ransom of a tribe of South Sea Islanders from a group of villains practicing oppressions and cruelties of the typically serialesque character. The group is made up of three men, who keep diligently on the trail, hence the title.

The characters in the play are involved in a series of adventurès which carry them from New York, where the action starts, to the Arizona desert, San Francisco's Chinatown, an island in the South Pacific, and thence to the bizarre and colorful atmosphere of India's sunny clime.

Perry Vekroff directed the production. "Trailed by Three" was produced at the Crystal Studios in New York City. The script presented the director with opportunities for the accomplishment of striking scenic effects. The many elaborate settings called for by the scenario entailed a big outlay of money, and the serial is said to have been produced on a very pretentious plan.

Stuart Holmes is to have one of the parts for which he is famous on the screen. He will appear as the leader of the villainous group whose activities are keyed to no scruples other than to attain their vicious ambitions and harrass to the last degree the heroic characters.

The supporting cast includes such well-known actors as John Webb Dillion, Wilfred Lytell, William Welch and Ethel Kay. Important parts are played by the well-known Chinese actor, Sam Kim and an Oriental child prodigy of eleven summers, and as many winters whose name is May Toy.

Pathe has completed plans for an extensive advertising and exploitation campaign. "Trailed by Three" is to publicize on the same huge scale accorded every Pathe serial. It is announced that "Trailed by Three" is a serial lending itself particularly well to novel exploitation ideas, and Pathe promises many suggestions and plans that will aid the exhibitor.

First of Tarkington's Stories Is Filmed

Capturing the spirit of boyhood for the film series of Booth Tarkington's "Edgar" stories is said to have been achieved with great success by Director E. Mason Hopper at the Culver City studios of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. The first film has been taken, cut and edited and given the title "Edgar and the Teacher's Pet."

In the comedies are the following characters:

Johnny Jones as Edgar Pomeroy, Arthur H. Litke as Edgar's family doctor, Ellison Manners as Edgar's school teacher; John Cossar as Mr. Pomeroy; Virginia Madison as Mrs. Pomeroy; Kenneth Earl as Charles Pomeroy; Marie Dunn as Betty Pomeroy; Fred Moore as Reverend Shelby; Buddy Messenger as Freddy Littlefield; Lucille Ricksen as Alice Littlefield; Nick Cogley as Mr. Littlefield; and Cordelia Callahan as Mrs. Littlefield.

Cast for Billie Burke's Coming Vehicle

John S. Robertson's announcement of the cast for "Away Goes Prudence," the original story by Josephine Lovett which Billie Burke is working on for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, includes a number of names familiar to the stage and screen.

Percy Marmont, the well-known English actor, appears for the first time as Miss Burke's leading man. Prudence's father, Mr. Thorne, is played by Charles Lane. Mrs. Thorne is being characterized by Maude Turner Gordon. Dorothy Walters has the comical part of the washerwoman, Mrs. Ryan. In the part of the "tough guy," Mike, is Bradley Barker. Albert Hackett is cast as Jimmie Ryan. George Stevens and Walter James are also in the cast.

Neal Burns Signs with National Film Again

Neal Burns, who has been starring in a series of Capitol comedies with the National Film Corporation of America, put his signature to a contract Monday, February ninth, which gives the National a right to Burns' services for another year, with a five years' option to continue the contract now in force.

Mark Goldaine, who has been directing Neal Burns since he joined the National staff, will continue to handle the young comedian, who will be supported by Lucille Rubey.

Robertson-ColeGetsWestern

Will Distribute " The Third Woman," a Good Story with Striking Settings

ROBERTSON-COLE announces it will release "The Third Woman," a superior picture with an all star cast. In obtaining this picture for distribution Robertson-Cole executives believe that they have put their name to one of the greatest stories of the plains which has ever been put on the screen.

In connection with its acquisition of " The Third Woman," Robertson-Cole has issued the following statement:

" ' The Third Woman ' is a story that is bound to please. Its immense sets, taken at considerable expense, together with the society theme and the exciting moments of the fashion drama compel recognition of the elaborate feature. Clothes a year ahead of the times, linked with the modes of men and women of the day will no doubt break records for every exhibitor who books this production.

" ' The Third Woman ' is an intense study of the question of racial difference along an angle which has not been touched before. J. Grubb Alexander wrote the continuity from the story by Raymond L. Schrock, and the picture was directed by Charles Swickard. While the greater part of the action is laid in Arizona, the opening is in the East, where scenes are laid in a number of homes of the wealthier class.

" Possibly the greatest artistic triumph of the picture is the great series of scenes which have for their background a most picturesque Pueblo village in which the everyday life of the tribe is logically connected with the story."

Neilan to Go to Hollywood

Has Negotiated with John Jasper for Exclusive Use of One of Big Stages

MARSHALL NEILAN, whose initial independent production, " The River's End," by James Oliver Curwood, is soon to have its first showing in every large city of the United States, has just completed a deal with John Jasper, manager of the Hollywood Studios, Inc., on Santa Monica Boulevard, which provides that Mr. Neilan shall have the exclusive use of one of the big stages for a period of six months at the end of which time it is expected the new Neilan studios will be ready for occupancy. This puts at an end the rumor that the director-producer would soon come East to produce.

The Neilan organization will take over one entire unit and the young producer is enthusiastic over the prospects of filming his pictures for the next six months without any delays which handicapped him in the past because of the lack of available studio space. When Mr. Neilan organized his own company last year he obtained a short time lease on the Lois Weber studio where the interior scenes of " The River's End," his current release, were filmed. When these were completed he moved his company to temporary headquarters at 1723 Allesandro street. This, however, was only a business office and when he started work on his second picture he rented the stage from the Douglas Fairbanks Company while that star remained idle for a few weeks.

Moving from one studio to another proved decidedly inconvenient and as soon as space was made available at the Hollywood Studios by the vacating of the Sydney Chaplin Company, Neilan negotiated with Jasper, and the deal was quickly made.

Finishing Universal Special

Priscilla Dean Production Being Put Through Final Stages at Fort Lee

"THE Virgin of Stamboul," the Priscilla Dean super-production which Universal officials claim cost $500,000 to produce, is being put through the final stages of work at the Fort Lee laboratories.

Elaborate posters are in the course of preparation for the big picture and plans are under way to back this with a fitting exploitation campaign. According to Universal, several very prominent artists have been engaged to prepare the display sheets and lobby cards for the production, and everything connected with it will be of the highest artistic calibre.

Billboard advertising has been properly cared for in the preparation of three one-sheets, three three-sheets, one six, two twenty-fours, two cards and two half-sheets. The Turkish atmosphere in which the picture abounds is the theme of all the poster work.

An unusual set of twenty-four hand-colored photos, will add attractiveness to the lobby displays of theatres booking the production, says Universal. Lantern slides for advance announcements are already available. A big press book has been prepared with some unordinary newspaper cuts and very effective publicity matter.

Universal officials have not as yet announced the release date of " The Virgin of Stamboul " but they say it will be very early this spring. A good thing is worth waiting for, and they say that Priscilla Dean's latest picture is the best thing Universal has ever produced.

"The Harvest Moon" is Being Edited

The final scenes of the Deitrich-Beck production, "The Harvest Moon," starring Doris Kenyon, for Hodkinson release, were completed at the Leah Baird Studios in Cliffside, N. J., last week. J. Searle Dawley, who directed the production, and Theodore C. Deitrich are now cutting, editing and titling the picture.

A strong cast supports Miss Kenyon in the production. Among the principals are Wilfred Lytell, George A. Lessey, Earl Schenck, Peter Lang, Marie Shotwell, Stuart Robson, Grace Barton, Marcia Harris, Mrs. E. M. Holland, Fred Radcliffe, E. H. Leffler, Ellen Olson, Daniel Pennell and Fred Kallgren.

Conference of Universal Officials on Coast

P. A. Powers, treasurer, and John Brownell, scenario editor of Universal, have left for Universal City where they will confer with West Coast officials upon many topics of immediate importance.

Mr. Powers will carefully survey the situation at the Universal studios, and it is expected that some very interesting announcements will be the result of his trip.

Mr. Brownell, it is understood, will stay on the coast for an indefinite period, during which time he will plan for closer co-operation between the members of his staff and the directors.

Arrow Releases "The Paper Hanger"

The second release of the Hank Mann series is "The Paper Hanger" and will be released this week. It is said that "The Paper Hanger" is the best two-reel comedy ever released on the independent state right market. As evidence of the great popularity of the Hank Mann Comedies, Arrow reports that nearly every territory in the United States has been sold on these two-reel comedies.

Ray to Star in Cohan's Big Hit

"FORTY-FIVE MINUTES FROM BROADWAY", the famous George M. Cohan play that made a name and a fortune for its producer, has been purchased by Arthur S. Kane as the vehicle for Charles Ray's initial First National attraction.

Negotiations were concluded last week by the producing company for the screen rights to the famous stage success, and Ray will begin work on his first independent film, as soon as he returns from a short vacation in the California hills.

"Charles Ray is due for a home run", was the comment of President Kane following the announcement of Ray's first production for First National distribution. "If there's a story that better fits Ray's lovable and appealing personality than the tale that George M. Cohan made famous up and down the country, we have given up hope of coming across it.

"Forty-five Minutes from Broadway" is as bright as gold dollars fresh from the mint. It simply sparkles, and there isn't any doubt that if the play was a classic on the stage, it's going to be immortal on the screen. Ray has been seeking just such an opportunity for a long time, to put a national favorite of this type on the screen, and he feels that he has ample room with this story to do something really big and lasting.

"Just mention this piece of news to the average picture fan: Charlie Ray in 'Forty-five Minutes from Broadway' and see the result. Ray is going to create a screen character that will live. This First National picture will make photoplay history."

Charles Ray and his old-time director, Jerry Storm, who will continue in association with Mr. Ray in producing Ray pictures for First National distribution

One hundred thousand dollars was the profit to the producers of the George M. Cohan play in the first nine months, alone, of a spectacular stage career that extended over five seasons and made it an immediate necessity to send out road companies to the Western, Central and Eastern parts of the country. The Cohan stage production, which played a solid year at the New Amsterdam Theatre in New York, was credited with being one of the biggest money makers in recent theatrical history, the unusual attraction being attributed to the rough and ready humanness of the character who gave to a humorous story, tears and laughter and all the genuine situations that go to make up real life.

The additional value that comes with Charles Ray's determination to do the story adequately for the screen makes the news of the production of strong interest to picture patronage everywhere. The new sponsors of Ray's work declare that he not only agrees with their desire to see him continue in the winning screen character with which the industry has come to associate his name, but he is also anxious to take advantage of the added benefits of a well-known story vehicle, such as the forthcoming First National picture will be.

The selection of George M. Cohan's play for Ray's first offering under his new affiliations is causing favorable comment as being an especially fine vehicle for the star's honest-to-goodness personality. Observers of Cohan's handiwork assert that the playwright made characters with the true imprint of nature, and that even though he touches life with a rough hand, his grasp is one of keen observation and his fidelity to humanity with all its lovable contradictions is readily distinguished.

Ray will begin work on his productions for First National release in the latter part of the month, when he has returned from the vacation that was declared necessary by strenuous production activities during the past year. Construction is proceeding rapidly on the remodelled Fleming Street studios which will house the Ray productions and "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway" will be made there under the new arrangements.

United Artists Get "Romance"

Will Distribute this Picture Which Stars Doris Keane

EXCELLENT progress has been made on the screen production of "Romance," Edward Sheldon's most famous story, for United Artists Corporation, in which Doris Keane plays the leading role. The release date of the picture will be announced shortly.

"Romance" is one of the most exceptional stories that has ever appeared on the stage and is filled to overflowing with the emotional glamour of life, in which on the speaking stage, Miss Keane appeared more than 3000 times, in New York, Chicago, Boston and London, and which has had continuous runs in those cities for more than five years.

The story is that of the romance of a famous grand opera singer and a young clergyman, who despite their different callings are drawn together by a profound and sincere love. The woman has drained the cup of life so deeply, that her marriage to the minister is impossible, yet in the hour of trial, she rises to sublime heights of self-denial, proving herself stronger than the man.

The charm of "Romance" has proven irresistible on the stage. Its sentiment is delightful and the acting of Miss Keane most admirable, for it is a quaint story of sentiment, love and power—one that grips at the heart-strings of its every audience.

As Mme. Cavallini, the fascinating prima donna heroine, Miss Keane has unlimited opportunities to give vent to her inimitable qualifications as the foremost of America's emotional actresses of the day. Her impersonation of the difficult role on the stage still is conceded to be one of the most brilliant acting achievements of the past decade.

United Artists are sparing no time and expense to make this picture a remarkable production, so that it will have no others to compare with it in artistry of detail and dramatic action. It will vividly portray the life of New York's society during its most interesting period and the most minute care is being taken to faithfully represent its every well-known detail, as the plot of the story confines much of its action to the well-known section of New York's Greenwich village, which has necessitated the erection of exceptional settings.

Chet Withey is directing the production for United Artists. Mr. Withey has won for himself a wide reputation during the past few years in all fields of the industry, having personally directed many successes, and he has given much time to the preparation of this work.

The owners of the play had been actually pestered for offers for over two years, for the screen rights of this Sheldon play; they considered but a few, until some few months ago, when negotiations were opened with United Artists Corporation for the purchase of the production, and at the same time for the services of Miss Keane, who was to appear in the leading role of the production, the same as she has done on the stage during the past five years of its success.

"Blind Youth" Is Now Being Assembled

"Blind Youth," the second National Picture Theatres production, has been cut and is now being assembled according to Harry Rapf, West Coast production manager for the Selznick Enterprises. This story was taken from the play by Lou Tellegen and Willard Mack. The screen version was directed by Edward Sloman.

Fox Manager Goes to Europe

Will Visit All Branch Offices of the Fox Organization in European Cities

ON his annual European trip in behalf of the expanded activities of Fox Film Corporation, Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of the company, sailed on the liner Adriatic on Saturday, February 14.

Mr. Sheehan will make his first stop in London, where he will remain several days and will be present at the opening of the new Fox Film building at 13 Burnham street in that city. It was formerly occupied as headquarters for the Canadian army, and has been re-modeled to make room for the larger film activities—which will include executive offices, shipping and poster departments, film vaults, projection rooms and equipment for the other departments.

After his brief stay in London, Mr. Sheehan will go to Copenhagen, making his headquarters at the Fox office there; thence he will proceed to Berlin, Vienna, Venice, Rome, Milan, Paris and Brussels, according to his present itinerary. In Paris he will join Abraham Carlos at 24 Boulevard des Italiens, the French headquarters of Fox Film Corporation, over which Mr. Carlos presides.

Mr. Sheehan, while abroad will arrange for the installation of two large film printing plants—one in England to handle the output for the market of Great Britain, the other in Paris to care for the demands of the continental business.

The foreign activities of Fox Film Corporation have grown to such proportions that there now is a Fox branch in every leading city of Europe as well as in all the countries of the Orient, Australasia and South America. A system of operation has been inaugurated whereby the exhibitor is in direct contact with a Fox manager precisely as in the United States and this has resulted in a cordial relationship which has increased still further the Fox business in the outside markets.

Mayer-Chaplin Picture Released March 2nd

The negative of "The Inferior Sex," Mildred Harris Chaplin's first Mayer-made First National Attraction, is now in Chicago, where prints are being made at Rothackers for the release date, March 2nd.

In the past it has been Mr. Mayer's policy to send a sample print of his productions to New York, where it was subject to such changes in titling and assembling as his eastern organization might suggest. With his present facilities in his new Los Angeles studios this procedure is no longer necessary.

Samuel Goldwyn Dined by Business Men

Selznick Moves to New Plant

Studio Staff is Now Located in Old Biograph Building in Bronx Borough

ANNOUNCEMENT of the moving to new quarters of the Selznick Eastern studios headquarters was made this week. The staff, headed by Myron Selznick and Frank J. Hampton, studio manager, are now located in the former Biograph building near Crotona Park, the Bronx. The move was made with a view of increasing the efficiency of the studio staff which has recently been augmented with several capable members. In the new headquarters there will be room to accommodate not only the present staff but the larger staff which Mr. Selznick is now contemplating in assembling.

The former headquarters at the Fort Lee studios became too small for the staff and in addition the daily trips across the Hudson river caused a delay at times which will be overcome in the new location. The address of the new headquarters is 807 East 107th street. The entire upper floor which was at one time used by the Fox company is now utilized by Myron Selznick and his staff.

Some idea of the efficiency of the Selznick staff may be determined by the fact that the moving of all of the furniture and supplies from Fort Lee was accomplished during the terriffic snow storm which visited New York last week. Although one of the worst tie-ups in the history of Manhattan, the studio workers set out to move—and did.

Universal City Keeps Very Busy

FIVE new feature productions have been started at Universal City within the past few weeks, and it is said that a cast of unusual quality has been engaged for each of them. Universal officials claim that more prominent players of the screen have appeared on the payroll of recent weeks than at any other studio on the Pacific Coast.

Frank Mayo is starring in "The Girl in Number Twenty-nine," a photoplay based on Elizabeth Jordan's popular novel, "The Girl in the Mirror." He is supported by Claire Anderson, Elinor Faire, Harry Hilliard, Ray Ripley, Ruth Royce, Arthur Hoyt, Robert Bolder and Bull Montana. Jack Ford is directing this production.

Edith Roberts is starred, supported by Katherine Kirkham, Harold Miller, Rudolph Christians, Stanhope Wheatcroft, Ogden Crane, Leonard Clapham, Virginia Ware, Henry Woodward and Leota Lorraine, in the comedy-drama, "The Daring Duchess," which is being directed by Harry Franklin.

Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran are proceeding with their first five-reel comedy feature, "Everything But the Truth," from the magazine story by Edgar Franklin. Their support includes Anne Cornwall and Katherine Lewis.

Harry Carey has a strong cast surrounding him in his current production, "Bullet Proof," based on John Frederick's story, "Luck," which is being directed by Lynn Reynolds. The company includes Robert McKim, Kathleen O'Connor, Beatrice Burnham, J. Farrell MacDonald, Charles Le Moyne, Will Ryno, Bob McKenzie, Joe Harris, Fred Gamble and Captain Anderson.

In her new feature begun this week, "A Tokio Siren," Tsuru Aoki, Universal's Japanese star, is supported by Jack Livingston, Arthur Jasmine, Eugenie Ford, Toyo Fujita, Caro Kino, Frederick Vroom and Elinor Hancock. Norman Dawn is supervising the production.

A good looking and capable young juvenile is Jack Perrin, who is now appearing in Universal's "The Lion Man"

In Priscilla Dean's production, "The Virgin of Stamboul," under Tod Browning's direction, Wheeler Oakman and Wallace Beery were cast in the important male roles. In "Burnt Wings," just finished at Universal City under the guidance of Christy Cabanne, appeared Frank Mayo, Josephine Hill, Betty Blythe and Rudolph Christians.

In Von Stroheim's production, "The Devil's Passkey," now in the cutting, appeared Clyde Fillmore, Una Thevelyn, Sam De Grasse, Maude George, Mae Busch and Leo White. In Dorothy Phillips' latest feature, "Ambition," directed by Allen Holubar, and recently filmed at the Universal Studios, Robert Andersen, Rudolph Valentine, Frank Elliott, Emily Chichester and Elinor Fields made up the strong supporting cast.

In Mary MacLaren's recent production, "The Forged Bride," directed by Douglas Gerrard, Barney Sherry, Dagmar Godowsky and Thomas Jefferson appeared, while Edward Peil and Bonnie Hill are seen in prominent roles in her newest feature, "The Road to Divorce," directed by Philip Rosen.

Reeves Eason has begun work on an action Western starring Hoot Gibson, and entitled "The Rattler's Kiss." Prominent in the case are Mildred Moore, George Field, Toto Du Crow, Charles Newton and Breezy Eason.

Circuits Book Louise Glaum Production

J. Parker Read, Jr.'s Louise Glaum production, "The Lone Wolf's Daughter," the powerful W. W. Hodkinson release, has been contracted for immediate presentation for the entire Mastbaum and Nirdlinger chain of theatres in the city of Philadelphia under contracts made by the Stanley Booking Company.

Another big organization which contracted for the Louise Glaum production is the Harry Koplar chain of theatres in St. Louis, "The Lone Wolf's Daughter" being contracted for early presentation at eleven Koplar houses, all of which enjoyed profitable runs on "Sahara" in the early fall.

Ben Wilson Purchases Los Angeles Studio

Ben Wilson, who is producing his second serial production, "The Screaming Shadow," for release to Hallmark Pictures Corp., purchased this week the studio located on San Monica Blvd., Los Angeles, from the Faust Estate. The studio has been occupied by the Bull's Eye Comedy Company.

William Farnum Begins on "The Orphan"

William Farnum and a company of one hundred has begun work at Palm Springs on "The Orphan" from the pen of Clarence E. Mulford. With a view to absolute authenticity of setting, an area of many miles around Los Angeles was canvassed painstakingly to find the right location. T. Gordon Edwards is directing.

Big Leads in "Honey Bee"

Well-Known Theatrical Figures Cast for Appearance in "The Honey Bee"

WHEN the casting director of the American Film Company was given the scenario for Samuel Merwin's novel, "The Honey Bee," several notables both inside and outside the world of film were brought together. First, the star, Madame Marguerita Sylvia, the Belgian diva of world wide operatic fame; Thomas Holding, an English actor, a dark six-footer of athletic build, who has carried the leading roles in many plays on the legitimate stage; Nigel Barrie, recently discharged from the Royal Flying Corps of the British Army, and Albert Ray, the New Yorker, who made his advent on the stage at the age of seven years.

Madame Sylva, at the tender age of fourteen, arrived in this country with the late Sir Herbert Tree. Within a few years she had won such distinction and success that she became the star of the Marguerita Sylva Comic Opera Company. After returning to Europe she began her operatic career and under Hammerstein's direction created something of a sensation in "Carmen." She sang "Carmen" ten times in five weeks, something that had never before been attempted in grand opera.

Thomas Holding began his career in London, and then appeared in New York as Billie Burke's leading man in "Love Watches," and with Maxine Elliott in three of her plays. Following two years for Klaw & Erlanger in "Ben Hur," Mr. Holding returned to London for a vacation, where Hugh Ford, of Famous Players, asked him to go into pictures. His first appearance on the screen was as leading man for Pauline Frederick in "The Eternal City," filmed in Rome.

"The Flame of Hellgate," with Beatriz Michelena, is Announced for Release

Beatriz Michelena star of "The Flame of Hellgate" released by Robertson-Cole.

"THE Flame of Hellgate," starring Beatriz Michelena, is the current Robertson-Cole release. This picture which gives the former operatic singer a chance to display her real dramatic ability was written by Earle Snell and directed by George E. Middleton and is heralded by Robertson-Cole as the best of the Michelena series.

"The Heart of Juanita" the last Michelena release for Robertson-Cole was a picture that made good with exhibitors, and it is declared by Robertson-Cole that the current production excels by far her great work in the emotional role of the "girl of the dance hall."

Action is said to be the byword in her next release. Michelena is seen as the head of a band of outlaws. How she rides and the manner in which she copes with the daring exploits of the great outdoors is portrayed in vivid form in "The Flame of Hellgate." Robertson-Cole officials believe that the name of the picture and the star linked with Middleton's name as a director will put the production over in big style.

Miss Michelena is supported in "The Flame of Hellgate" by a strong cast. The plotting domineering cattle king is made very real by Albert Morrison; Clarence Arper is the bigoted and cowardly reactionary sheriff; D. Mitsoras the half-breed gun-man, and William Pike the regenerated man who plays opposite Michelena. Other parts are played by Cliff Thompson, Katherine Angus, and Jeff Williams.

Fourth in Series of Artco Features for Hodkinson Release Being Edited

LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE'S "Cynthia-of-the-Minute," Leah Baird's fourth in her series of Artco productions for W. W. Hodkinson distribution was completed this week at the Leah Baird Studios, where it is now in the cutting stage under the supervision of Director Perry Vekroff.

The final scenes were taken at the Cliffside, N. J., Studios, following the return of Miss Baird and her company from Tampa, Fla. Not all of the tense situations were enacted in the balmy Southland, however, much of the shipboard action having been taken aboard the former German liner, Kron Prinz Wilhelm, in the Hudson River off Spuyten Duyvil, before the vessel was turned oved to the Cunard Line.

Arthur F. Beck, Miss Baird's producer, is firm in the opinion that "Cynthia-of-the-Minute" is unquestionably the noted emotional artist's greatest screen achievement, adding that "Miss Baird's world of admirers will find her a positive revelation in the role of Cynthia, a character that glorifies the star as has no other part she has essayed and one that permits her to do everything that this beautiful talented player does better than any other feminine screen luminary before the public today."

Hugh Thompson is Miss Baird's leading man. To Burr McIntosh was assigned one of the outstanding roles, and his work in "Cynthia-of-the-Minute" ranks with his stellar performances in the big stage successes, "Trilby" and "The Man of the Hour." Others who support the star are: Alexander Gaden, "The Capitol," Ruby Hoffman, Matilda Brundage, illiam Welsh and John Webb Dillion.

Ready for Feature's Premier

National Film Reports "The Kentucky Colonel" Ready for New York Opening

THE first of the National Film Corporation series of All-American features, Opie Read's "The Kentucky Colonel," is ready for its premier New York showing. This production took five months to film at an outlay of over $150,000. It was directed by William A. Seiter, from the screen version by L. V. Jefferson. "The Kentucky Colonel" all-artist cast includes Joseph J. Dowling, who played the part of the Healer in George Loane Tucker's "The Miracle Man;" Francis McDonald, who shared high honors with Henry Walthall in "The Confession;" Elinor Field, star of "Hearts and Masks;" Lloyd Bacon, Fred Kohler, Cora Drew, Jill Woodward, Frederic Vroom, Ed Brady, Gordon Griffith, Thelma Salter and others.

According to I. Bernstein, National's production manager, "The Kentucky Colonel" leaves nothing to be desired in its treatment of the immortal characters of the novel.

Drama of action and heart interest is to be found in the picturization of Augu Thomas' play, "The Harvest Moon." Starred is Doris Kenyon and Wilfred Ly Release is through Hodkinson

Curwood Forms Compan

Cooperation Between Author and His Director Keynote of New Combination

FOLLOWING close after the success of his first personally produced super-feature, "Back to God's Country," which was backed by a Canadian company formed by Ernest Shipman, James Oliver Curwood has formed the James Oliver Curwood Productions, Incorporated, under which corporation his future personally produced super-features taken from his successful novels of the great outdoors will be filmed. Mr. Curwood has associated with him David M. Hartford, as director, and Ernest Shipman, who will be in charge of the publicity and sales departments, with headquarters in New York.

"Egotism is the deadliest enemy a man can have," says Mr. Curwood. "In other words, big-head—and jealousy. Any man who says that two heads—each skilled in its profession—are not better than one must be an idiot. Just that minute a director gets bloated up with his own importance you can make up your mind he is going down-hill—and will toboggan fast. And the same holds true of author. In Hartford I have foun director who is frank in concedin doesn't know it all. And I bel Hartford will tell you he has fo the same trait in me as an aut For that reason we make an i working team. Not until authors directors get together in this way, giving to the other the best tha in him, will the greatest results achieved in picture making.

"We do not expect to make m than two pictures a year, for i our determination to make the wood nature stories stand out on screen, like "Back to God's Count as the classics of the wilderness. fifteen years my life has been lar spent in the wild places, and am wild animals, and in all my stc wild animal life will play a big vital part. Predicts United's Expansio

Treasurer Back from Trip Says All Indications Point to Big Business

MILTON M. GOLDSMITH, Treasurer of United, has just returned from an extensive trip covering Western points and including Chicago, Milwaukee, Kansas City and Denver, in the interests of his organization.

On being interviewed, Mr. Goldsmith had this to say relative to conditions affecting the motion picture industry and United:

"I found all the United men in good fighting trim and imbued with the idea that United, within the next year, would be the greatest force in the industry. The sentiment among the exhibitors seemed to be that United would become the greatest booking circuit in the film business and they are all ready to accord it every possible support.

"In Chicago alone, twenty-five new theatres joined United within the last ten days. In Denver about twenty theatres joined.

Adolfi Will Direct Carpentier Film

Perfecting Details for Coming Vehicle of French Champion

JOHN G. ADOLFI, one of the foremost directors of screendom has been selected by Robertson-Cole to produce the Georges Carpentier Special for exclusive distribution by the Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation.

Adolfi signed his contract this week and is busily engaged with a staff of experienced scenario men to choose a story for the world war idol so that he can commence work on this special production as soon as he arrives in this country the latter part of March. In addition to the heavyweight champion of Europe, Deschamps, manager of the matinee idol and two sparring partners will arrive in New York City about March 22nd.

The public clamor for Carpentier's appearance on the silver sheet has spurred Robertson-Cole to even greater haste to supply the demand of the hundreds of first run exhibitors. At the present time, studios both in the east and on the coast are being canvassed so that no time will be lost when the "champ" arrives.

Mr. Adolfi already has more than a dozen stories to chose from and he has been given free hand by Robertson-Cole to select the vehicle by which Carpentier will be introduced to the American public. If the director of many successes should cast aside the scripts presented to him, plans will be made so that a new story can be written for the man of whom the world is talking.

Deschamps who guides the Frenchman both in the ring and in civil life this week cabled Robertson-Cole that the champ is more than anxious to get to America and to appear before the camera.

Jack Adolfi, one of our well known directors, who has been engaged by Robertson-Cole to direct Georges Carpentier Robertson-Cole executives together with Mr. Adolfi witnessed screen tests made of the French war hero this week and all agreed that from his appearance on the screen, one would never regard him as the logical contender to Dempsey's crown but a matinee idol whose looks and personality wins admirers by the thousands. He has a smile that is evident; the disposition that has made the French famous, a face full of character and a natural poise that is pleasing to the eagle eye of the camera.

At the present time, Carpentier is traveling Europe on a six-weeks' vaudeville and lecture tour. Present reports given to Robertson-Cole is to the effect that the Frenchman is about to become a benedict and that the future Mrs. Carpentier is no less a personage than one of the famous Parisian beauties. If screen tests made of the woman are as good as those of the French fighter, then it is very probable that Mr. Adolfi will cast her with Carpentier, says Robertson-Cole.

Pays $150,000 for A Studio Site

Kaufman Purchases Land Which Cost $200 in 1881

WHAT is said to be one ot the largest realty deals ever made by an individual in the motion picture industry was completed when Albert A. Kaufman, who recently joined the ranks of independent producers, purchased a piece of property comprising twenty acres of land in the heart of Los Angeles at a cost of $150,000.00 upon which he will erect one of the largest and most modernly equipped studios ever built.

The site selected by Mr. Kaufman is located on Sunset Boulevard and is one of the last tracts of land issued under government patent. It was originally purchased in 1881 by William Beesmyer for the sum of $200.00. It has a frontage of 650 feet on Sunset Boulevard, 1,400 feet on Wilton Place and 1,400 feet on Van Ness Avenue.

When interviewed in his rooms at the Alexandria Hotel, Mr. Kaufman voiced his belief that Los Angeles because of its remarkable climatic conditions is the logical and ideal place for the center of motion picture production. "I believe," he said "that. contrary to the opinion of one or two other producers, the next few years will witness an increased growth of the motion picture business here rather than a decline. There is no place in the United States where more suitable conditions prevail for producing pictures."

Mr. Kaufman by his long identification with the motion picture industry is well qualified to speak with authority. He was one of the original officers and organizers of the Famous Players film company and a director in the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation since its inception, from which company he recently resigned.

The studio, construction of which will begin in a short time, will cost approximately $500,000.00 and nothing will be left undone to make it a monument to the film industry in Los Angeles.

Mr. Kaufman is a brother-in-law of Adolph Zukor, head of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and has been associated wth Mr. Zukor in different enterprises for fifteen years. To his ability is attributed a large share of the success of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Mr. Kaufman is known to practically everyone connected with the motion picture business and his success as an independent producer is almost a foregone conclusion. Aside from his announcement that it is his intention to make four special productions in the coming year, he has not made known any fixed policy relative to the distribution of his pictures.

Besides the studio property Mr. Kaufman has also purchased the handsome Edwards' residence on the Southwest corner of Sixth street and Harvard Boulevard, in which he will establish himself as a permanent resident of Los Angeles as soon as his family arrives from the East.

"Give Credit Wherever Due"

Marshall Neilan Upholds Practice of Naming Cameraman and Art Directors

MUCH criticism has been made against the practice of crediting on the film and in advertising the names of the scenario editors, the cameramen, etc. A case in point happened recently, when a Chicago reviewer took exception to the fact that Mr. Neilan gave credit to various important members of his producing staff, on a current film hit. So many attacks on this practice have been printed that an expression from the other viewpoint is interesting.

Mr. Neilan made the following statement on the matter: "I do not agree with the writer of that article in the Chicago paper, nor with others who agree with him, that the average intelligent audience becomes bored when we acquaint the theatre patrons with the names of certain individuals who are responsible for some of the most essential features of an entertaining picture.

"To attain recognition in one's particular line of endeavor is the ambition of everyone, and photographers and art directors are no exception. But how are they going to accomplish this ambition if the producers deny them the credit they deserve? And would it not be unfair to the patrons of the theatre to mislead them into thinking that a single person,—the producer alone—is solely responsible for every individual feature of a production?

"The critics of to-day," continued Mr. Neilan, "dwell with emphasis on the quality of the continuity, photography and technical direction almost as much as they do on the direction and acting. The success or failure of a picture very often depends largely on the consensus of opinion of those published reviews so why then should not the names to whose skill this important work is entrusted, be brought to the attention of the public? The American people have always been willing to recognize ability whenever it is shown in any line and I know of no logical reason why it should except the specialists of picture producing."

L. Case Russell Now Directing Arrow Series

The last two of the "Blazed Trail" productions which are being released by the Arrow Film Corporation are being directed by L. Case Russell, who has replaced Joseph J. Famous Players Reports That Initial Showing in South Has Brought Praise

THAT the Paramount-Artcraft Special, "The Copperhead," is destined to achieve as big a box-office success in the Southern States is the conclusion of the Famous Players-Lasky executives, following a recent showing of the picture before a Southern audience.

In its report on the outcome of this showing, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation says:

"The showing was held recently at the State Confederate Home at Austin, Texas, where a large number of veterans of the Confederacy reside. Here, naturally, was afforded a test for the Civil War play quite as severe as it possibly could be subjected to anywhere in the Southland.

"Vigorous applause greeted many of the scenes of the picture, and after the showing was over a score of more of the veterans crowded forward to offer their personal congratulations t

Dwan Picture Wins Frisco

Realart Says "Soldiers of Fortune" Has Gained Much Favor on the Coast

ACCORDING to a report from the offices of the Realart Pictures Corporation, "Soldiers of Fortune," an Allan Dwan production, is making a hit with the motion-picture fans of San Francisco. The picture has been the object of some favorable comments in the local press.

Writing his opinion in the San Francisco Examiner, Buford G. Bennett said:

"Anyone who has read 'Soldiers of Fortune' is fortunate; anyone who sees 'Soldiers of Fortune' at the Imperial Theatre is fortunate; and anyone who has read the book and then sees the picture is doubly fortunate.

"The Richard Harding Davis novel translated to the silver sheet by Allan Dwan is all that has made the book popular, with also a keen visualization that makes the printed page weak in comparison."

In the San Francisco Chronicle, Thomas W. Baily gave his opinion in the following emphatic terms:

"Allan Dwan's first big prod

Samuel Goldwyn Makes Statement

Addresses Himself to the Exhibitors of Nation on Arrival in West

THE arrival of Samuel Goldwyn at the Goldwyn Studios at Culver City was the occasion of the issuance of a statement by the executive of the Goldwyn Pictures. The statement, which is addressed to the exhibitors of America, is as follows:

"Goldwyn will give the public, via the exhibitors, the best that motion picture production affords. That we mean what we say is no better evidenced than by the list of the pictures that Goldwyn has announced as part of their future program. The stage successes and big sensations have been combed and scanned with the utmost care and no obstacle has stood in the way of securing these great themes for screen presentation. Within the past few weeks we have purchased the motion picture rights to such features as 'The Great Lover', Clyde Fitch's 'Truth', 'A Tailor-Made Man', 'The Slim Princess', 'Stop Thief', 'Officer 666', 'Milestones', Hall Caine's 'The Christian' and numerous other novels and plays of equal repute. With reference to work on these I can only say that the Goldwyn Company will give each picture the minutest care in every detail of direction and casting.

"The Goldwyn Company stands for the integrity of the producer as well as the integrity of the exhibitor. Goldwyn is a producing organization. As such it is willing to help every exhbitor who shows the Goldwyn product. We want to help and improve the theatre of the progressive exhibitor. We want to help him get more business through better entertainment. And at the same time, we are going to be sure that there is a home for Goldwyn pictures where such homes do not exist today. We are, and shall be, no exhibitor's competitor.

"The day of bulk production is passed. Each Goldwyn picture is a unit and will be presented to the exhibitor as such. It will be exploited and advertised as a unit.

"We shall continue to produce in California and increase the scale of our production there. California is just as great a place for motion picture making as it ever was. Indeed, we have acquired twenty acres adjoining our Goldwyn City Studios as an evidence of our belief in this. But the East is vital to our needs no less than the West. While it provides that variety of scenery which is essential to variegated types of production it also, we feel, is not good to have too many production units working in one place. The separation of our production centers by the width of the entire United States is a psychological asset to a viewpoint that will not become warped, so we shall develop production facilities in the East.

"I feel proud to have allied to the production sources of my organization, the brain and inspired pen of Maurice Maeterlinck and to establish as a policy of Goldwyn the desire to secure the greatest creative brains from the world's literati. We have already on exclusive contract Rex Beach, Rupert Hughes, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Gertrude Atherton, Gouverneur Morris, Basil King, Leroy Scott. To these we have added beside Maeterlinck, Ben Ames Williams who wrote 'Jubilo' and Arthur B. Reeve, author of Craig Kennedy.

"We stand sponsor for and support anything that will develop our industry and nothing can do this so effectively as great pictures. Whether these pictures be made by individual producers is no less of a tribute and a source of pride to us all, and I shall continue to take as keen a pleasure in the transcendental work of an independent producer as if this work were done by Goldwyn."

Equity Reviews Its Past Activities

Equity Executive Points to Franchise Holders Handling Products

GENERAL Manager Joseph Schnitzer, of Equity Pictures Corporation, in a resume of the activities of the first six months of that concern's existence, gives an accounting that is both unusual to read and remarkable for its clarity.

Equity Pictures, which was launched for the specific purpose of producing and distributing the creations in which Clara Kimball Young appeared, succeeded within five weeks of its incorporation in disposing of its first year's output to the foremost independent exchanges throughout the United States and most foreign countries.

The first issue, Clara Kimball Young, in "Eyes of Youth" proved to be all that was announced in advance and since its release has proven one of the most potent box office atatractions yet distributed and continues to inspire records in hundreds of cities.

The second issue of the Equity will be "The Forbidden Woman" in which Miss Young will be seen in an even more elaborate enterprise than any previous film in which she has appeared and which has been choosen by the directors of the huge Capitol Theatre as the first feature under the new policy in which films are to be the chief attraction at that house.

As its policy, Equity points to its franchise holders:

Samuel Zierler, of Commonwealth, controls New York State. Mr. Zierler was formerly in charge of Universal's New York branch, and gave his position up to inaugurate the new exchange.

The First National Exhibitors Circuit, Pittsburgh, under the management of Joseph Skirboll, controls Western Pennsylvania; Benjamin Amsterdam, of Equity Productions Company, Philadelphia, controls Eastern Pennsylvania; and Herman Jans controls the rights in New Jersey.

Edward Golden of Boston handles New England, while the Criterion Film Exchange of Atlanta and Saenger Amusement Company of New Orleans controls the South, save Virginia, which is under control of Truart Pictures, a new concern conceived to handle Equity products.

Equity Pictures of Michigan, another exchange concern inspired by Equity and in charge of William Haynes and Herbert Weil, distributes throughout Michigan with H. B. Hadfield of Wisconsin Film Company, which concern handled "The Birth of a Nation," handling Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota; and Brockell and Elliott, under the firm name of Greater Stars productions, Inc., in control in Illinois and Indiana.

Paul Gusdanovic handles the Ohio distribution and Col. Fred Levy and Lee Goldberg distribute throughout Kentucky and Tennessee.

T. E. Larson recently incorporated "Peacock Productions, Inc." and launched "Eyes of Youth" in Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas and Missouri and Equity Pictures of California controls that state as well as Arizona and Nevada.

Gus Metzger, one of the Pioneers of the Northwest. controls Oregon and Washington, with Lichtenstein Brothers in charge in the mountain states. Jules and J. Jay Allen handle Canada, and Film Booking offices of London secured the British rights.

The foremost paper in South America, "La Prensa," through its owner has entered the film renting business and purchased the entire Equity product for Argentine, Uruguay and Paraguay.

The South African Film Trust procured "Eyes of Youth" for both South Africa and British India; and Universal, through its foreign branch, bought Cuba and the West Indies.

Hope Hampton, star of "A Modern Salome," the new Metro production

"A Modern Salome" in Song Tie-Up

Hope Hampton Productions, Inc., is carrying on an exploitation campaign of magnitude in behalf of "A Modern Salome," its initial picture, starring Hope Hampton.

One of the first steps in this campaign is the dedication to Miss Hampton of the song, "Rain or Shine," by Joseph W. Stern & Company, one of the popular music publishing concerns in the United States. Through its connection with the various chains of ten-cent stores, including Woolworth's and Kresge's, the Stern organization has a minimum outlet for its special numbers of almost half-a-million copies, it is stated.

Makes Rail Connections via Aeroplane

Metro Leases 63-Acre Park

Rose Hill Park on Outskirts of Los Angeles Will Be Used for Exteriors

METRO Pictures Corporation has taken a lease for a term of years on Rose Hill Park, a tract of sixty-three acres at the northern limits of Los Angeles City, California. The park will be used for motion picture settings too extensive for the five acre open lot that adjoins the main studio plant in Hollywood.

The sixty-three acres cover wooded, hilly land, with a beautiful level space of six acres across the center. The hills are covered with pepper, eucalyptus and pine trees. In places there is a luxuriant undergrowth. Wide opportunity for development of exterior scenic effects is afforded in a variety of natural settings in the tract and its lease is another example of Metro's policy of expansion on a large scale.

The first setting to be constructed will be an East Indian town which figures prominently in "The Hope," a screen version of the celebrated Drury Lane melodrama by Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton, now in preparation with an all-star cast including Jack Mulhall, Frank Elliott, Ruth Stonehouse and Marguerite de la Motte. This elaborate setting is to be destroyed by an earthquake in the course of the picture.

Here will also be constructed scenes for the coming productions of the other Drury Lane melodramas obtained by Metro, including "Hearts Are Trumps," "The Great Millionaire" and "The Marriages of Mayfair."

Metro officials have had their eyes on the park for a long time as the most suitable location afforded for development of their plans. The sixty-three acres cover some of the most beautiful territory on the outskirts of Los Angeles.

Dempsey Serial Booking Fast

Expectations for New Film Keyed to High Pitch in East, Says E. O. Brooks

EDGAR O. BROOKS, serial sales manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., has completed his tour of the Eastern branches, and after visiting the cities of Boston, Buffalo, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, Detroit, Washington and Philadelphia in the interests of Pathe's new serial, "Daredevil Jack," returned to New York with the report that the Jack Dempsey starring vehicle is being looked upon generally by exchange men and exhibitors as the greatest serial Pathe has offered to date.

"I found," Mr. Brooks stated, "everywhere expectations for this new serial keyed to the highest pitch. The branch managers I conferred with to a man expressed their confidence that in 'Daredevil Jack' they had a serial production of artistic qualities and drawing power that would enable them to achieve results surpassing their best records of the past."

Some of the contracts for "Daredevil Jack," reported, include a booking for every theatre of the S. A. Lynch Enterprises for the entire Atlanta territory. The Gaiety theatre in Cleveland has contracted for the serial for a week's run. Some of the bigger houses in Texas which will show Jack Dempsey as a serial star are the Dixie, Galveston; the Lincoln, Houston; the Grand Central, Dallas.

It is reported that practically every regular Pathe serial user in the New York territory has booked or is negotiating for the picture. Negotiations are also under way with Pantages for presentation of the serial in all that organization's theatres in the West. The Majestic theatre, Albany, has booked the picture for a week's run, and the T. L. Kerse theatres in Charleston, W. Va., has taken it for runs of one week.

Mrs. Drew to Return to Screen

Will Be Seen in Third Picture of Her Current Series

IN response to the written requests of thousands of motion picture patrons and the demands of hundreds of exhibitors throughout the country, Mrs. Sidney Drew has decided to return to the screen. She will begin work at once on the third comedy of the Mrs. Sidney Drew Series, and her initial appearance upon her return will be in the production, "The Emotional Miss Vaughn." The decision gives thousands of exhibitors who have booked her entire series of comedies an unexpected asset, it is stated by Pathe.

It was the original intention of Mrs. Drew to refrain from a screen appearance for some time, but the third picture of the series carries a part exactly suited to her talent, and this fact coupled with the extraordinary demand for her, decided her. Her reappearance adds the finishing touch to the remarkable series of pictures which she is creating to fill the long felt want for comedies made famous by the late Sidney Drew and Mrs. Drew.

In all of her work with her late husband, and in the first two comedies of the present series, Mrs. Drew was the guiding power. She wrote, directed, and appeared in the first Drew comedies, and, in the new series, she has adapted for the screen the "After-Thirty Stories" of Julian Street, and has personally supervised the direction of the first two pictures "The Charming Mrs. Chase" and "The Stimulating Mrs. Barton," in which John Cumberland will also appear in the third comedy.

"The Charming Mrs. Chase" is meeting with success with exhibitors in every territory. In New York City it makes its initial appearance at the Capitol Theatre and the management of that important picture house has booked the entire series. The finest theatres in the country contracted for the entire series without knowing that Mrs. Drew herself would be seen in some of the comedies, and the Pathe offices have been showered with telegrams of congratulations on the first comedy.

The return of Mrs. Drew in the third picture will undoubtedly result in the booking of the series by every theatre in which the comedies of the late Sidney Drew and his wife were popular; and that means practically every high class theatre in the United States.

The second picture "The Stimulating Mrs. Barton" has already been completed, and, at the first showing, it was generally agreed that it was an even better production than the first. The story is of the Spring Urge, making restless the hearts of a nice married couple. Both the wife and the husband believe they are thrilled by finding soul-mates; but they each achieve a k[illegible] they are brought back to earth.

Mrs. Drew has created a masterly interpretation of the love-sick husband, who thinks he should have been an artist with long hair and paint stained fingers, but who is only a "rich coffee merchant, nothing but a common merchant." John Cumberland in this role is seen at his best.

Mr. Fairbanks had heard so much laudation of the picture that he borrowed a print from the Hollywood Exchange of Fox Film Corporation to project in his residence. Among those present were some of the best known motion picture stars in the colony.

"An Adventuress" Mixes Comedy and Drama

"An Adventuress," the picture in which Julian Eltinge appears, and which has been purchased by the Republic Distributing Corporation, according to their announcement last week, is the last word in comedy and drama. Not only is there a number of bathing beauties, who take part in the play, but it runs the gamut of thrills and laughs. The story was written by Charles Taylor and made into a scenario by Tom Geragthy, and the authors have turned out a picture that will keep the average audience interested from start to finish, Republic states.

United has Comics Set for Current Release

The United Picture Exchanges will release during the next few weeks what is said to be an exceptionally strong program of comedy films.

On the same date that "The Corsican Brothers" is released—February 22d—a two reel Recreated Keystone Comedy, "Bombs and Brides" will be published. On February 29th, a Cuckoo Comedy made at the Jacksonville studios of Mark M. Dintenfass will be released. It is called "Ball Bearing But Hard Running" and presents the two well known Cuckoo stars, Bobby Burns and dainty Jobyna Ralston.

Weber and Fields, the greatest team of comedians that ever appeared on stage or screen, are the stars of United's comedy release for March 7th. They will be seen in the Recreated Keystone comedy of two reels, "The Worst of Friends."

Current Universal Releases

"The Peddler of Lies" Is Feature of Program for the Week of March 1

"THE Peddler of Lies," featuring Frank Mayo and Ora Carew, is the special attraction on the Universal release program for the week of March 1st. This production was directed by William C. Dowlan and is the screen version of Henry C. Rowland's story "The Peddler," which recently appeared in the Saturday Evening Post.

The serial releases announced by Universal for the week include "A Perilous Plunge," the tenth episode of "The Lion Man," in which Kathleen O'Connor and Jack Perrin are featured; and "The Flames of Death," the fourth episode of "Elmo the Fearless," in which Elmo Lincoln is starred. Both of these features contain many new departures in the way of serial making and are attracting a new class of serial patron.

The Lyons and Moran weekly offering is a delightful one-reeler called "Officer Call a Cop." This picture abounds with humorous situations. A Rainbow Comedy, "A Red Hot Finish," in which Virginia Warwick, Pat Harmon and Cliff Bowe are featured, is described as a "sizzling conglomeration of scorching comedy," with a novel twist to its climax.

A two-reel westerner, "Hair Trigger Stuff," presents Hoot Gibson and Mildred Moore in a highly original plot touching on a situation where a tobacco famine leads to some real exciting incidents. It is one of the best and breeziest of their pictures, Universal officials declare.

"His Woman," a Jewel production, is the eleventh of the Stage Women's War Relief series to be released, Julia Arthur taking the leading role in this production.

Pathe Release in Big Houses

Edgar Lewis Production, "Other Men's Shoes," Billed by First-Run Theatres

"OTHER MEN'S SHOES," Edgar Lewis's first big production for Pathe release, in the initial week of its distribution, has proved to be one of the best box office attractions Pathe has ever issued, according to a statement from Pathe. Reports to the home office indicate that the most important first-run theatres in the United States, are booking "Other Men's Shoes" for extended runs. The New York, Chicago and Indianapolis exchanges are particularly active in the booking of the Lewis extra special.

Among the big theatres booked out of Chicago, are the Jefferson, Fort Wayne; Centennial, Warsaw, Ind.; West, Galesburg, Ill.; Avoy, Moline, Ill.; Liberty, Davenport; Orpheum, Rockford, Ill.; and the Strand, Freeport, Ill. These are all first run accounts. Indianapolis records the booking of the Lewis attraction by the Liberty, of Terre Haute; the Murette, Richmond, Ind.; and the Wyaor-Grand, Muncie's leading screen palace.

The Liberty, Spokane, will feature "Other Men's Shoes," for a run, while the Pinney, of Boise, and the Burley, of Burley, Ia., have also listed the Lewis picture for early screening.

In New York, in addition to booking the foremost of the Loew and Fox theatres, the local exchange has placed the production in the entire M. & S. Circuit; the Plaza, B. F. Keith's Prospect, Pastime, National Winter Garden, the Majestic, Keystone, the West End, 14th Street Theatre, Poli's Garden, Waterbury, Strand, Bayonne; Empire, Port Richmond; the Academy, Jersey City, Steinway, Astoria, the entire David Picker Circuit; the Beverly and Crescent.

So. American Party on Way

Goldwyn's Camera Expedition Starts for Brazil; Philip Tannura in Charge

IMMEDIATELY following the start of E. Alexander Powell on his expedition into the far East to secure pictures for the Goldwyn-Bray Pictograph, comes the announcement of another photographic tour under the same auspices, this time with the unexplored country between Bolivia and Brazil as its objective. Philip Tannura is in charge of the party that left for South America last week to be gone several months. Under the recent Goldwyn-Bray alliance, which means a large increase in the product of the Bray Studios, cameramen are being despatched to all parts of the world for the purpose of getting scenic and travel studies of countries never before pictured on the screen.

Mr. Tannura is going far out of the beaten track on his visit to South America. In the Matto Grosso territory of Brazil and in the Paraguay Basin views will be taken of the many beautiful lakes, whereas pictures of a human interest value will be found in studies of the native Indians, the Portuguese, Italian and the Spanish settlers in this region. Some interesting subjects should develop out of pictures of the animal life of Brazil, where there are no less than fifty different species of monkeys.

When it is considered that Matto Grosso, with an area of approximately 532,000 square miles and a population in the neighborhood of 150,000 is the largest and most sparcely populated of Brazil's twenty-one states, the opportunities for securing pictures in an unexplored country will be recognized, says Goldwyn.

Sennett Discusses Exploitation

Points Out Few Defects Found Too Often in Advertising Films

THE subject of exploitation methods as applied to motion-pictures is the topic of a recent statement issued by the comedy producer, Mack Sennett. The statement follows:

"It is seldom that a picture matches its excellence with its exploitation. Either it is over—or else it is under-exploited, or its merits are under—or over-stated. The balance of fact is difficult to achieve, and adjectives are so handy and easy to spill and spell! Yet, in its properly weighted and effective publicity, the success of any picture largely depends. This is a fact that is well known to every exhibitor, but what is not so well known to every exhibitor is another, and related, certainty, equally important — more important, in fact; that is that the exhibitor's successful continuance in his services to the public depends to a great extent on his policies as an advertiser.

"A picture's chance for an adequate and proper test at the hands of the public depends upon the manner in which the exhibitor has enlightened his public concerning its merits, and the exhibitor's struggle for existence and profits will likewise be settled in large degree, by the way he solves the problem of printer's ink, bill board announcements and lobby and other displays. Errors are vitally damaging at once to the production, the producer, the exhibitor and the public. The problems of the publicist are as intricate, grave and determining as the problems of producing. It takes ingenuity, imagination, and patience and experienced skill to create a picture; it takes ingenuity, imagination and experienced skill to exploit it.

"Without being vain enough to believe I am a psychologist in the art and science of advertising, certain facts have come under my attention which bear on this subject, and for what they are worth I venture to assert them.

"Producers or their thoughtless and over-zealous publicity promoters are prone to insist that each work coming from under their hands is the greatest. Incidentally this isn't necessarily a lie, though it isn't the truth. It may be asserted in good faith as a mother believes in her soul that her last is her finest contribution to the greatness of the human race. It is quite natural that as to its relative rank, the latest production is deemed by its creator the best—to date; then if he is worthy the name of producer, he forgets all about it in his zeal to make another and a finer one. But exploitation on the basis of 'the last the best of all the game', is bewildering to the public at first and later becomes monotonous and finally it is ignored altogether, its promoter being put down—a liar.

It will not do to pile on adjectives; the public wearies of adjectives. You will not attract a permanent interest by an unvaried utterance of all the superlatives at your or your press agent's command. Since everybody does it, your method lacks distinction, which is to say that it lacks force, conviction and value.

Publicity that merely supplies unsupported praise from the prejudiced forces that produced its object is a waste of time, energy, white paper and money. What will attract attention to your latest offering is a well written account of its merits, a concise and witty, (if possible) description of its plot, and above all, a clear statement of such qualities as it may possess wherein it is shown to be different from other productions of the same type. If you can point out wherein it is different from anything hitherto accomplished, you will excite more advance interest than will be drawn by the dead magnet of a bookful of adjectives. To what particular emotions does the message of the picture address itself? What is different about it? Where are the distinguishing elements marking it off from other works of a similar kind? To what peculiar class or classes of picture patrons does your presentation offer a singular and particular appeal? What is the human interest of its plot?

"Do not over-exploit.

"Since every picture that comes to a theatre's screen cannot be greater, more mammoth and revolutionary than the one that preceded it, do not attempt to say that it is. Such advertising fools nobody and serves only to bing the exhibitor into disrepute. Remember that exploitation which isn't justified by the picture itself is like a boomerang. It will strike back. The story of the shepherd boy and the wolf is pertinent here. That fool kid shouted 'wolf, wolf' so often that when he needed help for the wolf that finally came, no help arrived because distant farmers hearing the cry said, 'it's the same old story, but he can't fool me again'."

Jerome Storm Remains with Ray

Has Guided the Star in His Last Thirteen Film Features

WITH a statement from Charles Ray promising exhibitors and public the best efforts of his organization comes the news this week that the studios of the Charles Ray productions in Los Angeles will be ready for actual production by the end of the week. Steady progress has been made on the extensive alterations and additions to the original Fleming Street studios which will house the new Ray products, and the plant will be cleared for action in time to conclude plans for the first work of the star. Ray is enjoying a much-needed vacation away from Los Angeles and will return to commence independent production in the latter part of the month.

Jerome Storm, who last week declared his intention of continuing as director of the star, is already on the scene and making arrangements for the initial First National attraction in which the Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation will present the star.

Mr. Ray has declared himself highly pleased to have obtained the services of Director Storm who has long been a close associate of the actor. In a statement given out following Storm's acquisition by the new organization, Mr. Ray states his belief that co-operation between all the vital factors in the making of photoplays is the first law of successful production, and that with such support he can safely promise both exhibitors and public even better and more entertaining pictures than he has done in the past.

"No one man," said Mr. Ray in his statement, "can successfully carry the burden of making a motion picture, and unless he is surrounded by earnest workers who can give their own originality or individuality and merge these qualities with those of their fellows, then he is playing in hard luck.

"I consider I am fortunate in having such a capable man with me as Director Storm. This man has worked with me in the past, and it is our intention to redouble our efforts in the future in order to give the exhibitors and public even better and more entertaining pictures than we have in the past.

"There is no dictator in my company; we work together and every scene taken is the result of mutual consideration and consultation. We all have the desired final result as our aim and we are all open to helpful suggestions, put forward by each one of us.

"The same holds good with the continuity writer, Miss Isabel Johnston, who will be included in our many talks. Miss Johnston is now at work on the continuity of our first picture, and I feel we have a valuable co-worker in this clever lady.

"Yes, I am a firm believer in co-operation and will listen to any suggestion, even if it is made by an extra man, and Mr. Storm is of the same opinion. Under these conditions, plus the high quality of the plays and stories we have already secured, there will be no alibis—I hate alibis, anyhow!"

Jerome Storm, who will continue to direct the star in his forthcoming pictures under the affiliation with Arthur S. Kane, has guided Ray in the last thirteen features in which the popular actor was starred.

Known to members of the industry as "Jerry," Director Storm has had a varied career, and commands a background in the film business which is vouchsafed to few directors. When it became known that Storm was to continue as director for Charles Ray, the star's sponsors at First National headquarter and others directly interested in the new production work of the star, declared that Ray could not have made a better choice.

Heavy Returns on "Big Six'

William Fox Report Says That Early Bookings Make Outlook Most Assuring

ACCORDING to a report from the offices of the William Fox Film Corporation, the campaign instituted by Fox in behalf of its revival of the "Big Six", is giving early indications of being an overwhelming success. "With very few exceptions," says the Fox report, "these big pictures have been contracted for by the exchanges in every city in the country where the Fox company has an office, and many theatre men have closed by wire or mail from outlying points. This, in the estimation of the officials of the corporation, furnished absolute proof that the exhibitor today is a showman with a showman's appreciation of value and a showman's keen knowledge of merit.

"These big spectacular films, including 'Les Miserables,' 'A Tale of Two Cities,' 'Cleopatra,, 'Salome', 'A Daughter of the Gods' and 'The Honor System', have been given a new lease of life inspired by the activities of the producer's branch managers and the sincerity of the exploitation they hav ceived through advertising departı of the company.

"With these accessories comt with the literary and artistic value the six big specials, the Fox excha report up to the present more than thousand theatres signed up for which vary in length from one da smaller cities to a week in larger ci and, in many theatres where the tures have already been shown have proved as strong attraction before.

"Among the exchanges which already forwarded bookings on the per-specials are Atlanta, Boston, falo, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Denver dianapolis, Dallas, Minneapolis, Orleans, New York, Omaha, Phila phia, Pittsburgh, San Francisco, Louis, Seattle, and Washington, D Reports from these cities show a tile market for all six and wide ir est throughout the theatre-going lic."

Selznick Buys More Stories

Five Additional Stories Are Placed on the List of Recent Acquisitions

THE Selznick office announces the purchase by Myron Selznick of five more stories for screen production. Michael J. Phillips has sold his "Toll of the Wilderness" to Mr. Selznick. It has been given the production title of "The Wilderness Fear." "Heart of Flame" is the title of another story just purchased from the popular author, Robert Alexander Wason.

Kathleen Norris is the author of "Poor Margaret Kirby" which story Mr. Selznick has been successful in purchasing. This story was originally published in The Saturday Evening Post in 1913. "The Way of a Maid," a story by Rex Taylor of Hollywood, California, was purchased this week. An original story entitled "Daphne, Co-Respondent" was purchased this week from Marc Connelly, author of many vaudeville sketches.

Among some of the other stories which Mr. Selznick has purchased since the first of the year may be named: "Keeping Him Guessing" by Mrs. Idyll Shepard Way; "The Shadow of Rosalie Byrne" by Grace Sartwell Mason; "The Palace of Darkened Shadows" by Mary Hastings Bradley; "Proof of the Pudding" by Meredith Nicholson; "The Law Bringers" by G. The upper, smaller stage was immediately prepared for work but on account of existing leases, it was impossible to use the lower stage until the first of the year. Now, however, the balconies arranged in a tier around three-quarters of the room have been removed and the stage in the remaining end of the room has been dispensed with. This leaves a stage of 82 feet by 137 feet and 31 feet high. The upper stage is 50 feet by 100 feet, with a height of 24 feet, which makes a combined floor space of 11,734 square feet.

"The Counterfeit," by H. B. Daniel; "The Incubus," by Marjorie Benton Cooke; and "Adventurous Day," by Stella Wynne Herron, are he stories purchased by Mr. Ince and cheduled for production at an early late.

Films For Presidential Recreation

RECENT newspaper articles touching on President Wilson's condition speak particularly of his great interest in viewing motion pictures that are shown him in the East Room of the White House. Always an ardent patron of the theatre, the President feels that the amusement afforded through the movies do much toward aiding his condition during the convalescing period. And the showing of entertaining dramatic and news weekly subjects are a part of the program in the President's household.

And it is quite significant also that the President, who was so interested in the motion pictures shown him while going back and forth to the Peace Conference in Paris on the U. S. S. "George Washington" where three Simplex Projectors were installed, should be using a Simplex during his convalescence at his official home.

At the White House a recent Simplex installation was effected under the personal supervision of Mr. Edwin S. Porter, well-known motion picture director and Vice-President of the Precision Machine Company.

In order that nothing should mar the tile floor nor the furnishing of the East Room where the Presidential showings take place, a special truck was devised, equipped with rubber-tired wheels upon which is mounted a battleship grey nickel trimmed Type "S" motor driven Simplex. This truck when the machine is not in use is kept in one of the White House storerooms and when required is wheeled on to a convenient elevator which quickly brings the entire equipment upon to the East Room level, where it is wheeled into position. Mounted upon this truck is the rheostat and also a connecting plug which can easily be attached to any of the various plug boxes located in different parts of the East Room.

Precision Installs a Simplex in the White House

The screen used during these exhibitions was also built under Mr. Porter's supervision and was necessarily designed by him to conform to prevailing conditions, it being impossible to use the customary pulleys and screw-eyes that are ordinarily employed in screen rigging.

This screen which is mounted on a rubber-wheeled framework similar to that used in a movable blackboard is a heavy specially-treated duck sheet with a series of brass grummetts around its four edges through which openings a set of lines are drawn which lines tighten the sheet in a uniform manner all around.

No booth is required in this installation inasmuch as the engineering and design of the Simplex brings down to a minimum fire hazards usually prevailing and incidentally safeguards the historic and beautiful furnishings for which the White House is famous.

Mr. Allan M. Thomas, the White House electrician, is a skilled motion picture projectionist and personally operates the Simplex for the edification of the President and his guests. Mr. Edwin S. Porter is highly gratified at learning of the part which the Simplex is playing toward bringing the President back to normal health and is particularly interested owing to his personal connection with the installation in question.

Assigns Editor to Each Company

Fox in New Scheme Aims to Facilitate Completion of Film

ANOTHER step in the steady advance of Fox Film Corporation toward perfection in product and service for the exhibitors is marked by the announcement that each of the seven companies now engaged in making Fox pictures at the Western studios has had assigned to it a regular editor and cutter who will devote his or her entire time to the assembling of films.

Some time ago—in fact, when the William Russell company went to the coast with Emmett J. Flynn as director —William Fox sent with the company C. R. Wallace in the position of film editor. Mr. Wallace has remained with the Russell-Flynn combination ever since and the result, as seen in "The Lincoln Highwayman" and more recently in "Shod With Fire," has proved Mr. Fox's contention that the use of separate editors for each picture affords the best results so far as continunity of story is concerned, as well as in the amount of time consumed in this important department of the industry.

Therefore it was natural that Sol. M. Wurtzel, Superintendent of the West Coast studios, seeing the success which crowned the first assignment of this sort should at once appoint a film editor and cutter for each of the six other companies engaged at Hollywood.

The following appointments thus far have been made, affecting four of the remaining six companies:

Miss Della Conley, a young woman of wide and varied film experience, has been assigned to the Denison Clift company, now engaged upon the final scenes of "The Iron Heart," in which the statuesque Madlaine Traverse is the star. Miss Conley will take full charge of the cutting, trimming and assembling of the finished film for Director Clift.

For Edward J. LaSaint who is directing Gladys Brockwell in the first of the Barbara Le Marr Deely stories, "The Mother of his Children," Earl Turner has been appointed editor.

With Tom Mix now on location making exteriors for his newest picture "Desert Love" under direction of Jacques Jaccard, Mr. Wurtzel has placed Lloyd L. Nosler, an expert film editor and cutter, whose special bent is Western melodrama and whose knowledge of film technique has been gained by years of experience in this field.

Miss Shirley Mason's new starring vehicle a delightful comedy-drama entitled "Molly and I" which is under the direction of Howard M. Mitchell will be edited by Carl Himm. Mr. Himm has been attached to the Mason company permanently by Mr. Wurtzel and will prove a valuable addition to the technical staff of the Fox studios.

A definite assignment for the William Farnum and Buck Jones company has not yet been made, although both these stars have begun work on new photoplays. Mr. Farnum's play is a screen adaptation of Clarence E. Mulford's great Western novel "The Orphan" and Buck Jones' story is taken from "Forbidden Trails" by Charles Alden Seltzer. Until film editors for both companies are named, J. Gordon Edwards, veteran Farnum director will continue cutting and trimming, and Scott Dunlap will cut the Jones picture in addition to directing it.

The addition of a film editor to the personnel of each company is with a view to saving the time of high-priced stars and directors who are frequently delayed at the finish of a picture to await the final cutting and trimming. With this new system the film will be completed almost with the final turning of the camera, or while the star is removing his or her make-up for the last time in that story.

By this means also considerable time will be saved in shipping completed prints from the West Coast studios to the main offices of the Fox organization.

The other members of the committee are: S. Barrett McCormick, managing director of the Circle theatre; Charles Olson, of the Central Amusement Company, which operates the Isis, Alhambra and Lyric theatres, and Edward G. Sourbier, owner of the Palms and Keystone theatres. The "selling" campaign will lead up to the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, which will be held in Indianapolis, June 6 and 10.

"Fires of Love" Fast Nearing Finish

D. W. Griffith's second attraction to be distributed by First National Exhibitors' Circuit, will be entitled "Fires of Love," and will be released in March. The greater portion of this production was screened on the Island of New Providence in the Bahama Islands, and it was during the cruise to this location that the entire Griffith party was swept into the gale that for nineteen hours threatened to play havoc with the entire party.

Clarine Seymour has the role of her career in this production, and among others who have prominent parts are Richard Barthelmess, Creighton Hales, Anders Randolph, Kate Bruce, Porter Strong, Herbert Sutch, Florence Short, Walter James, Thomas Carr, Adolphe Lestina and Ben Grauer.

Though not finally completed, "Fires of Love" is fast approaching the "finishing touches."

Release of "$30,000" Is Set for February 29

The W. W. Hodkinson Corporation announces for February 29th release J. Pollar Talks About "Tarzan"

Relates Some "Humorous" Experiences He Had with Members of Animal Cast

GENE POLLAR, back in New York after five weeks of strenuous screen combats for Numa Pictures Corporation's production of "The Return of Tarzan," brings with him three vivid memories of his first acquaintance with animal actors in pictures.

Up in the offices of Numa Pictures Corporation, Mr. Pollat related his experiences, in part:—

"It's a great life! Take Charley, the elephant, for instance. The trainer coached me as to how to get on the big boy's back—a running jump onto his trunk and zip!—he would do the rest. Just toss me up, secure and contented, onto his back. Following instructions, I ran a bit, landed on his trunk and was swayed into the air, but, instead of landing on his back, I landed on my own. Three unsuccessful attempts I made. Finally, I was ignominiously forced to be boosted, pushed and pulled up; the camera started grinding, and I assumed by celluloid air of the jungle man."

"One day, Joe Martin, the almost human monkey who seemed to understand by Harlem English better than some of the native Californians, was doing scenes with me. We were jumping, where the jumping was good, from bough to bough. I made a leap, and as my weight relieved it, a bough snapped back and hit Joe in the face. He thought I had done it on purpose, started a jibbering, and the first thing I knew he was after me and on my back, ready for fight. It took some effort to pull him off, and it took triple the amount of effort and all of the pastry included in my lunch-box, to put him in friendly humor with me again."

"Serials Gaining in Favor"

Republic Asserts Popularity of the Chapter-Picture Is Becoming Greater

FURTHER indications that serial productions are becoming as widely popular and as much in demand in America as in foreign countries is evidenced in the news that is current this week to the effect that Republic Distributing Corporation is considering the release to exhibitors of some of the best serial features obtainable.

This announcement follows closely on the heels of the recent announcement from the offices of Selznick Pictures that Lewis J. Selznick has made all arrangements to produce serials which are expected to set a new high mark for this class of production, and that Albert Payson Terhune has been engaged to write the first one.

When seen in regard to the serials for Republic, Mr. Busch, president of the distributing corporation, said: "Yes, Republic in its rapid progress is laying plans to include serial productions. We have received countless communications from representative exhibitors throughout the country who, pleased with our productions, ask if they can expect any serials. The serial as it is produced to-day is a big improvement over those made as recently as two years ago. I believe there is still room for improvement, and Republic will endeavor to supply exhibitors with serials that surpass any made thus far."

Mr. Busch further declared that short subjects, as released by Republic, are making steady strides forward in the favor of both exhibitor and public. The Charlie Chaplin reissues, twelve in number, are reported as booking so steadily that all prints are working regularly.

Acclaim "Land of Opportunity"

Selznick Says Returns Show Picture Sounds the Right Note

IN the Americanization plan of Franklyn K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior, wherein he asked the co-operation of the motion picture industry, "The Land of Opportunity," the Ralph Ince Lincoln Picture, presented by Lewis J. Selznick, seems to have struck a lead that will be hard for others to follow, says Selznick Enterprises.

Being the first of the Americanization pictures to be released, it has been watched very carefully and the words of congratulation pouring into the Selznick offices shows beyond a doubt that it has struck the right note. Governors of states, government officials and prominent exhibitors have forwarded telegrams and letters of congratulations, unsolicited, to Mr. Selznick praising him for the promptness with which he responded to Secretary Lane's call as well as for the quality of the production, according to reports.

In the first place, after the picture was completed, and found to be about what was wanted, plans were promoted for extensive distribution during Lincoln Week. The result is that "The Land of Opportunity" was not only showing at every Broadway theatre with one exception the week of February 8, but there is not a city in the United States of any size where it is not being screened in at least one theatre. To assure extensive distribution, the following telegram was sent to all branch managers of Select Pictures which is releasing the play:

"Extensive distribution of 'The Land of Opportunity' means more to me than the price for the same. We want the largest distribution possible and every print must be kept busy.

"Lewis J. Selznick."

John Lynch, head of Selznick's scenario department

The response to this telegram was most liberal and Select and Republic salesmen found that the exhibitors were more than willing to co-operate. The result has been that the Americanization plan has been given a big boost, and "The Land of Opportunity" has proven a big incentive for others to follow.

One of the biggest private showings of the picture took place in New Haven at the Bijou theatre on February 5th before a distinguished audience of officials and University men. There were present Ex-President William Howard Taft, President Hadley, of Yale; Mrs. Osborne, his secretary; Mayor David Fitzgerald, of New Haven; I. Osborne, the Mayor's secretary; S. Z. Poli; L. M. Segal; O. C. Edwards, manager Palace theatre, New Haven; Fred Valles, manager Bijou theatre, New Haven; L. D. Doty, auditor Poli Enterprises; J. J. Splain, general manager Poli Enterprises; L. D. Garvey, Publicity Director Poli Enterprises and E. J. Poli, beside several other exhibitors and representatives of newspapers.

Walter Griffith, Manager of Select's New Haven Branch writes:

"It was really remarkable to hear the expression of approval of this subject. We are receiving several letters of congratulation and I will forward them to you."

From Governor Coolidge, of Massachusetts came the following telegram:

"Dear Mr. Selznick:—You are entitled to great praise for your first Americanization picture portraying some ancedotes in the life of the great President and man. 'The Land of Opportunity' is a picture that can with profit be seen by everyone of us, as it shows where Abraham Lincoln plainly stood on the issue of Americanism.

"The Sagebrusher" Wins Success

Producer's Past Hits Are Said to Inspire Confidence in New Film

ACCORDING to a report from the offices of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, "The Sagebrusher" is proving to be a winner, and the reported success of this feature is said to be due at least in part to the fact that exhibitors have confidence in a new production provided it has been guided by the same hand that controlled former successes. The statement is submitted in full in the following:

"That a succession of powerful pictures made under the same guiding hand build exhibitor confidence and create a heavy volume of business for the next production to come from the same maker is evidenced by the success of Emerson Hough's 'The Sagebrusher,' the second Benjamin B. Hampton-Great Authors' production. This powerful production, distributed through Hodkinson, is the third winning picture made in California by Benjamin B. Hampton, the previous two having been 'The Westerners' and 'Desert Gold.'

"Tom Moore, the powerful Washington exhibitor, has booked 'The Sagebrusher' for immediate presentation in his biggest first run house at the capital and A. G. Talbot, Denver's aggressive exhibitor, has booked it for his America theatre, where 'Desert Gold' and 'The Westerners' both played to record-smashing business. The Jake Wells houses in Norfolk and Richmond have also made first run bookings for quick play dates.

"'The Sagebrusher' has been booked by the following theatres:

"The Palace, Wichita, Kans.; the Rex, Racine, Wisc.; the Columbia, Peoria, Ill.; the Liberty, Davenport, Ia.; the La Salle, La Salle, Ill.; the Majestic, Erie, Pa.; the Rialto, Kewanee, Ill.; the Gold, Madison Square, Vendome, Chicago; the Princess, Terre Haute; the Grand, Williamsport, Pa.; the Lyric, Fort Collins; the Wonderland, Clinton, Ia.; and by several hundred other theatres tributary to these larger houses in the territory.

"'The Sagebrusher,' made with the same care and fidelity to detail that marked 'The Westerners' and 'Desert Gold,' contains everything what made its predecessors two of the outstanding picture successes of the year, a remarkable story, brilliant direction, splendid lighting effects and a cast of acknowledged power that includes Roy Stewart, Marguerite De La Motte, Noah Beery, Betty Brice, Arthur Morrison, Gordon Russell and Aggie Herring, an aggregation of artists that bring out to the full the stirring heart appeal that made Emerson Hough's book one of the most successful of its kind ever published.

"An exploitation campaign to equal in power the drive waged by Tom Moore in promoting 'Desert Gold,' 'The Lone Wolf's Daughter' and 'The Capitol' is now being mapped out by the prominent Capital City showman on 'The Sagebrusher.'"

The Educational Department of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company has ready for release a large number of educational motion pictures which, unless a last moment change is made, will go out to the public under the general title of "Universal's Universal Scenics."

Universal photographers are said to have put into their production thousands of miles of travel from the sources of the Congo through romantic Sumatra, a spot incidentally hitherto neglected by the travelogists, into the nooks at the end of the world and finally across the breadth of our own country.

Canvass of Directors Taken

Investigation Shows That Directors Have Come from Many Walks of Life

WHAT special qualifications "make" a successful director of photoplays? The men who handle the megaphone and pull the invisible strings that make the movies move are recruited from all walks of life. A canvass among some of the directors at Universal City brought to light the following facts:

Tod Browning toured the world in advance of theatrical companies, circuses and concert organizations.

William C. Dowlan was an actor and stage director with numerous stock companies, the latest being the Morosco Company in Los Angeles.

Jack Ford came straight from the University of Maine to Universal City where he acted as assistant director for a short while before he was given charge of an entire production.

Harry Franklin was for twenty years an actor, stage manager and producer on the legitimate stage.

Douglas Gerrard was a prominent actor in England, Australia and America before destiny led him to the motion picture field.

Allen Holubar served his apprenticeship on the dramatic stage under the management of the leading Broadway producers.

Henry McRae was the owner of popular stock companies in every important city in the West.

Erick Von Stroheim was born of the Austrian nobility, and he has lived in every European and American capital. He served as officer in the army of his native land; and since coming to American and renouncing his title, he has seen life from every angle. His first introduction to the screen was as an actor.

Good Staff for New Serial

Vitagraph Making Special Effort to Surround Duncan with all Requisites

ORGANIZATION up to the point where art and efficiency meet—they do not overlap in motion pictures—is said to be exemplified in the staff with which Vitagraph has surrounded William Duncan for the first of the series of million-dollar serials he will make under his new contract. He has been provided with a complete stock company and a skilled technical staff, enabling him to produce thoroughly independent of all other studio activities. The players and technical group include nearly one hundred men and women whose work it is to make possible the production by Mr. Duncan and star, two fifteen-episode serials a year.

Mr. Duncan's new contract is predicated upon the success of his last serial, "Smashing Barriers," one of the most popular chapter plays ever produced. Its success justifies the expenditure of $1,000,000 on a single serial and warrants the record schedule of production, six serials in three years, planned for the star, says Vitagraph.

Mr. Duncan has started his first serial under the new contract. It is called "The Silent Avenger" and is the joint work of Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, and Cleveland Moffett, one of the best known American writers of fiction. Edith Johnson is again Mr. Duncan's leading lady, and their success in serials lies greatly in the fact that they have developed this type of production to its highest form. They have placed serials on a plane with the best drama of the screen. Jack Richardson and Virginia Nightingale, both well known to the screen, have important roles in the supporting cast.

Neely Edwards Wins Favo

The Cohns Will Retain Comedian for Hall Room Boys Subsequent Releases

JACK and Harry Cohn believe they have discovered in Neely Edwards, "the boy with the winning smile," one of the most unique personalities on the screen today. Edwards, who has been making a hit in Hall Room Boys Comedies, produced and released by the Cohns, has been holding up the big end of the fun created in this series, and will be featured in subsequent releases.

Hall Room Boys comedies, as was announced last week, will be produced during the coming year in the Cohns' own studio in Hollywood. Edwards, formerly of the vaudeville team Flanagan and Edwards, is their best bet a will be the object about which stor and comedy situations will be bu Edwards has broken off with his vau eville partner, Flanagan, and will given the support of a company the best comedians it is possible to tain.

Revue and Picture Will Get Initial Showing at Kingston, N. Y., March 1st

VICTOR KREMER, President of Victor Kremer Film Features, Inc., has completed the details of the special stage presentation in connection with the Chaplin production, "A Burlesque on Carmen." It will be given its premiere at the Kingston Opera House, New York, on March first, where the show and the film will be presented for one week. Manager George Gildersleeve, of the Kingston Opera House, is enthusiastic over the possibilities of the Chaplin production with its complement of dancing girls, and will give this attraction widespread publicity.

Rehearsals have been going forward for several weeks under the direction of Frank Saunders, well-known stage producer, and husband of the famous dancer, Doraldina. As a background for the act, a special setting suggestive of the opera Carmen, will be used. The company consists of three pri pals, a tenor, baritone and comedi supported by a chorus of six danc girls. The show will open with rendition of the favorite melodies fr "Carmen," followed by a unique t vesty on the big scenes from the ope itself. The stage presentation will for twenty minutes, followed by screening of the film, "A Burlesque Carmen," starring Charlie Chaplin.

Following the engagement at Ki ston, the Victor Kremer attraction play two more theatres up-state, will then be brought to New York a run of long duration on one of prominent circuits. Ira Simmons managing the show, while Bert En director of publicity for the Kren organizations, is looking after the ploitation.

Mystery Picture Is Show

Herman Jans Asserts "Love Without Question" is Real Mystery Picture

ONE evening last week the first print of "Love Without Question" was shown to the executives of Jans Pictures, Inc., and the members of the B. A. Rolfe producing organization. Among the guests were Miss Olive Tell, the star, and the other members of the cast. Several prominent independent exchange men were present and all were highly pleased with the picture.

When seen subsequent to the showing, Mr. Herman F. Jans, President of Jans Pictures, Inc., said: "I am immensely pleased with my first look at 'Love Without Question.' In this production adapted from the book 'The Abandoned Room,' by C. Wadsworth Camp, we have one of the greatest mystery dramas yet produced. I feel sure that anybody who sees the first hundred feet of this picture will sit through to the end thoroughly enthralled by the mystery.

"The story moves along smoothly from the opening to the final climax in the last reel, and I am willing wager a perfectly good Stetson neither man, woman or child can s this mystery before the last reel they have not previously read the b

"I would like to make this adva suggestion to exhibitors when show this film, that they do not tell the s in full to their public, but leave entire mystery to be solved after ing the picture in the theatre. would also suggest that they cau their patrons not to spoil the en ment of the picture for the o patrons by telling them how the tery ends. These are just two adv hints that I would like to register.

Grossman to Leave Ithaca

Has Secured Studio in New York for Continued Production of Features

HARRY GROSSMAN, President of Grossman Pictures Inc., has given up the company studio at Ithaca and secured one in New York City where he will continue the production of a series of eight feature pictures. The company began production in Ithaca last August where it made the serial "$1,000,000 Reward" featuring Lillian Walker, and two features "Wits vs. Wits" and "Face to Face," starring Marguerite Marsh. The serial was disposed of by states rights and the first feature "Wits vs. Wits" was sold to Hallmark Pictures. "Face to Face," the second feature has just been completed and will soon be given a trade showing.

Commenting on the completion of "Face to Face," Grossman has issued the following statement:

"Those who have seen private showings of the picture declare that it is a splendid production and excels in many respects, setting a high standard for the series of eight that will be made. Mr. Grossman has announced it as his intention to make the best pictures possible and will announce at the trade showing of "Face to Face" that he is willing for the picture to be taken as the standard for the future productions.

"Mr. Grossman recently returned from an extended trip during which arrangements were completed for the distribution of the serial '$1,000,000 Reward' in the previously unsold territory. It is reported that the production is a distinct success and that the bookings have been unusually heavy in all exchanges."

Pantages Circuit Will Run Dooley Comics

The Pantages Circuit has contracted for the entire series of Johnny Dooley Comedies and has guaranteed a twenty weeks' run on each subject released by Tyrad Pictures, Inc., featuring the Ziegfeld Star. The Dooley Comedies will be a feature part of the program used in the Pantages houses and will be given a prominent place in the billing.

The Tyrad New York exchange have booked the greater part of their territory and have started to allot dates to the larger local theatres on the first Dooley release, which had its premier showing at the Broadway theatre recently.

Art-O-Graf Celebrates First Anniversary

The Arrow Film Corporation announces that the Art-O-Graf Film Company of Denver in celebrating its first anniversary, set the precedent of being the first company engaged in the production of moving pictures to exist twelve months in Colorado. Others have tried and failed, and it remained for Art-O-Graf to reach its first mile post successfully last week.

At the annual meeting, the stockholders expressed themselves as being highly pleased with the early accomplishments of the infant company. Besides executive offices and a studio in Denver, the company has one of the most complete studios in the country in Steamboat Springs, Colo.

During the first year of the company, three pictures were made, the first one having been successfully exhibited. Art-O-Graf's maiden effort was "Miss Arizona." Produced and now being released are "Wolves of the Street" and "The Desert Scorpion." All of these pictures were directed by Otis B. Thayer and distributed by Arrow Film Corporation.

Arrow Film Increases Selling Force

The Arrow Film Corporation has recently increased its selling force because of the number of new subjects which have been added to its already long list of pictures, as a consequence of W. E. Shallenberger's negotiations for material while on his recent visit to the coast. Among the recent additions is David Mountain who will concentrate his efforts at present on the booking of the big new series of features, "Tex, Elucidator of Mysteries" which Arrow is now unloading on the Independent market. P. B. Dana, sales manager of the Arrow Film Corporation, will have entire charge of the big selling campaign which is being used in the marketing of the new series.

Moranti Comedies, Inc., Start Production

Milburn Moranti has reorganized his company with a capital stock of $100,000, including Eastern as well as local capital, and the company will henceforth be known as the Moranti Comedies, Inc. Work on the first picture started this week at the Balboa studios, Long Beach, Cal., and according to the company's contract a series of 12 two-reelers will be produced the first year. Al Moranti is directing, while Helen Williams is playing the leading feminine role. Joe Bonner and Albert Huston are also playing in support. The company will make two-reel situation comedies.

Another Exhibitor Is Won to Serial

According to a letter from R. S. Ballantyne, manager of the Muse theatre, Omaha, Neb., another exhibitor has been changed from a "vehement scoffer of the serial" to an enthusiastic champion of the chapter-picture. The Muse theatre now plays two serials each week, says Mr. Ballantyne. "The Adventures of Ruth" and "The Black Secret," both Pathe releases, are billed at present.

In and Out of West Coast Studios

Selig

Col. Wm. H. Selig is making a number of plans for the extension of his interests respecting production work on his mammoth zoo and grounds adjoining the studio near Lincoln Park, Los Angeles. It is the intention of Col. Selig to produce a number of big features this year in addition to the filming of serials. At the present time, Leon de la Mothe is working on "The Vanishing Trail" serial featuring Franklyn Farnum with Mary Anderson as leading woman; and work will be started in a few days on the making of a big feature under the direction of Bertram Bracken, who has already filmed one feature production of Mr. Selig.

Col. Selig has engaged Sy deVry, who for thirty-one years was superintendent of Lincoln Park Zoo at Chicago. Mr. deVry will be in complete charge of the Zoo which will be greatly changed, and the already largest privately owned collection of wild animals will be more than doubled. The grounds will be made more of a place of amusement.

Fox

About thirty days more will be required for the filming of the spectacular comedy to be released in five reels or more, which has been in the making at the Wm. Fox Sunshine studio for the past sixty days under the direction of Hampton Delruth.

There is every evidence at this studio to indicate that the Fox company is using the sky as the limit in respect to expense for this picture, and that Hampton Delruth is most sincere in his efforts to make this production the greatest comedy feature released to this time; in fact, it is generally understood at the studio that Delruth expects to make this comedy, as yet unnamed, the greatest achievement of his film career, which began a number of years ago, when he was scenario editor at Mack Sennett Studios. This week, one of the big features required more than one hundred girls, and with all of the principals of Fox Sunshine comedies taking part in the scene. No statement has been made as to the nature of the story, or title to be used has been revealed by Mr. Delruth or his associates in the filming of this spectacular comedy.

The timber region of Flagstaff, Arizona, is to serve as locale for an Alaskan story "The Rose of Nome" now being filmed by E. J. Le Saint with Gladys Brockwell as star. The story was written by Barbara Deely, with the continuity by Paul Schofield. The supporting cast for the star is William Scott, Herbert Prior, Gertrude Oakman, Edward Peil, Stanton Mack, Frank Thorne and Lule Warrenton.

Two celebrities and two lesser lights. Left—William Farnum, Fox star. Next, Mrs. "Babe" Ruth and "Babe" himself. Right—Sol. M. Wurtzel, superintendent of the William Fox studios

The entire cast for the next William Russell production "Leave It to Me," has been announced to be composed of Eileen Percy, Marcelle Daly, Hal Cooley, Billy Elmore, Harvey Clark and Milla Davenport, as well as Lucille Cavanaugh. This will be Miss Cavanaugh's first appearance in pictures; she coming to the Fox studio from her engagement on a leading vaudeville circuit, where her dancing act was featured. In the Russell play, which is a farce comedy, Miss Cavanaugh appears in the caricature of a vamp.

Three productions are nearing completion, they being those of Madlaine Traverse, "The Iron Heart;" Shirley Mason "Molly and I" and the Jacques Jaccard directing picture "One Quarter Apache."

William Farnum and company, who have been at Palm Springs for the past three months are still there working on exteriors for "The Orphan" and the Buck Jones Company has been disbanded for the present because of the star suffering from blood poison as the result of a broken toe.

The Fox Sunshine lot is extremely busy, the four directors, Jack Blystone, Eddie Cline, Del Lord and Roy Delruth, all being busy with two-reel comedies.

Goldwyn

Samuel Goldwyn, head of the Goldwyn organization arrived in Los Angeles February 8th for a stay of several weeks, after an absence of about five months from the center of producing activities of Goldwyn. Mr. Goldwyn came to the coast to go over production matters with Vice-President Abraham Lehr, who is in charge of production at the studio and shortly after his arrival stated that it had been determined by the Goldwyn Company that all producing activities would be carried on at the Culver City studios and that in the near future the producing organization would be enlarged with several additional companies.

The Goldwyn organization is at the present time busier than ever before and at the time of Mr. Goldwyn's arrival there were eleven producing units at work on as many new subjects. Two days following Mr. Goldwyn's arrival he was principal speaker before the Los Angeles Advertising Men's Club, where he talked on motion picture conditions and the advantages of Los Angeles climate and conditions for the producing of pictures.

Since arriving in the West, Mr. Goldwyn has given out no information concerning the intentions of his company regarding the purchase of theatres, but it is understood that several sites in San Francisco are being considered and it is very probable that this producer will spend several days there in considering this matter.

Ann Forrest, who played a very prominent part in "Dangerous Days" has been selected as leading woman for Tom Moore in his forthcoming feature "The Great Accident" adapted from the Ben Ames Williams' story of the same name. Harry Beaumont will be the director of this, and the supporting cast will include Lillian Langdon, Andrew obson, Edward McWade, and Philo McCullough.

The complete cast has been selected for the Katherine Burke, Eminent Author's story "The Branding Iron" which is to be directed by Reginald Barker. Barbara Castleton plays the role of Joan, and the other members of this all star cast are James Kirkwood, Russell Simpson, Nigel Barrie, Sid Ainsworth, Marion Colvin and J Standing.

Director Al Green, who last w was added to the Goldwyn directo staff by Vice-President Abraham L now has his complete cast for the fi ing of the next Jack Pickford st "The Double Dyed Deceiver". M Dunn, a vaudeville artist, who rece came to Los Angeles, will be P ford's leading woman. She has pla in several Goldwyn subjects, and most prominent work was in the cently filmed Edgar story. Other p ers of this company are James N Edythe Chapman, Sidney Ainswo Manuel Ojeea.

The filming of scenes for the r Will Rogers' picture "Jes Call me J was delayed this week because of illness of little Jimmy Rogers, son Will Rogers, who is absent from studio because of measles. Little J my appeared in practically every sc in which his father takes part.

Mary Roberts Rinehart, who been at Goldwyn Studios for the several months working with the s ario department in the preparatio continuity for her stories, to be leased to the eminent authors se left this week for her home in P burgh. Miss Rinehart will return the Goldwyn Studios after sev months.

The thousands of friends of Vi Schertzinger of the Motion Pic trade will regret to learn of the los his mother, who died this week, a several months' illness.

F. P. Lasky

Everything pertaining to the C. B. DeMille production is shrou in mystery. The publicity departn of Famous Players-Lasky Studio not been given any information taining to the character of the st nor even the name of players will take part in the production. DeMille has been at work on filming of the subject for two we following the several weeks sper preparing the story. About the information, Mr. DeMille wi known at this time is that a par the cast has been selected.

Bryant Washburn is next to comedy-drama and will work at Morosco Studio. The title of his duction is "Hamlet of Beanto Work of filming "The Sins of Anthony" from the continuity Elmer Harris is progressing satisfactorily and it is now exp that the film will be completed by end of the next week. James C who is at present directing Wash will continue in this capacity. Eyton is author of Washburn's story.

Clyde Fillmore and Richard S ng have been selected to play leading arts with Ethel Clayton in her next ociety drama "The Ladder" which to be directed by Sam Forman. his scenario is by Clara Kennedy.

Joseph Henaberry has been en- ged to direct the next Robert War- ck picture and filming will be rted as soon as Director T. N. ffron completes the filming of the orge Barr McCutcheon story "The y of Masks." The next Warwick y will be "The Man from Blank- y," adapted from the Chas. Hawtley y of the same name. Walter oods is responsible for the con- uity for this comedy drama.

The Famous Players-Lasky have urchased another automobile story or Wallace Reid which is titled Too Much Speed" and will be lmed following the completion of Sick a Bed." This story is by ron Morgan, author of the "Roar- Road" and "Excuse My Dust" previous Reid vehicles, from turday Eveniny Post stories. organ has been at the Lasky studio several weeks and has prepared continuity for "Too Much eed" which will be directed by m Woods.

Whether Roscoe Arbuckle returns two reel comedies, or continues as e star of five reel subjects is yet be determined according to infor- ation given out by Famous Players- asky this week and Mr. Arbuckle his work in the George Melford duction "The Round-Up" and company is now back at the studio ter a number of weeks of very enuous living in the mountains.

William C. DeMille has been nted a vacation, he having com- ted "The Prince Chap" and he is leave shortly for New York, where will spend several weeks. "Held the Enemy" being directed by nald Crisp is nearing completion.

Selznick

eneral Manager Harry Rapp of Selznick west coast forces has ree producing units at work this week, and the fourth will be started shortly. Tom Mills is making "The Invisible Divorce," for National Picture Theatres, Inc., with Walter McGrail and Leatrice Joy as leads.

Warren Kerrigan and Fritzi Brunette in the Hodkinson picture, "$30,000"

The L. Lawrence Weber Productions subject, now in the making, is "The Child of Destiny," being directed by George Irving; and Wesley Ruggles has taken up the filming of the Owen Moore Selznick picture, "His Word of Honor." The Mills Company is working in San Francisco making exteriors, and the Owen Moore Company has a big bazaar set built in the Santa Monica valley which is now being shot.

Particular attention is being given to settings for the subjects being made by the Selznick forces, and with the hope of getting better settings, Stephen Goossen, an architect, has been engaged as technical director. Goossen's first work has been the designing of three exceptionally large settings, one of which will be used in "The Invisible Divorce." One is the interior of a private gambling and dance palace in France, which has a floor space of 125 feet in depth, and the third will be a reproduction of the Embassy ball at Washington.

Howard Selznick, eldest son of L. J. Selznick, is spending some time with General Manager Harry Rapp at the west coast studios.

Just what Douglas McLean and Doris May, Thomas H. Ince stars, have found so interesting in this big ledger we cannot guess. We can imagine, however, that their latest picture, "What's Your Husband Doing?" for release by Paramount-Artcraft, will be amusing

National Film

Final editing of the National Film Corporation's initial 1920 feature release, "The Kentucky Colonel", is now being made by Director William Seiter, and the subject will be ready for showing in New York by March 1st. Advice from Joe Brandt, New York representative of the company, is to the effect that all arrangements have been made for the Gotham preview.

Neal Burns this week signed a contract to appear in Capital Comedies for the next year, and at the same time gave the National an option on his services for five additional years. It will be remembered that Burns recently completed work in thirteen comedies for the National which were released through Goldwyn, and it is due to his popularity in these that the contract was renewed.

An idea of the activities at the National studio can be gained by the fact that seven directors are now included in the producing staff, they being William A. Seiter, Paul Hurst, Mark Goldaine, Harry Edwards, Warde Hayes, Robbin Williamson, Lou Carter and Jack Hoxie. Director Seiter is giving his attention to the making of features; Paul Hurst, when he recovers from an attack of influenza, will take up the making of a series of five reel western subjects; Jack Hoxie will direct a western serial in which he will play the featured role, and the other four will give their time to making comedies. Three of these units will make films for Marion H. Cohen of San Francisco, who is now making arrangements for distribution. Included in this list are comedies featuring Polly Moran with Ray Thompson as leading man; "Smiling" Bill Jones will be directed by Williamson, and the company will make one reel polite comedies. Two reel sensational comedy dramas featuring Grace Cunard with Cole Hebert are now in the making, the first of the series will be "The Gasoline Buckaroo."

To handle the productions successfully, a number of additions have been added to the National staff including Mickey Colwell as technical director, and Victor Gibson as continuity writer.

Plans for the building of a new glass enclosed stage at the National plant have been O. K'd by the executives, and construction work will be started immediately.

Universal

Universal City has taken on renewed activities in the production work after a lull of several weeks of cutting and editing by several of the directors. In the past two weeks five new productions have been started and the scenario and continuity departments now have scripts for a number of others to be cast in a few days.

"Jewel," the Clara Louise Burnham story, which was filmed by Universal several years ago, is to be remade in the revised version. Edith Roberts will be featured. Continuity for this has been written by Doris Schroeder, who is also author of the screen version for "Togs" and "Virginia." All three of these subjects will be started shortly, but at this time the casts have not been fully selected. Elsie Jane Wilson, in private life Mrs. Rupert Julian, will direct the filming of "Jewel."

Reeves Eason, Universal director of serials and westerns, has been placed in charge of production of all shorter western photodramas by General Manager Tarkington Baker. In the supervising capacity, Mr. Eason will have authority in the selection of the stories, the casting, the producing and finally in the editing. At the present time, there are two companies making the short subjects, one directed by Eason, who is now filming "The Rattler's Hiss" with Miss Mildred Moore, George Field, and others. The second company is directed by Arthur Flaven, who has Josephine Hill and Bob Reeves as principals in "Held for a Honeymoon." Miss Hill is a former Gus Edward Song Revue girl and her contract with Universal has just been renewed for a long term.

A third company is to be started for the filming of short subjects, which will be under the direction of Robert Anderson, who is remembered for his work as Mons. Cuckoo in "Hearts of the World" and who played in support of Dorothy Phillips in "The Right to Happiness" and "Ambition." Anderson has just returned from a visit to his native land, Denmark, and this will be his first directorial work.

The title for the film version of the John Frederick story "Luck" now being filmed by Director Lynn Reynolds with Harry Carey as star has been changed to "Bullet Proof." Harry's principal supports are Kathleen O'Connor, Beatrice Burnham and Robert McKim.

A very notable cast has been selected to support Tsuru Aoki in her next picture "A Tokio Siren." Jack Livingston will be leading man. He has played opposite Dorothy Dalton, Norma Talmadge, Vivian Martin, Peggy Hyland, and a number of stars. Furthermore, this will not be his first Japanese picture, inasmuch, as he played a leading role in "The Loyalty of Taro San." Norman Dawn is directing this Japanese picture. Another title which has been changed is that of the screen version of the Elizabeth Jordan story, "The Girl in the Mirror," which will be known as "The Girl in Number Twenty Nine." Jack Ford is directing this, which has Claire Anderson, Elinor Fair, Frank Mayo, Ray Ripley, Ruth Royce and a number of others.

Director Phil Rosen, who has just completed the filming of "The Road to Divorce" with Mary MacLaren will direct the Ida M. Evans' story "Virginia," and it is very probable that Miss MacLaren will play in this story.

Director Tod Browning is doing the final cutting on "The Virgin of Stamboul" and upon the completion of this has been granted a vacation

The photograph stated this to be a scene directed by Ernest Warde at the Robert Brunton studio. It looks to us as if every one was loafing and that J. Warren Kerrigan was telling a funny story during which he will hibernate to some mountain resort to write a crook story which will feature Priscilla Dean. It will be remembered that she did her most important work in roles of this character, and such parts finally aided her to stardom by the Universal people.

Claire Anderson, who is playing in "The Girl in Number Twenty Nine" suffered a broken wrist when an automobile skidded on a slippery road during the making of a scene for this picture. Miss Anderson was thrown out of the car, but fortunately the machine did not turn over upon her. It will be several weeks before she is able to resume work in this production.

About Metro Players

The Metro studio was this week the scene of interiors for the first Jack London production, "Burning Daylight," which is being directed by Edward Sloman. Helen Ferguson, an eighteen year old Miss, has been engaged as leading woman for Mr. Lewis, the star of these films. The initial scenes are those of New York interiors, and shortly the company will go to Huntington Lake where weather conditions are right for the filming of Alaskan winter scenes. Jackson Rose, who is a cameraman of twelve years experience, has been engaged to have charge of the photography of the London films.

The company filming, "The Hope," Drury Lane melodrama, is this week working at the King Gillett ranch where the private race track, horses and stables of the razor king are being used for an English derby. Herbert Blache is directing this cast headed by Jack Mulhall, Ruth Stonehouse, Marguerite de la Mothe and Frank Elliott.

Three of the Metro Companies are absent from the studio working on location. Viola Dana and company making "Eliza comes to stay" is at Oxnard. May Allison and company are working on "The Cheater" in Santa Barbara and the Shore Acre Company is at Laguna Beach.

Predicts the Advent of Finer Type of Screen-Author

By J. Parker Read, Jr.

The expenditure of hundreds of thousands of dollars by film producers for stage and literary successes for screen adaption is neither a passing fad on the part of the motion picture magnates, nor a permanent condition, for that matter.

Stage plots will rapidly become exhausted, just as the exclusively cinematic writers grow stale in concocting celluloid themes, and even the immense literary library of the ages will in time lose its potentialities in the eyes of the producers.

It is my belief that while the vogue of the novel and the play is at its height; that while plays like "Po anna," "Theodora," "Daddy Lo legs," "Everywoman," "Mary's Anl and the like, command extravag figures, this period is just an inte during which the scenario writer—t is, the original writer—is girding his loins for the final test.

However, I draw to your atten another condition with a pointed b ing on the motion picture indus Manuscripts like "Twenty-three a Half Hour's Leave," Gouvern Morris' "Behind the Door" other magazine stories have brou more on the cinematic mart t through literary publication.

I believe that these stories w have been purchased at approxima the same figures paid after publica if they had been presented to the eral film producers before appear in magazine form and that this is exerting a tremendous influenc weaning authors away from wr for literary publication to cr especially, if not exclusively, for screen.

Many examples of this th already have impressed on me truth of this statement. It means a newer and better type of scr author is being brought to the ai the motion picture in its progre battle for better entertainment, n effective drama.

SEEKING INFORMATION

Having failed to ascertain who introduced puttees, HOKUM insists upon practising "try, try again."

One of the film industry's greatest producers accosted the editor the other day and said that a unique bit of history that should be known and chronicled is that respecting the sport shirt.

"Who," said he, "ever thought people of the film colony would wear such shirts. Garbing one's self with such is even worse than wearing puttees, and so I ask HOKUM to bring the man to the bar of justice."

Five minutes later HOKUM editor came upon Marshall Neilan wearing a cap and tortoise shell glasses, and Mickey was asked, "Who discovered the sport shirt of yesteryear?"

"Why ask me such a question?" came the reply as he shifted the bill of his cap. "I have the distinction of being one of the very few directors, or for that matter persons of the film colony, who have never worn a sport shirt or a pair of puttees. By the way, I can tell you where they all buy their puttees—secret—at a second hand store away up on Main street."

While HOKUM failed to get the information regarding the sport shirt that it desired, it feels that this tip from Neilan as to the place to buy puttees is worth a million to people of the film colony, and our cash box is now open for all those who want to pay their share.

Pioneer Reports Heavy Sales

Pioneer Says Picture of the Stecher-Caddock Bout is Getting Big Demand

THAT the Stetcher-Caddock wrestling picture, which the Pioneer owns and is exploiting, is one of the season's genuine surprises is more than proven by the country wide interest which is being manifested in it by both the general public and wide awake exhibitors.

After the first showing at the George M. Cohan Theatre, where it played to crowded houses and received the unstinted praise of the New York newspapers, it opened up in various other centres of the country, and is doubling the success which it enjoyed on Broadway.

Already the following territories have been disposed of at prices which set for a new high water mark in figures for pictures of this kind, or any other nature. Iowa and Nebraska, to Ernie Holmes, of Omaha, Neb., Northern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey to Masterpiece Film Attractions of Philadelphia, Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia to S. & S. Film Supply Co., of Pittsburgh. Ohio and Kentucky—Pioneer Film Corporation of Cleveland. Michigan—Pioneer Film Corporation of Detroit, and New York City and State and Northern New Jersey—Pioneer Film Corporation of New York and Buffalo.

The Pioneer offices are being flooded with offers and it is expected that these pictures will be disposed of in the United States, as well as in foreign fields in a record time.

Arrow Reports on New Series

Several Territories are Sold on the Five-Reel Detective "Tex" Pictures

FOLLOWING a well planned teaser campaign, and four pages of advertising in the Motion Picture News, the Arrow Film Corporation reports having sold several territories on their new series of twelve five reel detective stories under the title of "Tex, Elucidator of Mysteries."

It is probably the first time in the history of the state rights business that a concern has planned to sell a series of features, but the Arrow organization has arranged to do this, and is doing it. No less than seven independent state right buyers have viewed these pictures during the past week, and in every case their interest has been aroused to a point of keen desire to secure the distributing rights to their territories.

Frank Zambreno, of the Unity Photoplays Company of Chicago has bought the territory for Illinois and Indiana; while Ben Amsterdam, of the Masterpiece Film Exchange, Philadelphia, has bought the territories of Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey, as well as Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and District of Columbia. The southern states of North and South Carolina, Alabama, Georgia, Florida and Tennessee have also been sold, as well as three other territories that cannot be reported at this time owing to the fact that they were sold by telegraph.

Each of these buyers are enthused over the prospects of being able to secure a series of features at one time. As one buyer expressed himself: "It does away with a lot of overhead to be able to buy a series of twelve features at one time and be able to book these same twelve features to exhibitors at one time. Think of the expense we save in salesmen's time and traveling expenses when on one trip a salesman can book the entire twelve pictures."

"Carmen of the North," Hallmark's Next

"Chains of Evidence," Frank G. Hall's late release on the famous director series, which had its pre-release showing on the Loew circuit in New York this week will be followed by "Carmen of the North," a five-reel feature, starring Anna Bos, a well-known actress of the European stages.

Gale Henry to Start on New Comedy Series

Gale Henry will start work in a few days on the first of her new series of fun films. Four weeks have been spent in preparing her first story, which is not slap-stick, she states, but a straight human comedy, with thrills, and here and there a touch of pathos. Her new contract calls for only six two-reelers a year, thus allowing her to devote about eight weeks in making each subject. Bruno J. Becker, who is general manager of her company, plans to return to the coast from New York about the first of March to supervise production.

Southern Territory Sold on "The Confession"

Joe Brandt reports that he has sold "The Confession" for North and South Carolina, Georgia, and Alabama to Savini Films, Inc. Mr. Bob Savini has already made arrangements for a premier presentation in Atlanta and reports bookings from some of the biggest theatres in these states.

Brandt reports also that the First National Exchange of New York secured the rights on "The Confession" for Greater New York, Long Island and Westchester County.

Jose Collins on List of Pioneer Stars

Jose Collins who is considered among the most beautiful women on the screen has been added to the list of stars to be presented in pictures by the Pioneer during the spring season. Miss Collins, who will be supported by Godfrey Tearle, will appear in a powerful drama of high society in the capitals of two continents.

Olive Tell Will Star in "Nothing a Year"

Olive Tell's second screen vehicle for Jans Pictures, Inc., is an adaptation from Charles Belmont Davis' well known book, "Nothing a Year." The story has been adapted for the screen by Violet Clark, and the first scenes have already been taken at the Peerless Studio at Fort Lee. Lucile Lee Stewart and Edmond Lowe take the principal supporting roles.

Northwest Rights Sold on "The Confession"

George H. Davis wired Joe Brandt that he had closed with Gus Metzger for the Equity Pictures Corporation of Portland, Oregon, for "The Confession" for the states of Washington, Oregon, Montana, Idaho and Alaska.

"Lost City" Star Took Chances

IN making a wild animal serial such as "The Lost City," which is being distributed by the Warner Brothers, not only are the serial fans afforded thrills when the production is completed, but the Director and performers, as well, not only have many thrills, but narrow escapes from death during the making of the picture.

E. A. Martin, who directed "The Lost City," tells of some interesting happenings during the production of this thrilling serial. Mr. Martin lavishes great praises on Juanita Hansen, who is starred in the production, and states that a great share of the credit for the realism of this wonderful story is due to the beautiful and equally courageous Miss Hansen, who enacts the role of the lost princess, for it was to her that the story called for the most daring chances and she met the test again and again in scenes that must have seemed more real than any spectator who views them can imagine. This is monumental testimony to her courage and the more noteworthy because of the fact that she is but a mere slip of a girl.

To illustrate her courage and coolness, Mr. Martin stated, "we were putting on a scene that called for Miss Hansen to enter an enclosure where the leopards were loose and for her to run to a place of safety with the beasts in pursuit, while men with high powered rifles were ready to kill the animals when they got very close to her. Everything was all set for the killing and the cameraman was turning the crank of his camera while Miss Hansen entered the enclosure and taunted the beasts to follow her. It did not require much coaxing and they started after her with such speed that one of them grabbed her by the dress, knocking her down before the men with the rifles had a chance to shoot without hitting her. Great excitement prevailed among the onlookers, but instead of trying to regain her feet and attempting to run away, which perhaps would have proved fatal, Miss Hansen had presence of mind to lay perfectly still on the ground while the animal stood over her, attracted by the approach of the man with a rifle, who manouvered around for a chance to shoot without injuring the star; finally, the beast was killed as it sprang at him and Miss Hansen regained her feet and was able to go right on with her work."

J. Searle Dawley Speaks—

WHILE being born in Del Norte, Colo.—spending the days of childhood in Denver and other nts in the 'Centennial State' may ve had something to do with my love r the picturesque—yet, before, I was d enough to know whether a view esented a natural scenic spectacle or t, my love for pictures manifested elf in every way.

"Long before one could decipher my eroglyphics, it was comparatively y to discern the subject of my artis- So it would seem, therefore, that was born with 'picturelust.' Al- ough I am told I was too young to member my first magic lantern, said have been presented me when of ry tender years, yet I recall vividly e desire which planted itself right en and grew as I grew—to make the aracters on those slides move; to ntinue one picture into another rap- y, and to have them connect, as a ory in a book. That I presume was e basis of my present grave regard r well done continuity.

"That in the past score of years I ve been able to commercialize my bby, has not been exactly disappoint- g.

"My introduction to the theatre came way of a minor connection with the iginal 'Faust' when Louis Morri- n interpreted to the wonder of his llowers, the role of Mephistopheles. t, there were pictures in that, too. I s only 17, and it seemed to me the aracterization of Marguerite, her in- cence, her love of right, was a pic- re in itself.

"For five years I remained with Mr. orrison—and when I finally parted mpany with 'Faust' I had become a ge director.

"Then, after spending three years in udeville, I was connected with a ck company in Brooklyn, N. Y., and was there I found another side of love for art—the writing of the y. I have written and seen pro- ced eighteen of my own plays, on the timate stage.

"About this time, however, began moving picture era, and having ned, I think, a desirable reputation he art of stage direction, I was of- ed the opportunity which gratified long hidden desire—the ability to turize a play.

"But the Edison Company, then oc- ying two rooms on Twenty-first eet, New York, were not yet ready the screen drama—so my first at- pt was a one-reel comedy, 'Nine es of a Cat,' and, looking back, it ems I must have been allotted eight re than the usual number, myself, have lived through those crude pic- re offerings. I started writing scen- ios, in order, at least in my own inion to improve the subjects, and nearly as I can recall wrote about 0, which I directed for Edison.

"There came a day when the 'mov- g picture' was developing into an in- stry, and I received an offer to direct r 'Famous Players.'

"I accepted. The first picture was one in which Minnie Maddern Fiske starred—'Tess D'Ubervilles.' Then came Mary Pickford in 'The Bishop's Carriage' and 'Caprice,' Bertha Kalish, Henry E. Dixie, Elsie Ferguson, Ann Pennington, Mary Miles Minter, Billie Burke, Alice Brady, and in all those productions with the present world known stars, the supporting companies were composed of talent which has manifested itself since to a decided degree, even to David Wark Griffith.

"My first picture presented through Paramount program was H. B. Warner in 'The Lost Paradise,' and among others which seem to have made a general appeal was 'The Lady of Quality,' in which Cecelia Loftus played the leading role.

"It seems to interest some of what I call my screen friends—but generally known as 'fans,' that John Barrymore made his screen debut under my direction in 'The American Citizen.'

"The first time I resigned as a director of Famous Players' productions, I started a company of my own, meantime directing for World, but when I returned to Famous I remained three years—in which time I directed Marguerite Clark in all but two productions in which she starred during that time.

"Just now I have completed my second picture starring Doris Kenyon, the first work I have done for a producing company lately, having devoted last summer to my own production, the story, direction and supervision all my own, 'The Phantom Honeymoon,' and am cutting 'The Harvest Moon.'

"As I stated in the beginning of this resume, perhaps the location of my birth, the growth into boyhood among nature's own pictures, inspired my love of art—but I feel that had I been born in the Limehouse district of London, my buried devotion to the artistry of 'the make-believe' would finally have become asserted. I am fond, therefore, of the homely adage, which, maybe, is sometimes inconvenient, but nevertheless irrevocable. 'Truth, crushed to earth, shall rise again.'"

Leah Baird Turns to Agricuture

LEAH BAIRD, who is starred in Louis Joseph Vance's "Cynthia-of-the-Minute," now being picturized under direction of Perry Vekroff, has become a Florida planter as a result of her three weeks' sojourn in that favored state, the principal sea scenes of "Cynthia-of-the-Minute" having been made off Tampa. Miss Baird has become the owner of 1,000 acres of sea island cotton land in Alachua county, as a result of the activities of Florida land salesmen, but Miss Baird was aided and abetted in her purchase by Arthur F. Beck, her producer, who has always had a longing eye on Florida as a place of winter residence.

"The dogs were supposed to attack Mukoki, the Indian," says Vitagraph. "To insure action on their part raw meat and fish had been hidden in the actor's clothing.

Invention Accredited to Frank D. Williams

An invention accredited to Frank D. Williams, cameraman for Sessue Hayakawa, is the subject of a report from the offices of Robertson-Cole. The statement says of the reported invention:

"Mr. Williams is able to show an actor in two roles at one and the same time, standing behind himself or crossing in front of himself.

"A further object of the invention is to be enabled to place an object such as an actor upon a background before which he has not been disposed. Thus a person may be shown in a room upon which he is not actually positioned or in which he has not actually been."

Constance Binney in Chicago Americanization Campaign

Lending every possible aid to Secretary Lane's appeal to the motion picture industry for an Americanization campaign, Constance Binney, screen star of "Erstwhile Susan," recently welcomed Captain Eddie Rickenbacker's famous battle plane to Chicago where it was placed on exhibition in the Coliseum.

The exhibition was the first aeronautical show held in Chicago and an occasion for stimulating pride in the part taken by this country in the war and for combating influences of foreign propaganda and social unrest.

Captain Rickenbacker's battle plane, bearing twenty-four black crosses indicating the number of enemy flyers vanquished, was the feature attraction at the exhibition. In addition it bore twenty-two other black crosses patched over the rents torn by German bullets.

Dressed in a new aviation costume of leather, Miss Binney visited the exhibition on its opening day. She watched the machine being placed in position and was photographed several times as she inspected its battle scars. Then she chatted with Sergeant Daniel Poirier, who served as hostler for the plane during the eight months of its war service.

The plane is a 13-type Spad equipped with a 40 horse-power Hispano-Suiza motor, and was the most distinguished of all that flew over the German lines. It was the center of attraction in a large brood of army and navy planes and some of the newer peacock planes of fashion.

Captain Eddie Rickenbacker appeared personally during the show on "Rickenbacker Day" and related the history of the plane with descriptions of numerous of the battles in which it had been engaged.

Miss Binney's consent to appear held particular interest for Chicagoans as her first Realart production, "Erstwhile Susan," had played only the week previously at the Tivoli [illegible]atre and the new screen star had been enthusiastically received. She was at the time of the exhibition playing an engagement in "39 East," her current stage success, at the Princess Theatre.

Miss Binney's initial Realart production, "Erstwhile Susan," presents a new and typically American girl to theatre patrons.

Even in these days this set to be used for the Paramount-Artcraft production, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," with John Barrymore, is notable

Personal and Otherwise

Jane Jennings, who has been playing important "mother" roles for Famous Players, has just returned from a well-earned vacation spent in the Catskill Mountains. Metropolitan air seems rather heavy, and Metropolitan snow rather soiled, after the glorious scenes she has left, she says.

Mildred Reardon is among the important arrivals at the Hotel Astor.

Hugh Thompson has signed a contract with Goldwyn for three pictures, and has already left for Los Angeles. His first part will be opposite Mabel Normand. We can't think of any one who commences work on new pictures quite so soon after completing current ones as Mr. Thompson does. The discovery that he must leave New York within twenty-four hours after signing his latest contract, in spite of the fact that there were still some re-takes to be made on "Cynthia of the Minute" which Perry Vekroff was cutting, must have been quite an ordinary experience for the very much in demand leading man. He's always doing things like that, and as usual he worked cheerfully all night on the supposedly finished picture, and departed the next morning, wishing that he could pass the entire trip to the coast in his berth.

Eugene O'Brien and Rubye DeRemer and Company have returned from Alexandria Bay, where the exteriors for "A Fool and His Money" were made. They talk very differently about New York from those fortunate ones who journey away to New Orleans and Palm Beach and such enticing spots.

J. Searle Dawley has finished the Artco production of "The Harvest Moon," starring Doris Kenyon.

Last Week We Met—Max Mayer

THE youngster who by force of circumstance is deprived of a college or technical school education should find plenty of facts in the short history of Max Mayer's life to assuage his grief and start him on again to success.

Back in New York a number of years ago there was a boy who might have longed for a college education, and all that goes with it had he not realized that such a thing was entirely outside the realm of possibility. Knowing this and rather than sit back and give up in despair, the youngster made plans to get what schooling he could in any available way. First, he attended the Hebrew Technical Institute, one of the finest vocational training schools in America. Here he mastered the rudiments of mechanics and specialized later in electricity. This much was merely a starter. After graduation the young man found work to do in the daytime in order to help finance his attendance at night schools, special lecture courses, and other founts of knowledge. Wherever learning was dispensed gratis, there young Mayer could be found.

All of these excursions into the schools of learning had one purpose behind them. He was endeavoring to further his quest into the deep and many sided subject of electricity.

In 1891 Max Mayer allied himself with the firm of Scott Electrical Manufacturing Company, makers of photo-engraving lamps and searchlights. Here he obtained his first interest in the business in which he has attained so great a measure of success. For let us digress at this point long enough to mention that the subject of this sketch is the senior partner of the firm of M. J. Wohl & Co., manufacturers of a line of photo-engraving lamps and studio lights that are known throughout every country on the globe. But more of this later.

It was about this time that he became interested in the development of X-Rays. The firm with which he was connected formed the nucleus of the subsequent United Wireless Company. It was in the work for this firm, and while experimenting with X-Rays that Mayer injured his hand. These X-Ray burns, probably were the first burns from this source in this country.

One of the most persistent traits of Mayer has been his adherence to a method of free-lancing. In other words, he has been a sort of "soldier of fortune" in the engineering field. He would always take a job with any firm which held out to him a hope of fresh fields to conquer in the way of facts. As a usual thing, once the processes peculiar to these different jobs had been mastered, and the finer points stowed away in his brain for later use, he left to seek new battling grounds. A rolling stone may gather no moss, but it is certain that a roving scientist picks up a lot of useful information. At least it has worked out that way in Max Mayer's case.

While talking over some of the present-day problems of the engineer, Mr. Mayer lamented the fact that it had not been possible for him to secure a technical school or college education. But as far as he himself is concerned it does not appear that such a course could have bettered his fund of knowledge. At the meetings of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, of which organization he is vice-president, he is always prepared to discuss with intelligence almost any subject that is brought up and to enter into spirited controversy with specialists in their lines. On the other hand, he is ever ready to admit his ignorance when his opinion is asked upon a subject about which he knows little. And the latter trait, as some philosopher has stated, is the true test of a man's knowledge.

In a technical discussion with Mayer it is instantly apparent that the man has picked up an astonishing amount of experimental data, seemingly gathered from every industry and every nook and corner of each industry, and furthermore that he has arranged the data so gathered, in an orderly manner which makes it extremely simple for him to recollect facts when called upon. This kind of experience has given him reasoning powers that are almost uncanny in their analysis of problems.

And yet he is not free-spoken. In fact, he is inclined to reticence. There is no snap judgment with him. He holds back until his fast working mind has analyzed the various phases of the problems, and then, not until then, does he give a decision. As one prominent official of a producing concern said, "Mayer's one besetting sin is his conservatism; but when he says 'O. K.' you are 100 per cent. safe in going ahead with the proposition.

News Notes

W. E. Hubbard, studio representative of the Cooper-Hewitt Company, breezed into the office some days ago, and reported that business in Cooper-Hewitt's is more than hustling. With all producers erecting their own studios in New York and vicinity, it is difficult to see how his business could be otherwise.

The new factory of the M. J. Wohl & Co. is located at Payntar avenue and Hancock street, Long Island City.

Further shortage in projectors! A cable just received by the Nicholas Power Company, advises that the S. S. Marne, which sailed from New York in the early part of the year, carrying a consignment of Power's machines was scuttled by fire and sunk off the coast of Cristobal, Panama.

herokee is none other than the typical small n of the middle west. Situated in the center the farming district it is, nevertheless, of con- rable importance as a railroad center, with nd-house and work shops.

et Cherokee has never had a first class motion ure theatre. Messrs. Sisk and James realized fact back in 1916 when they purchased the old erican and from the first had visions of a fine amusement place that would take its place with best in any town. On January 1 of this year old American was closed in order that its own- could give their entire time to the construction the new house by the same name.

rchitect G. L. Lockhart of St. Paul was retained raw up plans for the structure which was to $100,000. Later, in order to take care of addi- al details and refinements the outlay was in- ased 50 per cent. to $150,000.

comfortable body-fitting types. Under each seat will be placed a mush-room ventilating head which will furnish the house with all the fresh air it needs without causing a draught in any section.

Comfort for patrons will be assured to a considerable degree by an ample lighting system for all aisles.

The orchestra pit is to be placed below the level of the audience and will be great enough in size to accommodate a 30-piece orchestra. Messrs. Sisk and James have placed an order with the W. W. Kimball Organ Co., for a $10,000 organ of late design. Both the size of the orchestra and the organ are unusual in a community theatre the size of the American.

As it is thought possible that the entertainment offered at the American may consist in part of vaudeville, provisions have been made for these features. The stage itself is large enough to care for the most extensive of vaudeville acts and is also large enough to lend itself well to the use of special scenery and stage effects in connection with photoplays. The front curtain will be of purple plush and the picture screen will be a Gold King.

Lighting and its effects have been considered and accorded much attention. In the center of the auditorium ceiling will be a mammoth dome studded with lights. These lights, as well as those in the usual fixtures will be controled by dimmers. The fixtures and shades are to be made by the Beardsless-Chandelier Co., and the National X-Ray Co.

Offices

Between the balcony and the lobby on the second floor will be found a suite of three modern business offices equipped with the latest types of furniture.

Theatre Front

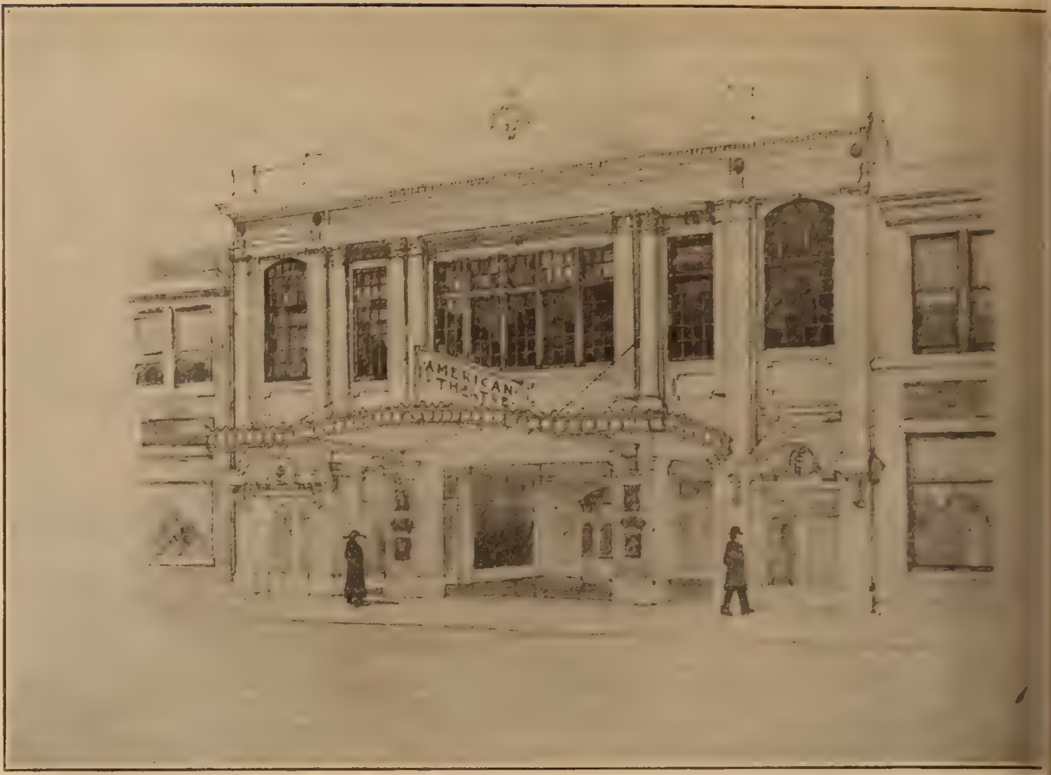
According to the architect's specifications the front of the theatre is to be finished in pressed brick with ornamental Terra Cotta of a cream color. The coping at the top will be constructed of glazed tile. Over the Marquee of ornamental iron and glass will be the big electric sign. This sign will consist of the word "AMERICAN" with a large American flag waving above it.

Around the base of the ticket office and the two small stores in front will be a wainscoating of Marble Verte Marin. The ticket office will be equipped with automatic ticket venders, change makers and ticket choppers. The two small stores will contain a cut-flower shop and a "palace of sweets." Floors in these places and throughout the front will consist of Ludowici Celadon dark red tile laid in black mortar.

Projection Room

Especial attention seems to have been given the "heart of the theatre," i.e., the projection room. Most architects are prone to leave this room to the last. In fact in many cases it appears as if the projection room were left entirely out of calculations until the remainder of the theatre had been completed.

Berry Sisk and Walter James



Architect's drawing of the American Theatre as it will appear when completed

But both Architect Lockhart and the owners of the new American have shown their wisdom in planning for an ample, well equipped machine room. For a theatre of the size of the American the layout is unusually fine and the contention of the owners that "it is the best in the state and even in the country" may be substantiated.

The projectors have already been selected and will be two De Luxe Motiographs. Direct current to operate these machines will be converted from the town supply by a Transverter. Other essential equipment will be the enclosed motor driven rewind, a spot light with color wheel and a complete Mazda incandescent with switchboard to be held in reserve in the event that it is necessary to use alternating current. There will also be installed a specially designed change-over device, electrically operated, which as yet has not been made known to the trade at large. The room be absolutely fire-proof and sound proof, the l essential being helped by the plate glass encl ports through which the picture will be proje

The officers of the corporation behind the tion of the new American are: President, W James; Secretary and Treasurer, Berry Sisk; rectors, F. C. Huber, R. P. Williams and L Clark, the latter three being business mer Cherokee.

Perfect Theatre, Huntington, Ind.

THE illustrations on this and the following page show two views of the Perfect theatre which was opened just previous to the first of the year. This new house has been highly praised by all who have had an opportunity to see it and the general feeling is that the owners, Perfect Bros., have given Huntington a motion picture theatre of high rating.

The house seats 624 on the main floor and 221 in the balcony. Entrance to the balcony is gained by a short flight of stairs leading off from the main floor in the lobby.

A color scheme of old rose, ivory and blue has been employed throughout the theatre and its decorations.

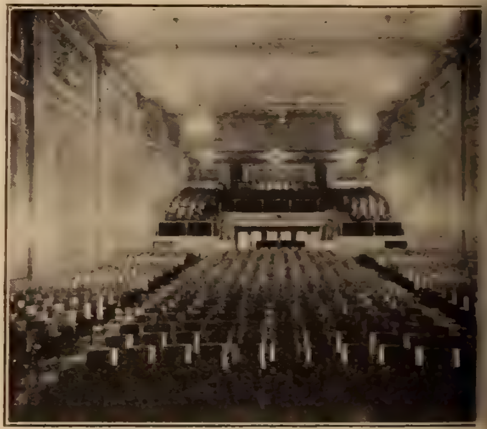
Under the lobby and foyer, entered by stairs on either side just back of the last row of seats are the rest room, with drinking fountain and telephone booths. Leading from the rest room is the office of the manager and the theatre store-room.

The ladies' rest room is along the south wall.

Flooring material is Terazza with the exception of the steps leading to the basement which are of marble. A small stage about 18 feet in length and 6 feet in depth can be used for speakers, singers and special scenic effects. Orchestra room and dressing accommodations are below the stage.

The projection room is 16x22 with an 8 ft. ceiling. Reinforced concrete has been used for the floor and brick for the walls. Two Powers 6B projectors, a spot light, with a Hallberg motor generator make up the equipment for the projection room. In addition to the foregoing there is also a Compensarc for use in case of emergency.

At either end of the projection room are rooms, 16x8. One of them is used for the toilet req ments of the projectionists and the other for storage of supplies.



Auditorium of new Perfect Theatre

The owners of the Perfect take especial in its lighting arrangements. There are ten ch liers, each one carrying six long candle l Three of these are bright lights and the other are green, red and blue connected to and cont by dimmers. Illumination for the auditorium ing the showing of a picture is accomplished diffuser at the bottom of each chandelier. diffusers throw the light directly downward the aisles and seats.

Equipment Operating — Projection — Question Answerec

Why Ballast Resistance Is Used with Motor Generator Sets

Explaining the Part Played by Grids in Maintaining a Steady Arc

MUCH has been written concerning ballast resistance, where it is to be placed, how its rating is to be determined and what happens to the arc if ballast is not inserted in the circuit. But the why of ballast resistance has scarcely been touched upon in publications which are read by the projectionist. Although this knowledge may not be strictly necessary to the successful operation of a projectionist machine, yet the man who can explain it has advanced one more degree in his mastery of projection room equipment.

If the projector arc was operated from a circuit fed by a constant current generator there would be no need for ballast resistance. When the current at the arc changed the dynamo would automatically care for the change without attention on the part of the projectionist. Under such conditions the arc would be stable at all times.

But, unfortunately for us, all our supply systems are fed by constant potential sources, where the voltage is supposed to be the same whatever the current demand. Because of this, ballast resistance becomes a necessity. But why? This is the explanation:

Suppose, for example, the voltage used is 50 and the current 50 for a given length of arc. We will assume that a 50-volt generator is supplying us with current, therefore there seems to be no need for ballast.

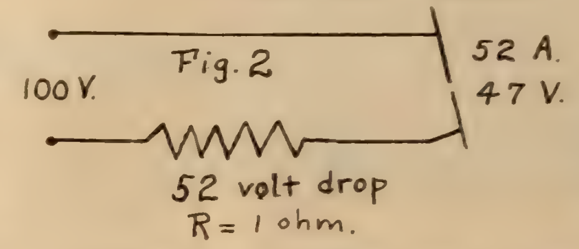
But suddenly for one of several reasons the current in the arc increases. The voltage required for the new current is less than the 50 volts of the generator. Then, instead of the current remaining at its new increased value, it keeps on going higher because at each step the voltage supplied is greater than is required to maintain the current.

This process would keep on until the current became so large as to burn out the dynamo.

On the other hand, if the current had decreased from 50 amps., the new condition would have called for more than 50 volts or more than the generator was producing. In this case the potential would be too little to sustain the arc and it would be extinguished. So much for what happens when an arc is operated on the usual constant potential circuit without ballast resistance. The next step is to determine the minimum dynamo voltage which will give a satisfactory arc with ballast resistance.

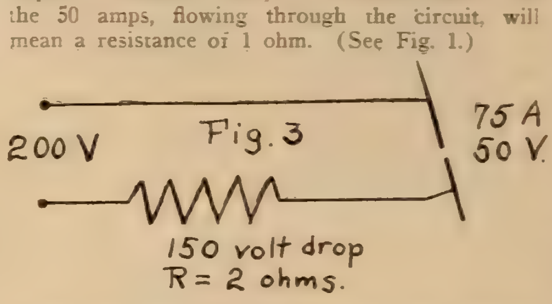
In the first place, it is easily seen that the voltage of the generator must be higher than that demanded by the arc. This much was conceded in the previous paragraph. But how much greater this voltage must be is the problem.

This resistance which is inserted in series with the arc must be great enough so that if the current at the arc increases (which means a decrease in voltage at this point) the increased drop in voltage through the ballast must be greater than the decrease at the arc. If this condition is not met, the arc will be supplied a greater voltage than is needed for the new value of current and the latter will mount upward another step. Under certain circumstances this step-by-step method would continue until the fuses in the supply circuit were blown. Before this happened, however, weak points in other parts of the arc circuit such as under-sized conductors or poor connections would show up due to the large increase in amperage.



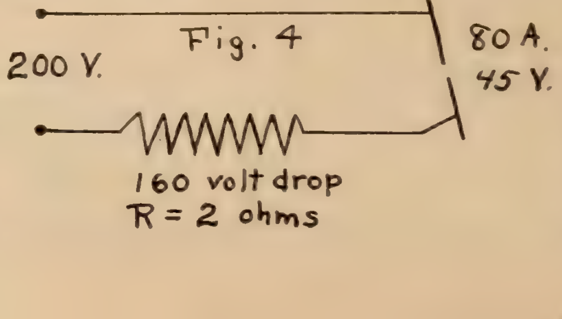
A concrete example of a circuit having too little ballast may be of help in explaining what happens under certain conditions. The figures may not be exact since they have been merely assumed to make computations as simple as possible.

Suppose the service at our disposal is a constant potential one at 100 volts. Our picture will require 50 amps. at the arc. The E. M. F. to hold this arc is found to be 50 volts. We will then require a rheostatic drop of 50 volts, which, with the 50 amps, flowing through the circuit, will mean a resistance of 1 ohm. (See Fig. 1.)



But now after the arc is started and running smoothly, our failure to feed it causes the current to increase to 52 amperes. Of course, the voltage drops to a new E. M. F. of 47, for example. Immediately the entire relation between the various elements of the circuit is altered. (Fig. 2.)

For instance, our 1 ohm rheostat is carrying 52 amps. instead of 50. This means a voltage drop within the resistance of 52 volts. Since there is no other appreciable resistance in the circuit, the E. M. F. at the arc will get the remainder of the voltage, or 48 volts. But at an amperage of 52, such an arc requires only 47 volts, which means that in attempt to maintain a stable circuit the current will increase beyond 52 amperes.



On the other hand (Fig. 3), suppose we take a 200-volt supply line and connect it to a 50-volt, 30-ampere arc. The drop in the resistanc be 150 volts; the resistance will be 5 ohms. denly the current changes to 32 amperes arc E. M. F. of 48 volts. With a 5 ohm res the drop in potential at the rheostat will 160, which allows but 40 volts at the arc. Fig. 4.) Thus in this case the conditions f bility are maintained since the drop at the rl is 10 volts compared with but 2 at the arc. will be no attempt on the part of the curr mount higher because of this excessive drop other parts of the system.

Perhaps the figures which have been as in the examples are not those usually encou in practical operation, but they serve here a as others would to illustrate the several under discussion. Fortunately for the proje ist, it is seldom necessary for him to compu design of a rheostat suitable for his proj requirements as generally, his current deman well within limits of arc stability. But the going explanation should assist him to a omplete understanding of the part played electrical system by the series arc resistance

Economizers in Multipl

R. V. P., Ind.:—

About two months ago I asked you for in tion on my transformer connections. At tha I was using a Fort Wayne compensarc Hallberg economizer in series. You told use two transformers that were alike, in m I then ordered another Hallberg, but ceiving it, found that it was larger than th one. The old one is rated at 30, 40 and 50 am and the new at 50 and 60. If I set both amperes, will it be safe to use them in mult

I am enclosing diagram of my connection would like to add an ammeter and voltmet possible only one set for both arcs, using Switches. Could you show me the best pla this?

Am using two Simplexes and making ch over with the dowsers, but anyone watching ly for the change can see it. Where could a dissolving device similar to that used on double stereopticons and on motion picture eras?

Do you know of any school or college teaches advanced motion picture projection

If possible, please send me a carbon co your reply to the above. I will, of course, be to pay your charge for same if you will just the amount.

Reply: The Hallberg Electric Co. has ac us that you should have no trouble in using two economizers as you suggest, keeping regulating switches on the "50" mark. A have said before, any projectionist is accepti element of chance when he elects to conne two transformers in multiple because—an have often said this—two transformers to in multiple must be well matched. That is, must be similarly designed with similar char istics. In your particular case the designers stated that the two devices should work sat torily, although outwardly they are slightly ferent in appearance and design.

Your diagram has been returned with pen connections for the instruments. A copy of not reproduced here because the hook-up nothing particularly new.

We don't see why you should have trouble your dissolving. Examine your closely to s the device is regulated so that the incoming chine is cut in just as the first machine is out. You can buy and probably use a cine era dissolving device on your machines, bu cost would be all out of proportion when

Mysterious Optical Trouble

W. K., NEW YORK:—

I am a constant reader of the NEWS, especially the Projection Department, and think it very helpful to the operator.

I agree with the writer the punch is a menace to films. It is something mighty good in its place, but surely its place is not in the booth. The only thing that will eliminate punch marks on films is "Team Work," and it seems as if our field is so large that it is almost impossible to create spirit enough in such a mass of operators to take care of something they consider other people's property. However, I think that film in your care is in reality yours. Surely you can do no harm to the films without showing effect on your own screen. I feel as if the exchange could do a little more to eliminate this menace—possibly a little force could be used. It makes the real operator—the operator who takes pride in his work, feel a hurt to show a reel full of punch marks. Now I think that the city man is as much to blame for the work of the punch as the small town man. Though I am a New York operator, still I cannot lay the blame on the small town for several reasons. One being that quite a few small town theatres have only one machine, and the operator does not have any need for the marks, and again, the film is usually "doctored up" enough by the time he gets it should he have two machines.

Recently I was in a booth using two Powers 6 B machines. One machine which seemed to be in splendid order and had a fine spot at the aperture and the lenses were clean, still there was a mysterious blur or soft focus on the screen. It was not the film, because it did not show while the other machine was working. After the show I removed the obj. lenses and found no visible trouble after taking them apart. I assembled it again and as yet have had no trouble of the same kind. Could it be possible that one section, or lens of the series of lenses, could have been so misplaced by a jar or knock of some kind to make it out of focus?

International Projection Association Elects Officers

THE annual elections of the Association were held on Monday night, February 9th. A number of the officers were re-elected and other members were chosen to fill the positions made vacant. The results were A. Polin, President; R. E. Weiss, Vice President; W. Guth, Treasurer; P. Finelli, Secretary, and that well known member from the I. P. A. Circuit, Larry DeBella, Sergeant-at-Arms. The Board of Trustees will be composed of W. Gluck, Chairman; R. Curry and E. McD. Bendheim.

It is the intention of the new set of officers to continue the Social and Educational policies of the Club, and they promise in addition to bring forth many innovations and elaborations of the previous scheme of things.

The House Committee has not delayed a minute, and was able to report that they we making arrangements for a House Party to ta place on Saturday night, February 21st whi they expected would make the members, th folks, and guests sit up and take notice.

The Educational Committee, which was alwa a good one, and has done very much towa making membership a profitable and enjoyal one was not to be outdone. They were able announce that they had persuaded Bro. Will Smith, General Manager of the Nicholas Pow Co., to give a Lecture on a Subject of interest Operators, and especially so to PROJECTIO ISTS. The lecture will be given on Saturd midnight, Feb. 14th, and will be the first one a series to be delivered during 1920. The co mittee tells us that Bro. Smith has a surpr in store for us, and knowing him well we exp SOME SURPRISE.

Any licensed operator, or others interested projection are invited to attend. Notices of otl lectures to follow, the subject, and the lectu will be announced from time to time.

Some Queries

A. H., Oregon: Will you please send me all information you have on licensing operators. they require it in some states? Can you give the fundamental principles of the questions or examination an operator would be required take?

Reply: The licensing laws are exceedingly and far from being standardized. In most ca we believe, the licensing is done by the munici authorities. In many instances, particularly in smaller towns there seems to be no ordinance this subject.

We have no information on this subject bey that just given. It is impossible to gather information from the 10,000 or more municip ties in the country and keep it up to date.

There are no fundamental questions that can given. The applicant should be well posted on subjects with which he may come in contact

Los Angeles, Cal.

Gentlemen:
We wish to advise that the Type CS, three phase Westinghouse motor generator set purchased from you in May 1917, has been in daily use.

Since its installation it has not cost us one cent for repairs, and is in as good condition as the day we put it in.

We have been told that our projection compares favorably with that of any house in the Southwest, and we do know that we have been free from the light troubles of the average small town showman.

We expect to open a house in new territory within the next year, and will be very glad to install one of your generators when the time comes.

Very truly,
E. L. Franck

ing his work. Look back to the Feb. 7 issue of the NEWS. A list of subjects was given there that will help you to determine the breadth of your knowledge.

W. M. O'D., Michigan: Is the incandescent equipment satisfactory for a 9 x 12 picture at 75 feet. What size lens should be used and where can it be obtained?

Reply: When the control equipment has been slightly improved there is no reason why the Mazda should not be a success with that size picture on a 75-foot throw. In fact the latter item of "throw" has very little to do with it. If the incandescent will properly illuminate a picture at 75 feet it will illuminate a similar sized screen at 150 feet. Because except for dust particles, caused by dirt and smoke there is no loss in light while travelling through atmosphere.

Your lens should be of 6¼-in. E. F. to project the proper size of picture. This lens may be purchased at any theatre supply house.

Intermittent Notes

G. Edward Sheils, Buffalo theatre, Braeholm, W. Va., adds a valuable bit of experience to "The care of the Intermittent," an article which appeared several weeks ago. In his letter he says:

Enclosed you will find my application for membership in the N. A. M. L., also an article on the "Power's Intermittent," which I have written in reply to the letter of (W. H. S., Geneseo, Ill.)

I noticed in the December 27th issue that he had a (cracking good) intermittent. He is not by himself in that respect, for nine-tenths of the smaller house projectionists have the same trouble. And very often one finds a (cracking good) intermittent in the booth of the larger house.

And while I am at it here is a question that you might be able to answer, although it is a little out of your line. Is there any chemical that will prevent paste from freezing before it dries on the billboard?

To (W. H. S.) Geneseo, Ill:

In your article that appeared in the NEWS, Dec. 27th, I see that you have a "cracking good" intermittent.

When I went into the booth I made up my mind that I was going to learn all that there was to know about a projector. That was ten years ago—and today I am still learning many things.

However, I learned sometime ago that all cracking noises are not caused by an improperly adjusted intermittent. Such noises may also be attributed to insufficient or over tension and to the varying condition of the film.

All intermittents (that work in oil) should produce no cracking noise. When accurately adjusted, and working under load they should give forth a sound similar to a dead thud, barely audible at a distance from four to six feet from the projector, providing the film is in normal condition and all tension is correct.

The intermittent is the heart of your projector, and you are the attending physician. so (GO EASY DOC.)

You may read all of the literature, relating to projectors, that has been published, but from the mass of it you only get general ideas of that which you wish to know. "Practice makes perfect"—so get busy.

And in addition to the answer that was give you in the NEWS, let me advise that when bushing No. 670 is raised or lowered, bushing No. 671 must be moved correspondingly, and the play between pin and cam should be barely perceptible to the sense of touch.

Keep the intermittent casing full of heavy oil. For the Power's projector I find "motorcycle crank-case oil" best for this purpose, and I have used all of the various oils that are on the market.

When your intermittent has been correctly adjusted, the next thing to do is get proper tension on the film.

You will notice that when you close the gate on a Power's projector, the left side of the "tension shoe" strikes the "aperture plate track" before the right side touches, and when the gate is closed this causes excessive tension on the left side of the film.

This accounts for nine-tenths of the "stripped sprocket hole" trouble.

To overcome this trouble simply remove the gate and hinge complete from the head. From a piece of fibre 1-8th or 3-16ths of an inch in thickness, cut and form a piece in the shape of the hinge base. Insert this between the hinge base and the head, thus reducing the angle at which the gate closes, and insuring a more uniform tension on both sides of the film.

The Nicholas Power Co. manufacture two types of tension shoe. You will find that the long type shoe will give better results and a longer life.

If there is any point in this article that will help you in getting better results, I will feel that the time in writing it has been well spent.

Reply: We know that W. H. S. will appreciate your contribution, also many others who have been troubled with the same noise.

But are you quite right about the difference in tension as exerted by the tension shoes? As you say, the gate on the Power's is so designed that when it is closed the left tension shoe is the first to bear against the film. This is so because the arc through which it travels while the gate is being closed is considerably less than that covered by the tension shoe on the right. But when the gate is fully closed the two shoes should be parallel (providing they have had the correct and equal adjustment) and being parallel they should exert the same pressure.

Sorry we can't help you out on that "anti-freeze dope." Perhaps some of our readers who have had to put up bills in the cold states will come forward with some solution that will help you.

We have a sufficient supply of labels on hand to take care of all requests immediately. Before you run out of a supply send a post card for a new stock. Then don't fail to put them on all outgoing films.

Every Motion Picture Should be Properly Projected

It is not the pictures alone that control your patronage and fill your theatre with a large, enthusiastic audience, for if the pictures do not appear on your screen clear and flickerless they lose half their value.

Give theatre-goers the joy of seeing a perfectly projected picture. You can easily do this by employing in your machine SPEER PROJECTOR CARBONS.

Musical Alertness

"ONE hears much music in the movies that is as foreign to the action on the screen as anything could be and frequently actually kills the effect of the photographer's art."

The above is an extract from an article published in "Musical Accompaniment of Moving Pictures," issued by the Boston Music Company of Boston, Mass.

I have very often heard one fellow say to another, "You're seeing things." What does this mean? In my estimation it's a refined translation of "Brother, you're crazy."

Inappropriate music actually kills the photographer's art, or in plain English, "rotten music can kill the best picture." Music in conjunction with the photoplay is of such importance that if not properly employed it can easily create an atmosphere to overpower the predominating part of the show—the picture. Music can make a drama of a comedy and vice versa. Yes, sir it can make anybody "see things," in other words, it can get you "crazy." No matter what you say, do or play there must be a time, place and opportunity for everything. The same applies to all things in life. Every audience quickly adjusts itself to the character of the picture. They laugh, cry, sigh, travel and feel with the action on the screen. Your music must appeal to the majority, and it must fit the action.

There is no doubt but that the facts in the above paragraphs are 100 per cent. true, but still you can hear musicians jazz dramas and dramatize comedies every day. Why? What is the cause of this situation? The logical answer to this question would be, "Lack of experience and musical alertness." To analyze the word "alertness" in conjunction with music for the photoplay, would fill one hundred volumes.

In the interest of "Better Music for the Film," I respectfully refer every musician employed in this particular field of the gigantic motion picture industry, to an article on practical manual, entitled "Musical Accompaniment of Moving Pictures," on sale at all the leading music houses in the country.

THE EDITOR.

Cannibal Music

CAN any musician intelligently explain what Cannibal music really is? I have had the opportunity to select musical programs for a great many pictures, portraying scenes in the South Sea Islands, and in every instance I found that it is very hard to select music from present music libraries, for the above purpose.

In every case I had to resort to Oriental characteristic music, which to my mind is a fifty-fifty proposition. Oriental music does not live-up to the characteristic emotions of South Sea cannibals. Musically speaking, Oriental music doesn't possess the rough, vigorous strains of cannibalistic emotions. The weird and minor characteristics of Oriental music are by no means appropriate m for cannibal pictures. The same applies to m written in major keys. I believe it would b good idea to write a number constructed in sc of whole tones.

Mr. Sol P. Levy, who is known to every music in the picture game, has recently composed a n ber which he calls "A Cannibal Carnival," after hearing this number in manuscript form came to the conclusion that it is possible to w such a thing as "Cannibal music." This numbe constructed on whole tone scales, and is absolu distinct in type and doesn't remind you of Orie music.

I believe Mr. Levy struck a new idea, and I really anxious to see how musicians will accept original masterpiece.

The Barton Organ

TRADE MARK REG.

Every Exhibitor Should Know About Organs

Do you know the difference in the principle employed in unified organ construction from straight organ construction?

What duplexing in organs means?

How many organ "stops" can be derived from a few organ "pipes"?

How to analyze a pipe organ to find the real value?

That organ designers have long tried for an organ with greater playing possibilities without complicating or changing the standard playing methods?

The answers to these questions are vital to every exhibitor to enable him to get the greatest value for the money invested—in high-grade material, musical excellence and cost to maintain and operate.

We believe every exhibitor should know "organs" the same as he knows films. Our catalogue—written in simple, not technical language, explains all the development of organ design, including a concise description of a new invention which has multiplied by 100-fold the musical possibilities of any organist without changing the standard style of organ playing familiar to every organ scholar.

THE BARTON DIVIDED MANUAL

takes the place of the highly-technical, nerve-strung, hard-to-manage, eccentric, high-salaried and hard-to replace operator.

Gives any organist the possibility of playing beautiful combinations of never-ending variety to fit every situation in pictures without special schooling or training.

Makes possible thousands of new and "never-before heard" combinations of tonal beauty beyond description. Puts the "Different" in organs.

"The Charming Mrs. Chase"

Mrs. Sidney Drew Comedy—Two Reels—Pathe)

HE void left among the exponents of the more polite comedy screen artists by the death of Sid- Drew seems in a fair way to be filled by the vent to the screen of John Cumberland in this, e first of a series of pictures founded on the mous "After Thirty" stories by Julian Street. rangely enough it is Mrs. Sidney Drew who pre- ns Mr. Cumberland in this series which is indi- tive of the fact that many of us who have in e past figured this lady more or less of a figure- ad in filmland have not given credit where credit as due. At any rate "The Charming Mrs. Chase" a "charming" light comedy founded on the idea at after one reaches the age of thirty "looking r thrills" is altogether too much trouble. Cum- rland does much with his role of the husband o after reaching the period of gray hair and a und form begins to get a little interested in other woman." The degrees of his interest in charming Mrs. Chase from the time he meets r at a dinner until the end of a "luncheon for o" are told as forcibly by the varying expres- ns on the actor's face as if words were used for purpose. Of course it is the comedy vein that kept to the fore at all times and at this art Mr. mberland proves himself a past master. In fact registering his laugh-making emotions in so tle a manner is where the picture excels since basic idea of the thing sort of misses fire or least has to resort to subtitles to make it's point h the audience.

However the combination of Mr. Cumberland's ing, Mrs. Drew's continuity with it's cleverly itten titles and the humorous idea itself is re- nsible for a bit of entertainment which will ase the majority of most audiences.

t is a clean, wholesome two reels of entertain- nt that promises much in the future from the ne source.—J. S. DICKERSON.

rst of the Ford "Torchy" Stories

hnny Hines—Two Reels—Master Films, Inc.)

HE first of the "Torchy" stories with Johnny Hines in the leading role is interesting and el, but it does not seem to us to be as good as it ht have been with a better selection for orchy." Johnny Hines' work is finished, too hed and he is far too old for the role and looks The incident provided for this unique charac- by Sewell Ford and the titles used are great, but ies in putting them over comes perilously near ressing an audience with the feeling that he ds a first-class trouncing for being a "smart ck." The reason for this is the evident im- sibility of the star to register the boy in his is. You get the feeling that the "Torchy" of picture with the evident resourcefulness and brains that he has wouldn't be looking for a job as an office boy but would be hiring them. When he attends the ball as coat room attendant you can't help but think that he would be more apt to be there as a professional dancer.

However, there is so much that is new and novel provided in the way of incident, the picture has been given such careful production and the titles are so original that this picture is sure to meet with a good reception. With all its one great fault it is still miles above the average two reeler that we have been getting for a couple of years back.—J. S. DICKERSON.

Three Gayety Comedies

(Two Reels Each)

THREE fairly original ideas are contained in these latest comedies from the Gayety lots, "Bedlam," "A Saphead's Sacrifice," and "Dry and Thirsty." The first mentioned details the trouble a married man may meet if he attempts to be flirtatious. He should be careful when following the girls that no cameraman is in sight else his adventure may be recorded and revealed at the local 'opry house. So Mr. Husband thinks that he is unobserved when he follows a couple of artist models to their studio. His subsequent humiliation when he is thrown out of the building is also recorded. The picture moves forward spontaneously until the action is unfolded again—the action that the cameraman has caught. Then it becomes repetitious. However it unfolds a bit of humor and a good lesson to husbands who are inclined to be flirtatious. The benedicts should always be sure that cameras, kodaks and cops are not in sight. The husband in this case is a little inoffensive chap. Such a type is generally the worst sinner of all.

"A Saphead's Sacrifice" deals with a fellow who finds himself compromised with a newly-wedded couple wherever he turns. The meek wife is married to a big Kentucky colonel and the third party is always stumbling into the private chambers of the bridal pair, particularly when the bride is absent and the groom is in deep slumber. The innocent adventurer is frightened out of his wits because the husband has warned him on the sleeper. When the hotel is reached he is assigned to the same room that the couple occupies. And he tumbles into bed with his nemesis. And so on. Plenty of comedy highlights here and all of them deftly introduced so that the risque note is absent —unless you WANT to look for it. The picture is played in a serious manner which emphasizes its humorous values. The wife doesn't figure much in the situations. The plot is weakened naturally, but the salacious points are eliminated as a result. Billy Fletcher and Vera Reynolds are the principle funmakers.

"Dry and Thirsty" employs the dream situation around the prohibition idea. The hero being fond of liquor goes to a "bootlegger's" to obtain it. He is also fond of flirting and his eyes cannot behave when he sees the wife of the prohibitionist. Complications ensue and then the grand awakening. Just a fair comedy.—LAURENCE REID.

"Alarm Clock Andy"

(Ince-Paramount-Artcraft)

T'S an easy thing to write a "criticism" of a new Charles Ray picture, particularly if you're a Ray fan—and most everyone is. Ray has capitalized on a type of character that isn't duplicated by other actors and his impersonations of the boyish yokel from the small town who goes to the city with a lot of bashful tendencies and then, through a girl, gets imbued with pep and hustle and wins out, always fascinates and pleases the public.

His latest picture is "Alarm Clock Andy" and it follows the same general idea as have all his pictures in the last year or two. This time he sells auto trucks and has a hard time of it. Afflicted with stuttering and excessive shyness only falling in love with the boss' daughter gives him incentive to make a new try at success. Just by chance he meets a big buyer of trucks, through a mistake is introduced as a well known "star" salesman, gives the impression that he isn't anxious to sell which makes the other man wish to buy, and in the end clinches the order, girl and all.

Ray plays the role well and injects a number of good laughs into the action. Millicent Fisher is the girl and Tom Guise and other capable players are in the supporting cast.

"The Heart Snatcher"

(Sunshine Comedy—Two Reels—Fox)

HERE is a slapstick comedy of an old-fashioned vintage. That is to say it employs a number of decrepit tricks which were discarded by P. T. Barnum's comedians thirty years ago. It employs several other stunts of a more recent date but which may be listed as passe in this modern day. The dilapidated flivver furnishes most of the excitement and in its journey the wheels come off and fly back on again. Ditto doors. Ditto everything else connected with it. There is some "business" which is depicted at a garage. And this calls for tricks with gasolene and what not.

It is roughhouse action that is revealed here and no mistake. In his efforts to make a fully matured slapstick the director has surpassed himself. It has its humorous spots. In saying this we must admit it has some sad ones too. There's your balance. "The Heart Snatcher" strikes below the average of the usual Sunshine. It doesn't contain an exaggerated idea but an exaggerated amount of trick stunts. And the machinery is creaking in turning them out. The funmakers are the dependable Harry Booker, the personable Marvel Rea, and the hardworking Jack Cooper. Roy Del Ruth is the charge d'affairs.—LAURENCE REID.

EDITOR'S NOTE—Exhibitors will find here a complete list of all feature pictures for last nineteen weeks arranged alphabetically as index to The Complete Plan Book for this period, naming the picture, the producer, the star, the release date, and designating the issue MOTION PICTURE NEWS which contained the original review.

The following also contains our reviewer's opinion encompassed in a brief single line and gives the comments of exhibitors who hav shown the picture and forwarded their opinions. And we also publish a final line fairly summarizing a consensus of all opinions received each picture. As many of the exhibitors do not comment on every picture (merely checking it Big, Average or Poor), we arrive at consensus not only by the actual comments made and published, but are also guided by the reports from exhibitors who have made no actu comments, but have merely checked the box office value of the picture.

All the pictures mentioned are five-reel features, unless marked otherwise. Serials are reviewed also. At the conclusion of this department will be found the "Flash-Backs," being comments on films released prior to October 11, 1919.

"ON WITH THE DANCE"

(PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT)

Mae Murray Has a Fascinating Picture Here

THE stereotyped idea of the moth who soars too closely to the flame and finds her wings scorched as a result has been given excellent expression by Mae Murray, Ouida Bergere and orge Fitzmaurice, the star, the scenarist, and the director, respectively, of "On With the Dance." You forget the platitudes brought o in the subtitles and the forced attempt to establish the moral. You forget that this subject has been done before—so artistically is it conceived and executed. Michael Morton's plot revolves around a domestic quadrangle theme. Mismated couples, a murder and divorce proceedings figure exclusively in the action and the thought is well expressed that those who dance must pay the piper.

One may figure that it is all quite theatrical and that the characters are incapable of arousing sympathy in the crisis of their lives, but so easily, so surely, so vividly do the highlights develop that one may dismiss the attempt to be analytical. Granted that the picture carries a wealth of dramatic conflict the point which will be remembered above all is the extravagant background. New York night life and the spirit conveyed in the title are admirably brought out. In fact there is a tone—a quality about the achievement that lift it far above the average offering.

Miss Murray is adaptable to the role she creates here and if certain of her scenes are highly colored, nevertheless they have their place. Aside from a tendency to be unduly girlish in the earlier reels her performance is entirely acceptable. David Powell is effective in his quiet way. The most consistent character is played by Robert Schable—and excellently done. John Miltern and Alma Tell add to the entertainment.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

Mae Murray as "Sonia," in the Paramount-Artcraft special production, "On With the Dance"

Suffice to say that Manager ——— considers it one of the strongest features that ever played the ———. It unfolds tense situations and scenes of New York night life and is acted by an exceptional company.

SUGGESTIONS

Here is a picture which you can feature in a striking advertising campaign through the use of catch lines, teasers and 24 sheets. Exploit the picture as a strong drama based upon a domestic misunderstanding and tell that it offers the star an ideal role as a dancer. Since Miss Murray used to follow this profession it would be a good plan to say something about it in your copy. Also use a plentiful supply of stills. The star makes a striking picture in her dancing costume. Bring out that the offering is an adaptation of Michael Morton's play of the same name and scenarioized by Ouida Bergere. Mention the director and the other players. They are all well known. It is a picture which you can exploit with colored posters framed around the central character, the dancer.

"THE HELL SHIP"

(FOX)

Interesting Moments in This Colorful Sea Story

HAVING profited by George Walsh's picture of the sea, Fox comes forward with a similar offering for Madlaine Traverse—an offering which may be put down as rich entertainment so graphic are its dramatic contents. There will be those who will condemn it for following a single groove and be shocked with the characterization, to say nothing of the plot. But it is entitled to recognition if for no other reason than it gets out of the beaten track. Most of the action transpires on board a schooner which is manned by a crew of the most primitive type imaginable. The captain is a young woman who assumes charge when her father is killed in a mutiny.

The interest of the forceful tale is maintained in her battle to keep the men subdued. And it is a battle royal—make no mistake about it. What of the romance? It develops when the fair skipper rescues a man from the waves and to point the conflict her sister is taken on board. The latter's entrance into the story is not entirely logical, though she is useful in giving weight to the drama. It is picturesque, the action which transpires on this pirate ship, and a considerable portion of it is taken up with gun play and incidents of brutality.

There are no moments of sweetness and light, and were they incorporated the picture would not be convincing nor consistent. It fails to hit the truth in some respect, even as it stands, and the story could end at the halfway mark if the director wanted to obey the laws of romance. But he has heard the call of action. A vigorous story? Indeed. One with a sustained punch throughout. The subject carries corking good atmosphere and is exceptionally well interpreted.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

What is said to be an unusually realistic sea picture will be shown at the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week under the title of "The Hell Ship," with Madlaine Traverse as the star, supported by a cast which includes such capable players as Albert Roscoe, Betty Bouton, Dick Reno, Jack Curtis and others. The picture may be defined as a tense, human drama that is as gripping as it is appealing. The star portrays the character of a woman who has known no life other than that aboard ship, and whose whole training has been given to her by a brutish father. The entire action of the play takes place on a schooner carrying contraband cargo and the incidents depict primitive types of humanity winning their way by might.

The girl, Paula Humphrey, becomes captain after the death of her father, and the action revolves around her attempts to subdue a mutinous crew. Events might have become tragic but for the aid of the first mate, John Madlock, a man she rescued from the sea. He it is who takes up the fair captain's burden when she is not on duty. The ship is bound for the South Sea Islands and it is the intention of Paula to give up the life when port is reached. When the "hell ship" is on the briny deep, it catches fire through the carelessness of the crew and the captain, the sister, and the first mate whom both have grown to love, are forced to take to a raft. Paula would sacrifice herself when she believes that John does not love her. But he responds in the end and the little party are rescued by a passing steamer.

PROGRAM READER

An unusually realistic picture of the sea will come to this theatre next ——— under the title of "The Hell Ship," with Madlaine Traverse, the Fox emotional actress, as the star. This is one of the strongest features that has ever played the ———. The entire action takes place aboard a ship which carries a crew of the most primitive types imaginable. The captain is a young woman who has never known what an education means. She has been brought up by a brutish father who leaves her the ship when he dies. You will see a graphic depiction of her battle with a mutinous crew. You will look upon a fascinating romance that is developed between the fair captain and a man she rescued from the sea. You will see tense, live situations unfolded. You will look upon wonderful photography. You will look upon a seawoman endowed with the will of a man and the heart of a girl. Remember next———.

Scene from "The Hell Ship," the Fox feature reviewed on this page

SUGGESTIONS

Make no mistake about advising your patrons that here is a picture which they will long remember. Mention that the entire action takes place on a schooner and that it presents a woman who is forced to act like a man but who has the heart of a girl. She is confronted with the task of subduing a mutinous crew. Mention that the picture is a tale of adventure that is as picturesque as it is dramatic. Use stills. They will arouse interest since they show the incidents aboard ship. Use catch lines in the shape of questions. Tell that it is the type of story which brought fame and fortune to Jack London. You might suggest atmosphere if you decorate your lobby in a schooner's paraphernalia such as rigging, sails, a pilot's wheel, etc. Your ushers can be dressed in sailor's garb.

CATCH LINES

See "The Hell Ship," a picture of the briny deep and the struggle of a woman captain to subdue a mutinous crew. A picture alive with tense situations. A picture of adventure, romance and atmosphere.

Would you be willing to sail on a schooner with a crew of brutal men? How about it, girls? What would you do to keep them in submission? She was a captain of a "hell ship" and every hour brought terror to her until— See "The Hell Ship."

"SEEING IT THROUGH"

(BRENTWOOD-ROBERTSON COLE)

Heart Interest Story Carries Bewildering Detail

THE first requisite in making a photoplay is to sustain the idea behind it. This is a necessity particularly when it embodies as its chief ingredient the note of heart interest. Simplicity should be the guiding factor with such material inasmuch as any attempt at sounding dramatic moments tends to confuse the issue. The trouble with "Seeing It Through" is the exaggeration of the idea that its appeal is lost in the bewildering display of dramatic incidents. The picture introduces its plot and characterization clearly enough but soon wanders off on a tangent with the result that there is no story at all.

he idea attempts to establish the moral of stick-to-itiveness but in bringing it out the director, who is also the author, has disturbed the action to such an extent that it presents a deal of bewildering detail. The dramatic moments are labored and therefore lose their meaning and the humorous incidents are quite out of harmony with the theme. The reason may be found in their over-emphasis.

he story relates a young girl's battle with a loan shark in saving the old homestead and before the events are satisfactorily straightened out, the spectator is in for much mysterious action of an exceedingly arbitrary kind. The romantic element is mostly negligible because of the undue stress laid upon the superfluous dramatic incidents. Zazu Pitts has been lifted to stellar position for the occasion but she has small opportunity to display her gift of characterization.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

SUGGESTIONS

Here is a picture which offers a new star. Not new in the sense of her screen experience, but new in the fact that it offers her a featured position. Make much of her personality—that she is one of the best character actresses on the screen. Make use of the title, but be sure to tell that it isn't a war picture. Bring out that the story offers a human slice of life—that it tells of an impoverished family which is forced to give up a home. Bring out that the daughter attempts to find a way out of their difficulties and succeeds eventually. Accentuate the heart interest in all your copy and use catch lines and teasers to the effect that the picture is rich in sympathy and sentiment. Mention that the able actor, Edwin Stevens, appears in the cast and also Hughie Mack, who used to be a star in comedies. Your patrons will undoubtedly remember him.

CATCH LINES

She abided her time to rescue her mother and herself from straitened circumstances. She fell into the clutches of a loan shark, but she saw her amtion through. See "Seeing it Through."

Zazu Pitts, the wistful star, will appear at this theatre next ——— in "Seeing it Through," a picture of romance, sentiment and heart interest. A picture which will tug at your heart and make you feel glad at the same time.

too has its place among the ingredients and this note is well capitalized by the secretary, Bolter, and the Tweeny family, tenants of the girl's home. Miss Pitts plays her part with charming wistfulness and brings out the pathos admirably. She is supported by Henry Woodward, Edwin Stevens, Hughie Mack, and others.

PROGRAM READER

A photoplay of exceptional heart appeal is "Seeing it Through," the Brentwood offering, which comes to this theatre in the near future with Zazu Pitts as the featured player. All those who see it will respond to the wistful character, who, with her mother, is forced to give up their modest home through straitened circumstances. The girl, in her attempt to find a way out of their difficulties discovers herself in the power of a loan shark—a man who stops at nothing to gain possession of her property. Then one day something happened! What was it? Well, we can't tell you the facts in the case, but rest assured that goodness comes from evil. A picture of heart interest and charming sentiment is "Seeit through."

"THE LITTLE SHEPHERD OF KINGDOM COME"

(GOLDWYN)

Civil War Period Popular Novel Given Fine Production

THE descriptive incident of John Fox's novel of the same name, visualized with intelligence by a fine cast of actors who fit the characters to be portrayed, coupled with the selection of some wonderful scenic locations used for backgrounds is responsible for a picture that is worthy of commendation, even if there is nothing new in the plot and in spite of the fact the story is convincing and full of coincidence.

There are times when the picture lags, but this is practically unavoidable since an unusually large cast must be introduced, and because there, is practically no suspense obtained until well toward the end of the picture, when the Civil War episode is reached.

Jack Pickford as "Chad" is a fine type for the earlier sequences, but fails to impress to any great extent, as a Union officer, unless one is to remember that the military of the Civil War really wasn't so much. For acting honors we really think wistful eyed Pauline Starke as "Melissa" and Clark Marshall as "Harry Dean" are entitled to first place. Clara Horton makes a very winsome heroine of the "clinging vine" type and the rest of a long list of players have been carefully selected. The photography is of the best and in the costuming, and attention to detail nothing has been left undone. The popularity of the novel, the faithfulness of the manner it has been adapted and the vogue of Civil War stories will all combine in giving this picture more than passing interest.—Length, 6 reels. —J. S. Dickerson.

Directed by Wallace Worsley.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

John Fox, Jr.'s most popular novel, "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," has been made into a photoplay by Goldwyn with Jack Pickford in the role of "Chad Buford," around whom the dramatic incident of the story is gathered. This picture, which is proving to be one of the hits of the year, comes to the ——— theatre for a ——— days' engagement beginning ———.

The story of the little waif of the Cumberland mountains who finally is adopted into the home of his "Bluegrass" and aristocratic relative is one which has thrilled and entertained millions of readers. The picture version is true to the text of the book and all of the well defined characters of the Fox story have been visualized. "Melissy," "Margaret," whom Chad finally marries after the Civil War differences have been forgotten, and the other lovable people of the story are all in the photoplay version. In the role of "Chad," Jack Pickford is especially well cast. Wistful eyed Pauline Starke has the role of "Melissa" and Clara Horton is "Margaret." The production is one of the best of the year in its attention to detail and the Civil War episodes are exceptional.

PROGRAM READER

Once in a long while a picture is released that every exhibitor wants to play because he knows that every patron of his theatre, and a lot of people who seldom go to the picture show will be sure to want to see it. Such a feature is "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," adapted from the novel by John Fox, Jr., with Jack Pickford in the leading role, which comes to the ———, beginning ———. Even the uninitiated will readily see that this great novel was ideal material for the photoplay because of its wealth of dramatic situations and the unusual amount of descriptive incident. Wallace Worsley, who directed the production for Goldwyn release has succeeded in bringing Mr. Fox's great story to the screen practically in its entirety. No liberties have been taken with the plot, something which often spoils many a good book picture in the minds of an audience. All the unusual characters of the story are in the picture with a most wonderful realism. Jack Pickford has one of the most likeable roles of his career. Pauline Stark is the unfortunate little "Melissy" who loves "Chad" so well that she is willing to give him up to her "Bluegrass" rival, "Margaret," a role played by Clara Horton.

Jack Pickford and Pauline Stark in the Goldwyn feature, "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come"

It is a very sweet story, just the kind that pleases all classes and all ages. Make your plans now to see this picture, keeping in mind that the engagement is ———.

SUGGESTIONS

The popularity of the novel from which the picture is adapted is the first consideration in billing this picture, with the star next, with mention of Pauline Stark and Clara Horton. Mention should be made in your advertising of the other Fox novels which have been successful in pictures, notably "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," in which Charlotte Walker was starred.

As is the case of every picture adapted from a popular novel, the opportunity to tie up with book stores for window displays is limited only by the number of stores which sell books. Advice from exhibitors who go in for this form of exploitation is that the department store is the best and most satisfactory medium. As for stunt stuff, we would suggest the use of a young man to impersonate the "Chad" of the story to walk about the street. He should be costumed in the coon skin cap and other regalia of the mountaineer and carry his long barrelled, muzzle loading rifle. If we were to use this idea we would spring it blind well before the showing of the picture and let people accept the young chap as the real thing. The Civil War episode suggests chances of tieing up with the G. A. R. and of using window and lobby display in which the Federal and Confederate uniforms figure.

"THE RIVER'S END"

Rich Production Given Vivid Northwest Story

MARSHALL NEILAN'S first independent production, "The River's End," looms up as a very satisfying offering. In fact the producer has revealed the artistry of his "Daddy ong Legs" and "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," so much of his vn personality has he incorporated into the work. The subject is r removed in plot and characterization from these offerings and es to prove that Mr. Neilan is equally at home in melodrama as tales of heart interest and sentiment. To sum up the achieveent we would say that there isn't a flaw in the production.

The vitality and vividness of this story of the Northwest and the ounted Police are brought out emphatically and these factors are alized through a thread of mystery, colorful characterization, a leasant vein of romance and some of the most picturesque phograpby that has ever been flashed on the screen. The double posure work is highly commendable and so admirably conceived at even an expert cannot detect it. Mr. Neilan has covered well e flaws of the story. One overlooks the unreality of the dual le. In fact it appears actually lifelike, so genuine is the interpretion of Mr. Stone and his guidance by the director.

The formula is an overworked one on the screen, but it is brought rward with such a wealth of incident and detail that the obviousess is eliminated. Space forbids detailing the plot, but rest assured at love and hate, intrigue and conflict, romance and sentiment e fully established. The continuity is clear and the action carries quota of suspense. Mr. Stone's graphic portrayal is a delight. ne Novak, Marjorie Daw, Barney Sherry and Yami Mata are thers who lend vitality to the picture.—Length, 6 reels.—Released rough First National.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Marshall Neilan's production of James liver Curwood's story of the Northwest d the Mounted Police, "The River's nd," will be shown at the ——— theatre ginning ——— This is a vivid and vital le told in the author's best style and it is usually strong in the elements of advenre, conflict and romance. Mr. Neilan s given it a production which brings out its points of interest. The interpretan has been intrusted to the capable ewis Stone, Jane Novak, Marjorie Daw, Barney Sherry and others. The story revlves around Derwent Conniston of the orthwest Mounted Police, who is commisoned to capture John Keith, wanted in dmonton for murder. In taking the acsed man back to civilization he succumbs illness. Keith, instead of taking advange of his opportunity to escape, elects to ay and help the sick man. So a warm endship springs up between the two men. Realizing that death is approaching, Conston, now convinced of Keith's innocence, rects the latter to return to headquarters personating him. When he reaches camp discovers that the commanding officer is love with the daughter of the murdered an. Complications ensue when a Chinaan would intrigue the girl to marry him, t Keith puts an end to his scheme. Evenally he leaves to find peace and comfort the end of the Saskatchewan, and Connisn's sister, Mary Josephine, who has come est to find her brother, learns that she ves the masquerader. She makes her way the river's end ahead of Keith and upon s arrival their happiness is made complete. e action of the story is dramatic throught and the theme is an entirely appealing e Manager ——— takes great pleasure in nouncing the appearance of the Marshall eilan production, "The River's End," at e ——— theatre next ———. This is an laptation of James Oliver Curwood's story the same name and it deals with a memr of the Northwest Mounted Police and a an who masquerades in the uniform of the ficer. It is one of the most vital and vivid les of the Northwest that has ever been ritten, and, adapted to the screen, its vility and vividness are excellently emphazed. It is a story which embodies fast moving action which is told in scenes of powerful sequence. And punctuating it is a fascinating romance. We feel sure that your attendance at this photoplay will be compensated in the wealth of action and suspense. The picture is played by a cast that includes Lewis Stone, Jane Novak, Marjorie Daw and others.

Melodrama is the keynote of Marshall Neilan's "The River's End," to be distributed by First National

SUGGESTIONS

Here is a Marshall Neilan production. So it would be well to bring his name into prominence in all your advertising. What of the author? Surely your patrons are familiar with his works. So give him good space in your copy. Tell that in "The River's End" he has fashioned one of the cleverest stories of the Northwest ever conceived. Tell that it is a powerfully dramatic tale of the Northwest Mounted Police and that it unfolds action of the swiftest kind. Feature it as a romance of adventure. Bill it as a love story of the Northwest—of a country where only the most fitting survive. Play up the fact that the author wrote "Back to God's Country." Tell that Lewis Stone, Jane Novak and Marjorie Daw appear in the cast. Your patrons are familiar with their names. And use stills and dress your lobby accordingly to suggest the atmosphere. Your artist can employ a good colorful background for posters in featuring the hero.

"SHOD WITH FIRE"

(FOX)

William Russell Has Fairly Interesting Offering

THIS Western picture is quite removed from the star's other recent releases in that it depends almost entirely upon its romantic element for success. Action, the vital ingredient of Mr. Russell's screen essays, is not so dominant here and only makes a belated appearance at the climax. The theme comes very close to the domestic triangle patterns since it presents the husband, the wife and the lover. But it is different in the sense that the latter does not usurp the former's place in the affections of the woman through any desire of his own. Rather does he go out of his way to make the lives of the mismated couple completely harmonious. And for the purposes of the story he is unsuccessful.

"Shod With Fire" is about the most sentimental photoplay that the star ever had. Naturally he has a most sympathetic role. After witnessing him in some fast moving pieces which embodied plentiful thrills and a sustaining note of mystery, it is somewhat of a letdown to find him in such stereotyped subjects as his latest offering. The highlights of this picture are contained in the denouement when pistols are flashed and bullets speed home and in the work of a highly intelligent horse.

The finale reveals the villainous husband out of the way, though his wife turns to the hero too quickly after his death to make her action truthful. The action is easy to anticipate and those who look for a bang-up Western are sure to be disappointed. However its romance, atmosphere and simple heroics will suffice to please the average picturegoer. Helen Ferguson is the woman in the case and Robert Cain, the villain.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

Ann Lytton	Helen Ferguson
Nora Brewster	Betty Schade
Ned Lytton	Robert Cain
Benny Lynch	George Stewart
The parson	Nelson McDowell
Tommy Clary	Jack Connolly

By Harold Titus.
Scenario by J. Anthony Roach.
Directed by Emmett J. Flynn.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Shod With Fire," a romantic love story of the West, presented by William Fox, starring William Russell, will open an engagement at the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week. In this tale of life on the plain it is said, the star surpasses himself in forceful acting and daring horsemanship. The story is an adaptation of Harold Titus' "Bruce of Circle A," the scenario being done by J. Anthony Roach. Emmett J. Flynn is the director. The play treats of a woman's brave fight for the regeneration of a worthless husband and of the unselfish devotion of a brave man. Bruce Bayard, a ranchman, takes Ned Lytton to his home to regenerate him for the sake of his wife, Ann.

Ned, incidentally, is a drunkard and it is Bruce's object to make a man of him. Everything is working out for the best when the patient suspects the ranchman of being his wife's lover. And to punish her he takes her to his mine—a mine which he has stolen from Benny Lynch's father. Bruce has warned Ann not to allow her husband to go near it for Benny is vengeful. But when he returns to the ranch he discovers that the Lyttons have gone. He follows in pursuit too late, however, to save the life of Ned who is killed by Lynch. And Ann turns to the ranchman for solace. This story is one of intensely dramatic interest, and reveals a variety of absorbing situations. It is said to be one of the most wholesome and appealing pictures in which Mr. Russell has ever appeared. The star is assisted by Helen Ferguson, Betty Schade, Robert Cain, George Stewart and others.

PROGRAM READER

Here is a William Russell picture. And you know what that means. First of all let us remind you that the star is a universal favorite everywhere—that he stands a symbol of the West—a daring, resourceful and capable actor. His latest photoplay is "Shod With Fire," written by Harold Titus and inspired by Bayard Taylor's poem, "Bedouin Love Song." It is a wholesome, appealing, and dramatic subject this "Shod With Fire." It presents the wild, free life of the plains and is alive with action and tense situations. You will see the picture of a wife who attempts to reclaim her husband and who is aided by a man who faces danger and death because of his love for her. A stallion "shod with fire" plays an important part in the drama and Mr. Russell again shows his ability. A delightful vein of comedy is woven into the story—a story which appeals to people of all ages. At this theatre soon.

SUGGESTIONS

Exploit this picture as a love song of the plains. Bring out that it is one of the most wholesome and appealing stories that William Russell ever interpreted. You can use Bayard Taylor's poem, "Bedouin Love Song" about a stallion "shod with fire" for teasers. This can be obtained at the Fox exchanges where it is incorporated in the press sheets. Tell that it is a fast-moving picture of Western life—that it is romantic and dramatic. Play up the title. It is attractive. Use posters in all your advertising. If you want to go in for atmosphere you can employ a good rider attired in cowboy costume and have him ride through the principal streets. Make sure that he has a fast horse. And feature this stunt. Bring out that the rider is on a horse "shod with fire" You can have a reader recite the Taylor poem too. Use him in a prologue.

CATCH LINES

A romantic love story of the plains. That is "Shod with Fire," the William Russell picture which comes to the ——— next ———. A great offering. Don't miss it.

Do you love horses? Do you love the wild, free life of the plains? If so you will be interested in a swiftly moving photoplay. See "Shod With Fire" with William Russell as the star.

He loved the wife of another man but his sincerity led him to regenerate her husband. What happened? See "Shod With Fire." William Russell is the star.

CATCH LINES

Brother Against Brother—Father Against Son—that was what the Civil War meant to the people of Kentucky.

Chad was a "wood's colt," so the mountaineers said—but the Civil War wiped out the great barrier of caste and he won the girl of his choice even if she was descended from blue blood Kentuckians.

"I've got to be a man now," said "Chad," and then with his long barrelled rifle he ran away and became the "Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come."

"BURNT WINGS"

(UNIVERSAL)

A Good Average Picture Which Will Interest

UST an ordinary program feature. That's all we can say of this one. It has its love interest and dramatic moments which are strong enough to carry it through and not allow your au- nce to become tired or bored before it is finished.

he story, which is from the pen of Bayard Veiller, who became ous some years ago, when he wrote "Within the Law" is taken n his play "The Primrose Path" and is rather interesting but re is nothing gripping to it. It is one of those stories which in ureland might be termed "Just an ordinary affair."

he cast which is headed by Frank Mayo, Josephine Hill and ty Blythe is up to standard and mention must be made of lolph Christians, who did some good character work in the role ames Cartwright. Photography, direction and sets are of the al variety for a picture of this type.

pretty country girl elopes and marries a young artist and is liv- with him in Paris when circumstances, due to her husband's ess, compel her to seek money upon the streets. She obtains money from a rich man, who, when the scenes are shifted to country becomes involved in a plot to separate husband and , in order that his daughter, who is infatuated with the artist become his wife. He is not successful in his schemes, however, the young husband hearing of his wife's sacrifice, decides in her r, thus giving up wealth for the duty he owes her.—Length, 5 s.—Frank Leonard.

or seizes hold of her at the thought, desperation she is finally driven to the where she meets a rich man, from she receives enough money to nurse Ned back to life. Her husband does not know from what source the money came, believing his wife had secured it from her father.

Ned, now being able to return to work, does so, meets with some measure of success, and returns to America. His work in this country attracts the attention of a wealthy art collector, who engages the young artist to paint his portrait at the suggestion of his daughter, who has been very much impressed by Ned.

She falls in love with the young artist and her father, anxious to gratify his daughter's wishes, and desiring to have Ned as a future son-in-law, causes an estrangement between the married couple.

Success now comes to Ned through the patronage of the wealthy art collector, through whose machinations Ned and his wife have drifted apart, each believing the other has ceased to care.

To bring matters to a final issue, Cartwright, the wealthy art collector, goes to Joan, who is having difficulty in making her living as a model, and offers her money to give up her husband to his daughter. She spurns the offer, and the husband, learning of her sacrifice, decides to give up his wealthy admirer for the woman it is his duty to protect.

SUGGESTIONS

A good exploitation angle on this feature would be to play up the name of Bayard Vieller, who is the author of the story, which is taken from his play, "The Primrose Path." A few years ago Mr. Vieller became very popular with theatre-goers by writing "Within the Law."

The Man Without a Tongue

By Chas. Felton Pidgin

Character of Story: Detective story.
Theme: Black Hand.
Characters: Quincy Adams Sawyer, Detective; Gates, Police Inspector; Pietro Escalio, the man without a tongue; Florence Armstrong, Sawyer's assistant; Francisco Staganaro, Italian merchant; Le Loup, the leader of the Black Hand; police, bandits, etc.

The Plot: As Sawyer is deploring the lack of active business in his private detective agency, Gates, police inspector and Sawyer's friend, arrives with an Italian wrapped in a long cloak. Sawyer and Gates question him without result. Gates says that he found the man on the street, apparently crazed with fear at the sight of another Italian with a hand-organ and a monkey and he believes that this man, now in custody, may know something of the Mafia which has been terrorizing the Italian colony. Investigation discloses the fact that the man, Escalio, has neither hands nor tongue but can trace his name by means of a pencil fastened to his wrist by Sawyer. While they are in conference Miss Armstrong looks up their records and finds that this man was in some way connected with a kidnapping case in which the father of the kidnapped child grew frightened and paid the ransom demanded and refused to give further evidence against the kidnappers after calling on the police for help. Another case of kidnapping is reported and Sawyer asks the dumb man if he will assist them in finding the lair of the Black Hand, correctly surmising that this man has been a victim of the vengeance of the blackmailers. Escalio, by signs, gives his assent. Miss Armstrong asks to be permitted to take an active part in the case but is told there will be too much danger in it and is instructed to take care of the office. Escalio leads Sawyer to the house of Le Loup, or "the wolf" as he is called, the leader of the band of criminals. Sawyer forces his way in, leaving word that if he does not reappear in an hour the police are to break in. He finds his way from a narrow passage into another where he is seized and brought into a square room with a big cage like a gigantic chicken coop in the center of the room. This cage is covered with a canvas. Le Loup greets Sawyer with the information that he is expected and asks him if he thought they would have permitted Escalio to betray them? He then declares that the purpose of the blackmailers is to maim the little daughter of Stagnaro, now in their hands, in such a way that it will be a warning to other parents who may think of calling on the police. He orders the cage uncovered and Sawyer sees that it contains a great ape. Le Loup explains that the method of silencing Escalio was to let the ape bite off his hands after which they removed his tongue so that he could not talk, write or speak with his fingers. Sawyer struggles to get at Le Loup, but is struck down from behind. He is then bound to the cage with his hands inside the bars for the ape to bite them off, but just as the brute approaches him a shot rings out from a hole in the wall of the room and in an opening appears the face of Escalio, who has a shot gun tied to one arm and the stump of the other arm thrust through a loop attached to the trigger. The ape is killed and Escalio threatens the others with his gun. Following this a band of police led by Florence Armstrong enter and rescue Sawyer, arresting the blackmailers. It then appears that she had found her way into the house and had so been able to guide the police to the spot which they could not otherwise have found.

The Key Without a Lock

By Chas. Felton Pidgin

Character of Story: Detective story.
Theme: Crime.
Characters: Quincy Adams Sawyer, detective; Gates, Police Inspector; Florence Armstrong, Sawyer's assistant; Captain Randall, football player; Peter Harrington, a master criminal; Coach Williams; Margaret Randall.

The Plot: Captain Randall, head of a football team in a neighboring college calls upon Quincy Adams Sawyer and tells him the story of a mysterious key which was entrusted to him by a cook on a farm in Minnesota, where he worked during a summer vacation. This old cook was a silent sort of man and told nothing of himself to anyone until he gave the key to Randall saying that he felt it no longer safe with him and that he feared it would fall into the hands of certain yellow men who were following him. The night after the key came into Randall's possession the cook was murdered with a Malay kris. Since Randall's return to college two Malays have been sent to the football team as trainers and while he has been unable to fasten suspicion upon them, his effects have been rifled several times. He does not know the significance of the key, which is covered with numbers and little squares; he does not know what lock it fits. He wishes Sawyer to solve the mystery for him. Sawyer learns that the Malays have been sent with expenses paid by Peter Harrington, an alumnus of the college and a man of wealth, whose income is somewhat mysterious. Sawyer accepts the case. The next day there comes to him Coach Williams, who tells him that in addition to having been assaulted with a sandbag, Randall has disappeared. Randall's wife has likewise disappeared. The detective is at a loss to know which way to turn when he receives a note from Randall stating that he has been kidnapped and that his captors desire the delivery of the mysterious key. The note, in giving directions as to the whereabouts of the key really tells the location of the house in which Randall is confined. Sawyer and Gates seek out the house and force their way in through a window on the lower floor. They find their way to an upper floor where they discover Randall a prisoner. Concealed, they listen to the leader of the kidnappers telling Randall that they will pay him $5,000 for the key and that if they do not get it they will torture his wife, Margaret, who has fallen into their hands. The leader also states that this key will lead them to the secret formula for a drink which contains a more powerful drug than any now known and that with this drug in their possession they will be on their way toward making millions of dollars by selling it to those who can profit by its peculiarly demoralizing effect upon morals. At the moment when the criminals are about to torture the women, Gates and Sawyer are attacked from the corridor by guards who have discovered them and shoot at them with Maxim silencers on their revolvers. He becomes interested in the city which springs up under the shadow of the town and when he is offered one hundred thousand dolars worth of stock and a position as engineer for the improvement company he accepts with the thought that this will enable him to pay off the load of debt which he has inherited. He is about to withdraw from this association when he finds that the boom will be the ruin of many innocent investors but refrains from doing this because Massingale, the father of the girl he loves, has been trapped by Cortwright and stands in danger of losing his mine through failure to meet his notes for one hundred thousand dollars. Brouillard cashes in on his stock and gives the money to Massingale to meet the notes. The latter is persuaded to extend his notes and gambles away the money. Then begins a struggle between Brouillard's conscience and his desire to safeguard the material welfare of the girl he loves. She urges him to live up to his ideals rather than to commit wrong for the sake of his love. He finally decides that her way is the better way and pricks the bubble of the boom, rushing the work to completion before the promoters can get Congress to put a stop to the reclamation project. Massingale gets back his mine and all ends well.

Locale: Southwest mountain country. Modern Western boom city.

Picture High Lights: This is a very dramatic story with plenty of action and many good situations. Would make a good feature and is in no way the hackneyed type of Western story.

Red Belts

By Hugh Pendexter

Character of Story: Romance.

Theme: Pioneer adventures.

Characters: Jack Sevier, leader of the white settlers; Kirk Jackson, forest ranger, in love with Elsie Tonpit; Major Tonpit, a white friend of Indian plotters; Elsie Tonpit, his daughter; Alexander McGillivray, half-breed chief of the Creek Indians, in league with Spain; Polcher, quarter-breed Cherokee and inn-keeper; Kate Sevier, Jack's wife; John Watts, a Chickamaugua chief; Old Tassel, a Cherokee chief; Red Hajason, an outlaw; Lon Hester, renegade settler.

The Plot: The story takes place in what was afterward Tennessee—the land beyond the Cumberland mountains which many of the Colonists thought would mark the Western boundary of the United States of America. This territory was sparsely settled and was disputed by the settlers and the Indians as well as claimed by the Spaniards, who sought to employ the Indians for the purpose of driving out the Americans. McGillivray, son of a Scotch father and Indian mother, educated, polished, living in a civilized fashion among his Indians, with many thousands of Indian warriors at his command, was ambitious to become the emperor of this vast stretch of territory lying west of the mountains. He meant to make use of the Spaniards in wiping out the Americans and afterward to turn out the Spaniards as well. One of his tools was Polcher and another was Major Tonpit, who was convinced that the Spaniards would some day dominate this part of the country. This story concerns the adventures of Sevier in combatting this plot. A messenger of the Indians is killed by a mad white settler and much ado is made over this; McGillivray making capital of this attempt to induce Old Tassel to go to war with his three thousand warriors. Tonpit and his daughter are on their way to visit McGillivray when they are captured by Red Hajason and Jackson, thinking that the girl is held captive by the Indian chief, goes to the camp of the Indian Emperor and is locked up in jail. Sevier is captured by John Watts and is on the point of being killed, but is saved by the fact that the territory in which he is captured is sacred ground by Indian tradition, where no killing may take place. After a meeting with Old Tassel, he is allowed to go with a guide and goes straight to the camp of McGillivray, where he succeeds in liberating Jackson, but is himself made a prisoner. Polcher plans to murder Sevier, making it appear that he has been shot down while attempting to escape. He tries to shoot Sevier through the bars of the window, but is caught by the alert woodsman who has already sawed out two bars of the window and is hanged by a bed blanket until he is dead. Sevier escapes and gets his pistol to the side of McGillivray and forces him to aid in his escape, sending the Indians and bloodhounds in the wrong direction. He encounters Red Hajason, the outlaw, and kills him, liberating Major Tonpit and his daughter. They are met at last by Jackson with his rangers and are brought safely back to the settlements. Old Tassel decides that he will not join McGillivray in a war upon the whites and without the assistance of this chief McGillivray is not able to deliver to the Spanish the twenty thousand men he had promised in case of war, so that the project is eventually dropped by the Indians and Spaniards.

Character of Story: Drama.

Theme: Jealousy.

Characters: Howard Forster, a philanderer; Marion Forster, his wife; Cherry Mant, a flirt; Robert Mant, her brother; Mr. Thomas Sinclair; Mrs. Thomas Sinclair; Nigel Sinclair, their nephew, a young man; the Twelters.

The Plot: Howard Forster and Marion Forster have been married a matter of fifteen years and the wife has long ago learned that her husband is still a boy in matters of the heart and not to be trusted where women are concerned. As the most comfortable manner of living, she has accepted this situation and has for him something less than affection—something more in the nature of friendly toleration, so that there grows up between them a peculiar relation. Howard tells her more or less of his affairs and this she endures with more equanimity than most women could. It is not that he has ceased to care for her, for he, in his way, is devoted enough although he neglects her when a new face appears. At the time of the opening of the story he has fallen in love with Cherry Mant, a young girl of their acquaintance. Mrs. Forster suspects this but is not certain of the identity of the girl in the case until the Mants come to spend a week end with them, when she notices that Cherry is much interested in Howard. She also observes that Howard makes use of a joking name for a certain brand of cigarettes, "Tetotum" calling them "Twotoed Twins." This, she correctly surmises, is a nickname invented by Cherry. Without taking any active steps to discourage the affair Marion so manages things that nobody knows that she is aware of what is going on except Cherry who takes a malicious delight in letting Marion see that Howard is fascinated. Marion has been particularly good to Cherry. Cherry is not one of the sort who risks all for imagined love, but the kind of girl who cares nothing for the mischief she may do through heedlessness and through her own selfish desire to secure admiration from every man she meets. While this affair is progressing a young man named Nigel Sinclair comes on the scene. He is several years younger than Marion but soon is deeply interested in her. He sees in her those qualities which her husband does not appreciate and he becomes a frequent visitor at their house. Gradually Marion finds that there is awakening in her the same sort of feeling for Nigel that she had many years ago for her husband and she attempts to send him away. At last he can no longer refrain from telling her of his sentiment and she confesses that she is also interested in him but firmly declines to run away with him, being much too sensible to believe that happiness lies that way. In London Nigel also meets Cherry and talks with her of Marion. Jealous of his praises of Marion Cherry proceeds to practice her arts on him and succeeds in winning him away from Marion. Cherry and Nigel are married and Howard, who has recently become furiously jealous of Nigel, is much relieved that his wife has been spared him.

In the Shadow of the Hills

By George C. Shedd

Character of Story: Western.

Theme: A fight against odds.

Characters: Steele Weir, chief of construction; Magrey, chief engineer; Dr. Hosmer; Janet Hosmer, his daughter; Martinez, a lawyer; Vorse, Sorenson, Burkhardt and Judge Gordon, cattlemen and stockholders of the San Mateo Cattle Company; Ed. Sorenson, son of Sorenson; Mary Johnson; Johnson, her father.

The Plot: Steele Weir is put in charge of the construction work of an irrigation project. Upon looking over the job and consulting with the chief engineer, he comes to the conclusion that the men must do more work and issues orders to that effect. The men walk out. Weir sends for more men. Sorenson and his associates in the cattle business are opposed to the building of the dam and are also a little afraid of Weir because thirty years before they had not only cheated his father but also made him believe that he was guilty of a murder which they committed. These men have the political power of the town and county in their hands. Weir becomes acquainted with Janet Hosmer and learns that she is engaged to Ed. Sorenson, son of the cattleman. Weir overhears young Sorenson trying to lure a girl, Mary Johnson, to Los Angeles, under promise of marriage. He interferes and beats Sorenson. Johnson swears vengeance on Sorenson. As Weir is leaving the office of Martinez where he has had some papers drawn and witnessed, he is fired at by a Mexican and fires in return killing his assailant. Sorenson and his crowd conspire to have him arrested on a charge of murder, pretend that he has attempted to break jail and shoot him down. The "rescuers" are to be men in their own pay. At the same time it is planned that fifty Mexicans from over the border shall blow up the dam. Sorenson, jealous of Weir, scolds Janet for going with him and inadvertently mentions Mary Johnson. From the Johnsons Janet learns the truth about Ed. Sorenson and breaks her engagement. Sorenson abducts Janet. Weir hears of this and overtakes him at camp. Young Sorenson escapes but meets with an accident which causes his death. Martinez has secured evidence of fraud upon the part of the cattlemen in the deal with Weir's father and Johnson proves to be a witness of the murder committed many years before by the conspirators. These facts being laid before the sheriff, he does not arrest Weir but arrests Vorse and Burkhardt. Gordon commits suicide. Weir kills Vorse in the latter's saloon helping to arrest him. Sorenson senior is thrown in jail. The men who have been made to make trouble by Sorenson, now return to work. Steele Weir marries Janet.

His Dear Unintended

By J. Breckenridge Ellis

Character of Story: Drama.

Theme: Love.

Characters: Stick Attum, blacksmith; William Attum, his son; The Unintended alias The Boy Desperado; Dhalia Gleason; Taggert Gleason, her husband; Lane Laclede; Adelaide Hightower, called "Laidie," the Intended; Giles Flitterfled, the desperado.

The Plot: Young William, son of the village blacksmith at Missouriville, is engaged to marry Adelaide Hightower—an arrangement of many years standing and one apparently satisfactory to both of them although she is several years older than he is. Suddenly out of the mysterious world beyond there appears a young woman calling herself Miss Cereus and giving no account of her past. This young woman who has applied for a position as teacher and when questioned by William as to her real name says that she is as different as can be from his Intended so she might well be called his Unintended. Taggert Gleason, a drunkard who is cruel to his wife, has framed a scheme for beating the farmers out of the hard-earned money and succeeds in getting together a large sum of money wrung from the innocent countrymen on a wild cat scheme. He is jealous of his wife because he suspects the truth, that she is in love with Lane Laclede and he with her, but he does not suspect that this is an innocent love which would not consider stooping to anything which would justify that jealousy. Gleason is beating his wife when drunk and Laclede interferes, whereupon Gleason attacks Laclede who kills him in self-defense. This makes a bar between the two who love one another but who cannot marry with the knowledge that Laclede was responsible for the death of her first husband. She fears that marriage with Laclede would lead to the suspicion that she conspired with him to bring about Gleason's death. Young William has been growing more and more interested in the Unintended and at the same time his father has been falling in love with Adelaide though fighting against the impulse. Adelaide has also felt herself strongly drawn toward the father. Giles Flitterfled, the outlaw, enters the town and makes away with the money which was collected in the fraudulent scheme headed by Gleason. He is pursued and nearly captured but makes his escape with the assistance of a young outlaw known as "the boy desperado" who pretends that he has run away from home in a neighboring village, being inspired to the life of a robber by the notable exploits of the redoubtable Flitterfled. The boy is captured but persuades Stick Attum to let him go on his promise to indulge in no more outlawry. When the Boy Desperado brings a horse to a rendezvous for Giles Flitterfled, Stick Attum discovers that it is none other than the girl whom his son now finds more interesting than Adelaide—the Unintended. By this time Adelaide and William have come to the conclusion that they do not want to marry one another and William is sure that he does want to marry the Unintended. She confesses that she is the daughter of Flitterfled and that this was the reason for her mysterious behavior and for not giving her real name. As Flitterfled has disappeared and there is no further necessity of her playing Assistant Bandit, William and his father agree that this will not greatly interfere with William's career as a lawyer; for by her inspiration William has sought and obtained admission to the bar. William's father marries Adelaide and all ends well except for Laclede and Dhalia Gleason, but there is an intimation that some day she may change her mind.
